Delegates Vote Amid Tensions

(Times News Services)

QUEBEC — More than 5,000 activists from labor and extremist separatist groups marched today on the sessions in which Quebec's ruling Union Nationale Party is voting to choose a leader.

The march, culminating a series of firebombings, arsons and threats, has heightened the tension surrounding the race for leadership between pro-federalist interim premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand and his nationalistic education minister, Jean-Guy Cardinal.

Friday campaigning hit fever pitch with keynote speeches from all three candidates delivered to chanting, cheering delegates.

Those admitted to the convention floor were checked by security guards as a result of continued fears of violence.

FIGHTS FOLLOW TAUNTS

QUEBEC (CP — Pro-separatist Robert Charlebois, Quebec's temperamental No. 1 pop singer, stalked off the stage at Union Nationale party gathering early today crying, "Vive les Anglais!"

Fist fights broke out after he walked out on several hundred young supporters of Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal.

Charlebois, whose temper tantrums are legendary, began his electronic rock show by taunting the Cardinal campaigners gathered at Laval University:

"I haven't come here to sing for Jean-Guy Cardinal," he said. "Not at all; I may sing a bit for Rene Levesque."

Charlebois provoked the French-speaking audience by speaking English before and between the two popular songs he sang.

Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand said he is ready to propose a presidential system of government for Quebec in a referendum.

Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal called for strong, efficient and authoritative government for the province.

Andre Leveille, a member of the national assembly from Montreal-Maisonneuve, said confidence had to be restored in Quebec to end the impression in the rest of Canada that the province "is about to explode before them" at any time.

Thirty minutes after it was all over police received a telephone bomb threat and evacuated hundreds of straggling delegates, television and radio personnel and newspaper reporters from the 10,000-seat Quebec Coliseum.

There was no bomb and the arena was reopened by 11:33 p.m.

Premier Bertrand pledged to the delegates that if retained as party and government leader a presidential system of government in the province would be established "if the people want it."

KEY TO FUTURE

He has already said that referendum legislation will be brought before the national assembly this fall. In his convention address he did not detail how the presidential system would function in the Canadian context, but he made it a key point in his vision of "the new Quebec."

Mr. Bertrand's proposal was echoed immediately after by his education minister, last of the three candidates to speak and main challenger to Mr. Bertrand to become the successor to the late premier Daniel Johnson.

Mr. Bertrand, who celebrated his 53rd birthday Friday with the help of his placard-waving supporters, has been interim party leader since Mr. Johnson's death last September.

Mr. Cardinal, 44-year-old former law dean at the University of Montreal, drew a noisy burst of applause when he also told the delegates:

"We need to modernize Quebec's parliament."

He criticized the present sys-

RA SHOWS EGYPTIANS WENT FAR FROM NILE

... in good condition

CAIRO (AP) — Thor Heyerdahl, commander of the papyrus boat Ra, messaged the Egyptian minister of tourism, Mohamed Hafez Ghanem, today, telling him "Our voyage proved that ancient Egyptians travelled far from the Nile."

He told Ghanem: "Our boat crossed 2,000 kilometres (1,250 miles) in wild seas and this proves the ancient Egyptian boats could have sailed quite far from the Nile."

Heyerdahl told the minister his six-man crew is "in good condition." They left Safi, Morocco, May 26.

The Times carries reports direct from the Ra from time to time during the voyage.

BENNETT USES PGE AS LURE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Premier Bennett said Friday the provincially-owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway will not be extended into the Yukon unless the Yukon answers his call to join British Columbia.

His comment came after a federal transport department spokesman said in Ottawa that studies have been made of the feasibility of building a railway link into the Yukon from B.C.

The spokesman, who said results of the study are expected to be released in mid-July, said routes connecting with PGE tracks or Canadian National Railways lines are being studied.

•

The PGE has mapped out three possible routes to the Yukon but Bennett said no extension will be built while the Yukon remains a separate jurisdiction.

"We won't go beyond our provincial boundaries ever," said the premier, who has on several occasions offered to extend PGE service north if B.C.'s boundaries are extended into northern Canada.

A CNR route could go from Terrace on the CNR's Prince George - Prince Rupert line, the Ottawa spokesman said.

"That would be wonderful," said Bennett.

Rhodesia to Declare Republic by Nov. 11

By ANTHONY WHITE

SALISBURY (Reuters) — Premier Ian Smith indicated today Rhodesia might declare itself a republic Nov. 11, the fourth anniversary of its unilateral declaration of independence from Britain.

During a news conference today after a landslide government victory in a referendum on a new apartheid-style republican constitution, Smith was asked whether he actually would take the next step of declaring a republic.

"We've not decided yet," he replied.

But, when pressed on whether the date for such a declaration could be Nov. 11, he said: "I find it difficult to find anything wrong with that date."

Smith spoke as voting results by the white-dominated electorate were still coming from remote rural areas.

But the steamroller victory for Smith was long since certain. By early today he had won a 73 per cent "Yes" vote for his proposals for a new apartheid-style constitution for Rhodesia and a massive 81.6-per-cent vote in favor of the declaration of a republic.

Final results from 10 constituencies were likely to increase the margin, observers said.

Smith told the packed news conference he saw no prospect of renewed discussions with Britain before Rhodesia introduces its new republican constitution.

"I don't see this at all," he said. "The British minister responsible for Rhodesian affairs has said that if Rhodesia voted 'Yes' in the referendum, he would not speak to me again in his life.

"I'm not optimistic," he said. "They (the British) have put themselves in a corner that's very difficult to get out of."

Smith, smiling broadly and obviously delighted with what amounted to a tremendous personal triumph, told the news conference: "I was hoping for a strong majority as a message from Rhodesia for the outside world. I hope the message will have some effect on outside opinion."

But the prime minister was making no estimate about how soon a Rhodesian republic would win recognition from the rest of the world.

"It is difficult to say how long it will take before the message gets through," Smith said. "But it will be sooner than if we had sat in the middle and done nothing. Whether it is one year or five years—this is looking into the future."

The constitution provides that the country's 4,000,000 black Africans would forever remain politically subordinate to the 230,000 whites. It also provides to divide all the land in Rhodesia, with half going to the whites and half to the blacks.

It contains the structural framework for a legislature made up of a head of state, a senate and an assembly and provides for a gradual slow increase in the number of African members in the assembly—but never to the point where Africans would attain a majority.

Looking ahead to the government's next moves, Smith speculated on a possible general election by the end of the year.

$694,000 Target For United Appeal

The Greater Victoria United Appeal campaign this year is looking at a target of $694,000.

The figure, which is a six per cent increase over the 1968 goal of $655,000, was announced at a meeting of the Community Chest board of directors Friday.

Last year's appeal ended five per cent short of its objective, so reaching the objective this year will require Victorians to contribute an extra $74,000 to the campaign.

Campaign chairman Peter Darling said the 1969 goal was established after $150,000 had been trimmed off the original budget estimates of the agency.

It is now at a "level we think the public will meet," he said.

Darling pointed out the agencies "spend three dollars for every one picked up by the United Appeal."

Most agencies are getting close to the same amount this year as last, he said, with the exception of the Pearkes clinic for the handicapped which is getting a bigger allowance because it has just opened and needs money for initial operations.

Darling said the campaign objective, which volunteers will try to collect during September and October, could be reached three times over if everyone in the city contributed his fair share.

The fair share for a salaried person is an hour's pay per month. For a professional man, it is one per cent of earnings.

Darling said he is "optimistic" about reaching this year's goal.

Chlorine Gas Mishap Sends 12 to Hospital

VANCOUVER (CP)—A dozen persons were taken to hospital—and six remained for observation—after chlorine gas leaked Friday night from a one-ton cylinder that fell from a forklift.

The six-foot cylinder, being removed from a truck, fell into a safety net but carried the net into the water of Vancouver harbor. The top of the cylinder broke and fumes spread.

Four firemen, four dock workers and two ambulance drivers were overcome by fumes. So were a woman and her young son, who were driving through the waterfront area in a car.

Loopholes Found In Human Rights Act

The new Human Rights Act which Attorney-General Leslie Peterson says will remove the "last vestiges of discrimination in British Columbia" appears to have a few loopholes.

The Act, which went into effect Monday, does not apply to civil servants.

Peterson admitted it also does not apply in the hiring of domestic help. In other words, color can be specified when advertising for a cleaning lady.

It does not apply to social clubs who can bar members on a religious or racial basis.

"Some provisions do not apply," said Peterson.

He said Friday that civil servants are not covered by the act and that there was no need for them to be covered.

NO DISCRIMINATION

"There will be no discrimination of that sort as long as I'm here," he said.

"There are people of all races and creeds working in the civil service. The government will not tolerate discrimination."

Peterson said B.C. ferries require employees to be Canadian citizens or British subjects but argued that this was not discrimination against Italian, Irish and other nationalities.

He said citizenship was a common requirement for government personnel. "You have to be a Canadian citizen to be a member of Parliament," he pointed out.

The new Act consolidates and enlarges on three other acts and sets up a Human Rights Commission under director Jack Sherlock.

Made up of members of the Industrial Relations Board, the commission will hold a public meeting in at the Law Courts Victoria Aug. 19.

Border 'Gestapo Tactics' Against Deserters Lashed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver lawyer Friday accused Canadian immigration officers of using "Gestapo tactics" to stop U.S. army deserters from entering Canada.

John Taylor, former Conservative MP, said he has handled about a dozen cases in the last month in which, he said, actions by immigration officers' have conflicted with stated government policy on deserters.

Deserters are not being treated like any other persons seeking entry, as stated last month by Immigration Minister Allan MacEachen, complained Mr. Taylor.

'LESSENS RESPECT'

Mr. Taylor said he is convinced that Canadian immigration officials are assisting Washington in apprehending deserters.

"This Gestapo arrangement lessens respect for Canadian officials." Mr. Taylor cited the case of Paul Cunningham, 20, of Berkley, Calif., who was taken into custody June 8 at a U.S. immigration office at Eastport, Idaho, after being turned back by a Canadian immigration officer at Kingsgate, in southeastern British Columbia.

Cunningham said in an interview that the Canadian officer on duty June 8 told him his application for entry would have to be approved by a senior officer and therefore he would have to return to the American side of the border until the next morning.

TURNED BACK

Back on the U.S. side, he was asked why he had been turned back from Canada, Cunningham said, and when he denied that he had been turned back, a U.S. official told him: "We just got a call and they (the Canadian office) said you were turned back."

At this point, Cunningham said, he produced false identification papers identifying him as a youth named Eddington, and American who, at the age of seven, was granted landed immigrant status.

TOURIST

He said he apparently convinced U.S. officials he was Eddington because they did not charge him with any offence. He was told to report to the sheriff's office in Bonner's Ferry, Idaho, but did not do so.

He said that three days later he entered Canada—as a tourist—at Blaine, Wash., 30 miles south of Vancouver.

Lyall Hawkins, regional director of immigration in Vancouver, defended the actions of the unidentified Canadian Kingsgate immigration officer. He said it was entirely up to the officer as to whether he informed the American side that Cunningham was a deserter.

The action would be justified, he said, if the officer felt the Americans would be wondering why the youth had not been allowed into Canada.

Hawkins said as far as he knows the Canadian officer "did not identify Cunningham as a deserter."

VICAR PRESIDES AT CHURCH PUB

SALISBURY, England (UPI)—It's beer drinking time these days down at St. Michael's Church. The vicar himself is doing the pouring.

St. Michael's has opened the first church drinking club in Britain and probably one of the few in the world—a $60,000 building that the Rev. William Rodda and his fold are "determined to make profitable."

To get it started, Rodda himself poured the first pint of beer Friday.

tem which, he said, permitted th Liberal Opopsition to make an electoral platform of the legislature at the expense of taxpayers.

And he accused the provincial civil service of having "bad habits which have to be changed."

"The time for speeches is over. We have to administer Quebec.

"We have to bring order into the civil service. They are not there to lead the government.

"We have to re-establish the authority of the government of Quebec."

Supoprters for both candidates had worked themselves up to a frenzied pitch in 2½ hours of shouting, chanting, marching and sign-waving demonstrations inside the coliseum before the candidates arrived to make their speeches.

Ten brass and drum bands blared steadily and the convention site was splashed with the red, white and blue colors of the Bertrand organization and the orange and blue of the Cardinal clan.

Mr. Bertrand was carried into the arena on the shoulders of cheering partisans.

After his address Bertrand hostesses raced through the crowd giving out birthday kits —with more noise-makers. Hundreds of delegates lit sparklers around the coliseum as symbolic birthday candles.

Mr. Cardinal added impetus to his campaign when he appeared with Mrs. Johnson, widow of the late premier, whose 22-year-old son has appeared frequently with the education minister.

WIDOW'S SUPPORT

In his speech, Mr. Cardinal said he wanted to continue the work begun by Mr. Johnson. In response, a weeping Mrs. Johnson rose among the cheering delegates and waved at the minister.

Mr. Leveille, 35, drew a scatterig of applause as he walked to the podium to start the speaking.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

The Interior experienced some relief from the very dry weather as showers occurred in most areas Friday. Castlegar had the heaviest rainfall with a fall of 1½ inches last evening. At Vancouver the drought is now into its 23 day which is two days longer than the prolonged dry spell in May. However, the ridge of high pressure offshore has weakened and is no longer effectively blocking out the Pacific disturbances. A weak system will break through to the Charlottes early Sunday. This system will be accompanied by rain and the rain will spread southeastward down the coast threatening to end the dry spell in southwestern B.C.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Those of us who dwell in North America may become a bit smug when we think of the greater energy and efficiency we generate in our invigorating weather. Some of us may think we are more intelligent than those who dwell in hot climates, just because we tend to accomplish more the year around.

Ellsworth Huntington, the great climatologist of the early years of this century, warned his contemporaries at Yale University that the theory of efficiency due to better climate must not be stretched to cover brain power.

Huntington said that the ability to work with great efficiency in Connecticut had nothing much to do with the possession of inventive brains. Climate—or weather—stimulates brains, it does not provide more intelligence. Climates that promote efficiency in people merely help in developing their possibilities.

Bounced for Sex Book

MONTROSE, Iowa (AP) — A United Methodist Church minister who wrote a book about sex has been removed from the ministry, it was learned here.

Rev. Stephen Cree of Montrose asked permission to leave the ministry voluntarily but the church's annual conference voted instead to force him out.

In the book The New Act of Sex, Cree contends sexual relations in an era of dependable contraception are a "morally new and different act" to which biblical prohibitions against adultery do not necessarily apply.

"What is the new act of sex without procreation?" Cree wrote. "It can be a means of communication between two people of the opposite sex at the highest level'"

Jail Experience Frightful; Feared Sexual Attack: Boy

A 15-year-old boy revealed in central court Friday he was afraid of homosexual attacks during the week he spent in Wilkinson Road jail awaiting sentence.

The boy, a ward of the Children's Aid Society, had been charged on four counts of breaking and entering, and theft.

He told the court he was afraid to leave his cell because he was warned he would be assaulted if the opportunity presented itself.

He read the court a poem sent to him by another prisoner, and said his cell-mate for the week he spent there had acted as his protector from other prisoners.

Asked whether he had reported the threats to the guard, the youth said a request to speak to the probation officer had gone unanswered, and his cellmate had told the guards weren't interested in his problems.

OTHER MATTER

"I spoke to the guards on other matters, and they don't seem interested at all. They see it happen, too. I don't see how they can miss what the men there do to each other," the boy said of homosexual activity in the prison.

Magistrate William Ostler gave the youth a suspended sentence, and told him to post a $500 good behaviur bond for two years.

He called the youth a "sophisticated and experienced criminal," and said he had a long record in juvenile court.

He said sending the boy to Oakalla where he would be among older men would serve no useful purpose and would be harmful.

There is no provision for sending youths under 16 to young offenders' units.

"I am prepared to give you one chance in this adult court for probation," Ostler told him.

"You have had no respect for other people or their property, but are now very concerned about us respecting your person. If you ever come back here, you can expect prison."

Fear Grips Quebec, Citizens Grab Guns

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

MONTREAL (CP) — Issues in Quebec mushroomed into bomb blasts, verbal strife and noisy confusion in a week also marked by labor violence that caused some citizens to get out guns.

Preceeding tonight's selection in Quebec City of a permanent leader of the government Union Nationale party, the unrest involved Prime Minister Trudeau and an international dimension too.

Preparations for the feast of St. Jean Baptiste, patron saint of French Canada, became for the second consecutive year the occasion for separatist and terrorist elements to vent their hatred of Mr. Trudeau's one-Canada ideas.

The peace of Sherbrooke, in the Eastern Townships, was shattered at 2 a.m. Sunday by the explosion of a powerful dynamite bomb in headquarters of the St. Jean Baptiste Society.

The society reacted Monday by cancelling the parade that had been scheduled for St. Jean Baptiste Day—next Tuesday—with Mr. Trudeau as guest of honor.

FEAR FOR HIS SAFETY

Organizers cited their fears for the safety of the prime minister who defiantly maintained his seat on the reviewing stand at a similar parade in Montreal a year ago when demonstrators battled police and hurled missiles.

Detectives in Sherbrooke, a city of 70,000 about 100 miles east of Montreal, attributed the Sunday blast to the Front de Liberation Quebecois, a terrorist organization dedicated to winning independence for Quebec by violent means.

Mr. Trudeau said of the Sherbrooke incident:

"What I find serious in this affair is that the authorities and the population let such a state of affairs happen and that a decision taken by legitimate authorities should be vetoed by a small group of persons who chose to throw bombs.

"The way to influence one's contemporaries in a free society is through discussion of one's point of view, and not through the use of violence.

"If the choice of decisions affecting public affairs is left to minorities, we won't have a democracy but an armed garrison."

LEFT NO DOUBT

Following a question in the Commons Wednesday, Mr. Trudeau left no doubt he was displeased that 70 foreign dignitaries—but no Canadian federal representative had been invited to Montreal's celebrations of the French-Canadian holiday.

Foreign diplomats, suddenly finding themselves on the spot, flooded the protocol division of the external affairs department in Ottawa with telephone calls asking what they should do.

"There is no problem, no question of any insult or breach of protocol on the part of the embassies," a Canadian official remarked then. "As the prime minister said, they accepted their invitations in good faith. But they will probably decide that, in the circumstances, they cannot attend."

Montreal organizers took the diplomats off the hook by cancelling their invitations. They also fired off belated invitations to Montreal federal MPs, excluding Mr. Trudeau, who represents a suburban constituency, Mount Royal.

The MPs reacted coolly to the invitations and Mr. Trudeau was apparently correct in his surmise that "there will probably be no volunteers" to represent him at the Montreal festivities of the nationalistic, Roman Catholic St. Jean Baptiste Society, which claims some 300,000 members.

SAYS ACTIONS PLANNED

There has been a "systematic attempt" to exclude him and the federal government from the Montreal observances, Mr. Trudeau told the Commons.

GILBERT
. . . assassination plot

St. Georges de Beauce, a small community south of Quebec City, showed no such tendencies, however, When Mr. Trudeau regretfully declined an invitation to attend Tuesday celebrations there, he was promptly asked to come instead on Dominion Day when another party will be held.

There was no question of Mr. Trudeau being bullied out of Quebec. He was in the province last weekend for public appearances and will be making many more in the next few weeks.

His hints to foreign diplomats were in line with Canadian policy at home and abroad respecting federal power. It was in accord with the federal attitude toward participation in international educational meetings organized by France—notably the famed Gabon affair.

The mere acceptance by Mr. Trudeau of the Sherbrooke invitation demonstrated the prime minister's determination to face up personally to the elements which detest his one-Canada, anti-separatist stand.

TARGET FOR DEATH

Jean-Paul Gilbert, Montreal's police director, disclosed recently there had been an assassination plot against Mr. Trudeau a year ago when more than 135 persons were injured and almost 300 arrested at the St. Jean Baptiste parade, held only hours before he won a federal election.

The smell of implacable enmity also surrounds areas of industrial-union conflict, culminating in violence this week in Montreal and the Eastern Townships.

Two comparatively minor bombings in Montreal were directed against a construction company—one passerby was injured—and a company official told police the violence resulted from a "conflict between unions."

Residents of the Eastern Township counties of Brome and Missisquoi, the latter the constituency of Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand, sent telegrams Thursday to the premier and Mr. Trudeau demanding police or military protection. They said "ruffians and hoodlums" terrorized construction projects in the area.

The photo of a citizen standing guard on his property with shotgun was prominently displayed by Montreal newspapers Friday. More than 150 residents, including non-union construction workers, signed the telegram drafted by Glen Brown, Liberal member of the national assembly for Brome.

SEEK MORE PAY

About 11,000 construction workers affiliated with the Confederation of National Trade Unions are on strike in Quebec City, Rimouski and towns southeast of Montreal over job security and wages.

The telegrams blamed the violence on "certain unions in this province of Quebec who have terrorized large areas of the two counties in an illegal manner."

Roger Bourgon, president of the Province of Quebec Chamber of Commerce, called on authorities Thursday to show "courage and firmness" in dealing with the "wave of terrorism" arising from political and labor problems.

"It is by all means unjustifiable that a small minority makes use of its right of manifestation and expression to its extreme limit, only to exhibit a revolting intolerance for the exercise of the same rights by the majority of our citizens."

HIT AT CONVENTION

At the Union Nationale leadership convention, which opened in Quebec City Thursday, Terrorist-style violence flared at 3 a.m. Friday when a gun powder bomb shattered a street mailbox and a Molotov cocktail scorched furniture in the lobby of the Chateau Frontenac hotel, a main centre of convention activity.

Police Capt. Honore Mercier said he feared the events were "the start of a number of incidents that will occur during the convention," which attracted extremists as well as moderate political figures.

Good News For Pensioners

VICTORIA: Pensioners must constantly look for ways to stretch a limited income and one area in which real savings can be made is in the hearing aid field.

When purchasing a hearing aid for the first time, or replacing an old one (a) Do not make a deposit until you are satisfied it is the hearing aid you want. (b) Insist on a free trial period. (c) Check prices at several dealers before buying.

After the initial cost of a hearing aid comes upkeep, with batteries being a major expense. To alleviate this an $8.98 battery charger complete with batteries will eliminate the purchase of the 675 type batteries for from one to two years.

Costly repairs and the inconvenience of a long wait while your hearing aid is shipped by the dealer to the manufacturer and back again is no longer necessary.

Repairs, along with a free trial period and manufacturer-to-you prices, are available from a Victoria hearing aid manufacturer. Audiotronics Enterprises Ltd., 1326 Government St., 385-0911.

ARRESTED LEADER of Southern Christian Leadership Conference the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy is led to jail by police after leading a midnight march Friday in Charleston, S.C., in support of about 450 Negro nurses' aides, practical nurses, orderlies and food workers who have been on strike against the South Carolina Medical College Hospital and Charleston County Hospital since late March. (AP Wirephoto).

Abernathy Held On Riot Charge

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—Civil rights leader Ralph David Abernathy was charged with inciting to riot today after leading 400 supporters of striking hospital workers on a midnight march. Bottles, stones and bricks were thrown at policemen who stopped the demonstration.

A hearing for Abernathy on a charge of forming and starting a parade without a permit was adjourned in police court until a later date.

The inciting-to-riot charge carries a maximum penalty of up to two years in jail and a fine of $500.

Abernathy, head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, remained in custody.

The charges were brought after police halted an attempted march shortly after midnight.

Before order was restored after more than an hour, six policemen and a fireman were injured, several unoccupied automobiles were overturned and Abernathy and three other demonstrators were arrested. National Guard troops and state highway patrolmen helped police.

Gov. Robert McNair had ordered an unspecified number of National Guard troops to be placed on duty Friday. An aide said the guardsmen were requested as a precautionary measure by Charleston officials.

The violence started when the marchers tried to break through a police line after being told they must disperse because they had no parade permit.

Green Is Beautiful

THE PROPOSAL TO BUILD the new city swimming pool on the sward of Central Park should be squelched without delay. It is just one more demonstration of the false belief that parkland is "free" land only waiting for something to be constructed on it. For a few legislators, both local and provincial, the sight of green grass and trees which belong to the public, including its children, is a standing invitation to bring on the bulldozers and carpenters and improve on nature.

This city has no surplus of green breathing space now, and it will soon have a shortage as the population inevitably increases. The Central Park space, in particular, serves an area of the city in which many families are not conveniently able to make visits to suburban pleasure spots. This is their summer resort, and anyone who has seen the youngsters enjoying themselves on the grassy expanse during the current hot spell will denounce any attempt to cut down on the size of their only open recreation area.

It is false economy to pretend that land across the street from an expensive site has no particular value just because it is public parkland. It is equally valuable, and it is being put to an equally valuable purpose. The proposed swimming pool is an excellent idea, and the building being designed for it will reportedly be as fine as any on the continent. For that reason it deserves a good site, but not at the expense of a long established recreation area which has always been available without charge to the children of the neighborhood. The pool is being built to last not for a year or two but for several generations; it is a worthy asset which merits a new location of its own.

Already the city is showing a proclivity to erect buildings the easy way, on park property, as in the proposed Beacon Hill recreation centre. What will come next? The valuable purpose of these centres themselves should not be used as an argument for eliminating still more essential open space. The city for some time has been busy assembling land near Central Park for the swimming pool. If this procedure has run into difficulties, the answer is not to plop the problem into Central Park.

Road to Self-Destruction

A society that allows itself to take a permissive attitude towards moral decadence in its social structure is a society on the road to self-destruction and oblivion.

The recent passage of the omnibus bill by our Government on the Hill which would condone the practice of homosexuality in our land is another and grave evidence that as a people we are allowing ourselves to be seduced by the unregenerate in our midst, to the point where we no longer have any will to resist its onslaught.

The fact that the Christian community have not taken a positive stand, based upon the judgments recorded in the Scripture regarding this evil and unnatural practice, indicates that they either do not believe that the judgments of God are just and righteous, or they have overlooked the responsibility and subsequent judgment which shall surely fall upon us as a people, if we do not make an effort to protect our upcoming generation from this pernicious, soul-destroying practice.

Read Judges, Chapters 19 and 20. There is yet time. Consider of it, take advice, and speak your minds. — C. Gladwin, Dominion President Canadian British Israel Association.

The Professor from Outside

MR. HEATH MACQUARRIE, Conservative member for Hillsborough, who prior to entry into the House of Commons held appointments as a professor of political science in various Canadian universities, recently raised once again the question of teaching positions in Canadian universities for graduates of our institutions.

"When I read," he says, "that only 16 per cent of university positions last year went to the products of Canadian universities, I wonder whether Canadian universities are perhaps becoming the fall guys of the intellectual community?" Alternatively, he asks, "Are the products of Canadian universities not good enough for employment in Canadian universities?"

His questions drew a familiar reply from the parliamentary secretary to the minister of manpower and immigration, noting increased enrolments in recent years and the inability of Canadian universities to graduate enough scholars to meet all the needs of universities and research organizations. Under Operation Retrieval, Canadian graduates abroad are being told of the opportunities available in this country. Information on available graduates is being sent to Canadian universities.

The parliamentary secretary's replies do not, of course, provide a full answer. The fact is that many Canadian graduates look for jobs elsewhere with higher pay or better opportunities for advancement. On the other hand, some return to Canada after experience abroad.

Mr. Macquarrie's concern seems justified, nevertheless, on the basis of figures he has quoted. In the past academic year, Canadian universities hired 1,013 United States professors, 545 British professors, 722 from other countries and 362 Canadian. That scarcely suggests a reasonable balance. It gives weight to his contention that the problem deserves continuing and greater study in depth if Canadian universities are, without becoming chauvinistic, to retain a Canadian character.

A Difficult Decision

STEVEN TRUSCOTT'S LONG prison ordeal seems to be near an end. An application for parole after serving 10 years of a life sentence is expected to be ruled upon shortly. It appears however that if the application is approved Truscott, now 24, may be subjected to an ordeal of another kind.

The glare of publicity surrounding his impending release threatens to become even more powerful when he actually walks out of the Joyceville Ontario Prison Farm gates. This is understandable. The story of the 14-year-old boy sentenced to be hanged for the murder of a 12-year-old schoolgirl became one of the most publicized and discussed criminal cases in the country's history. A book which attempted to prove Truscott's innocence became a best-seller and led to a Supreme Court of Canada review, which upheld the original conviction.

Now film and magazine companies are competing to buy and exploit his life story. The monetary benefits to him will be tempting, but he must decide whether they will be worth it. Nothing can be done now to recover those ten years behind bars and more publicity can serve only to make him an object of continuing curiosity. On the other hand he may want money to start a new life and decide to get it the best way he can.

It will be a difficult choice for this young man to make, and he deserves the most careful advice from his parole officers. The public too should be prepared to understand and respect Truscott's decision if he seeks privacy. Whether guilty or innocent he has already suffered greatly and will carry it for his lifetime.

How to Fill Trains

TO VANCOUVER ISLANDERS and British Columbians in general, an unusual experience in Arizona is worth notice—particularly as it concerns the financially successful operation of a railway.

In that state the White Mountain Scenic Railroad winds through forested highlands, grassland "parks" and stands of towering pines, firs, aspen and spruce. Wild animals roam the landscape in full view. And each summer passenger traffic is booming.

Is there something here for close study by the E & N and perhaps the PGE?

Medicare Becomes a Bonanza for Ontario Companies

By HAROLD GREER

WHAT turns a "Machiavellian scheme" in February into "the best possible medical care for the people of Ontario" in June? The answer: the Machiavellian politics of Premier John Robarts. When Mr. Robarts blasted national medicare at last winter's constitutional conference as "one of the greatest frauds ever perpetrated on the people of this country," this reporter suggested he was bargaining for a relaxation in the federal conditions a province must meet in order to qualify for federal aid:

Greer

"The only plausible explanation is that he is still trying to save a place for the private insurance companies in the medicare scheme of things . . .

"It is, perhaps, a forlorn hope. But Mr. Robarts and the insurance companies went through much the same thing on the Canada Pension Plan and won (albeit with a big assist from Quebec), forcing Ottawa to change from a pay-as-you-go to a funded plan. He apparently thinks he can do it again."

Mr. Robarts has indeed done it again. He has used Ontario's very strong position in the on-going constitutional and fiscal tug-of-war to wrest what he himself has called "an extremely important concession" from the federal government: the private insurance companies will continue to sell medical care insurance when Ontario enters medicare on Oct. 1. They will not only stay in business, they will be guaranteed against the losses which the industry has always claimed it suffers in this field.

The enormity of Mr. Roberts' coup is only beginning to be appreciated here. Superficially, it appears he has simply been forced to beat a retreat and enter medicare after years of opposition. In fact, he has got Ottawa to deny its own legislation and to give Ontario something which has been denied other provinces.

Federal law provides that federal dollars ($176 million to Ontario in a full year) are available to a province which has a medical care insurance plan which is, amongst other things, "administered and operated on a non-profit basis by a public authority appointed or designated by the government of the province" and is subject to audit by the provincial auditor.

But a provincial plan does not fail to qualify if the public authority designates agencies to receive and pay subscribers' accounts and premiums, provided that such accounts are subject to assessment and approval by the provincial authority and the amounts paid out are determined by the provincial authority.

B.C. Approach

In interpreting this section, Ottawa has insisted — up to now — that only the non-profit, doctor-sponsored prepayment plans can qualify as agents. This is the approach which British Columbia took on entering national medicare.

That Ottawa would not allow the commercial insurance companies to continue in the field is obvious enough from the experience of Alberta. That province introduced in April, 1967, the Alberta Health Plan Act in anticipation that national medicare would begin on July 1 of that year.

The Act provided for a standard medical care insurance contract available to everyone, and authorized the Minister of Health to appoint "approved carriers" as his agents for selling contracts, receiving and remitting subscribers' premiums, paying claims, etc., on condition that such claims are subject to the minister's assessment and approval.

The government defined the contract, set the premiums and schedule of payments and paid the agents an agreed-upon administration cost.

But Ottawa ruled the plan didn't qualify and in order to enter medicare on July 1, Alberta last month completed the Health Care Insurance Act, which established a crown corporation to operate its program and prohibits all other carriers from selling contracts which duplicate the benefits provided under the government plan.

What Alberta was refused, Ontario has got. The province's new legislation, which Mr. Robarts says has been approved in principle by the federal government, authorizes the Minister of Health to designate agents to enrol subscribers, collect premiums and pay claims for the Health Services Insurance Plan, which is simply a new name for the government owned and operated Ontario Medical Services Insurance Plan.

"We are not going to destroy the private plans or tamper with collective agreements," Mr. Robarts exulted. "Under the agreement reached with the federal government, these existing plans and benefits will not be altered nor will the capacity for negotiating future contracts be affected."

This is not strictly correct. All agents will be required to sell the OMSIP contract as the standard package, and since most private plans do not match OMSIP's benefits or premium rates, they will have to be brought up to OMSIP'S level. Nor is it likely that employers will be as willing to contribute to their employee's medical care insurance now that a tax-supported scheme is available — even though the government has indicated it has no intention of using the bonanza soon to be coming from Ottawa to reduce medicare premiums.

Reaction from the existing non-profit carriers has been lukewarm at best. The largest, Physicians and Surgeons Incorporated, is not interested in being simply a post office for the government and the others are still considering their position. But the commercial insurance companies are enthusiastic and have promised the government they will set up a non-profit corporation to conform with the federal conditions.

Loss Leader

It is not hard to see why. On the industry's own submission, medical care insurance has always been something of a loss leader for the commercial carriers, which they sell as part of a more profitable package of pension benefits, group life insurance, income maintenance and so on.

Now the loss factor is being removed from the operation. The insurance companies will not make any money by selling the government plan, but they will be selling a superior product at cheaper prices, avoiding the losses incurred in the past, and having their administration costs paid by the government to boot.

They will also have a larger and more vulnerable market in which to sell the products on which they make money. Under the legislation, standard package medicare coverage is mandatory for employee groups of 15 or more, and the insurance agent who can't sell an income maintenance program as well in this captive market is not going to last long. Similarly, the dissolution of PSI will put its 1,800,000 subscribers in the market as potential customers.

Medicare a Machiavellian fraud? Mr. Robarts was right the first time.

A China-Worried Russia Woos the Non-Communists

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

THE power struggle between Russia and Red China now has followed the world's two other major conflicts — Vietnam and the Middle East — to the bargaining table, Moscow and Peking meeting at Khabarovsk, Siberia, this past week to discuss "navigation on boundary rivers." As with the other two conferences, however, the one in Paris and the one here at UN headquarters among the Big Four, there is little or no prospect of an early settlement.

Frye

On the contrary, both Moscow and Peking frequently speak and act as if preparing for possible war.

This possibility is not as remote as it once seemed. The outside world has been slow to appreciate the magnitude of the developing Sino-Soviet crisis.

Hundreds of thousands of soldiers with artillery, armor, missiles, and even possibly nuclear weapons have been brought into juxtaposition along a 4,000-mile frontier. These forces have engaged in intermittent bloody skirmishes over a period of years.

In the diplomatic arena, the developing crisis has profoundly affected Soviet behavior — from Czechoslovakia to the Paris peace conference, and from Suez to the anti-ballistic missile.

Seeking Allies

It has set the Kremlin scurrying to seek out allies in many parts of the globe. It has produced deep schisms within the Communist world.

It has upset traditional assumptions about East-West relations, and opened up the possibility of a great-power reversal of alliances.

The clearest measure of the seriousness of this struggle between the Communist giants is the diligence with which the Soviet Union is thumping the diplomatic bushes, seeking new friends and trying to solidify old alliances.

The world summit meeting of Communist parties which ended this past week was the climax of years of effort to line up the international Communist movement behind Moscow.

It failed. It produced few ringing vows of loyalty and solidarity against China and no known pledges of troops in case of war.

It is understandable, of course, that Czech and Polish and East German leaders, for example, should not be eager to pledge a fight on the steppes of Siberia for "Mother Russia."

If the invasion of Czechoslovakia was designed to keep Eastern Europe a useful military ally, it was crashingly counterproductive. Many satellite troops now would mutiny if asked to fight for the Kremlin.

Moscow also is actively courting noncommunist countries which lie in the shadow of China, some of which have themselves already banded together in the nucleus of an alliance to contain the Yellow Dragon.

The Kremlin is trying to establish a basis of common interest with these countries by pointing out China's "hegemonistic pretensions" and by offering to "contribute . . . to every effort helping to insure dependable peace and security in Asia . . ."

Soviet ambassadors to many countries on the periphery of China have been called home for "consultations," apparently on what Party Secretary Leonid Brezhnev has called a "system of collective security in Asia."

John Foster Dulles might turn over in his grave, but this sounds very much as if Russia were trying to set up an anti-Chinese alliance that would parallel and supplement SEATO.

Russia has even begun to feel out Nationalist China in this connection. It is an extraordinary turn of events, but if hard military realities are put ahead of ideology, it has its logic.

Formosa has been at war with the mainland for years, and is not an insignificant military force. It would be one of the most useful allies against Mao which the Kremlin could have.

Stalin in his lifetime often seemed to have greater respect for Chiang Kai-shek than he did for Mao Tse-Tung. Brezhnev is simply being forced back to Stalin's posture of the 1940s.

Uncomfortable

The Soviet Union represents, to put it mildly, an uncomfortable potential ally for most of the anti-Communist countries of Asia. Little or no co-operation would be feasible while the Kremlin was feeding weapons and material to an enemy of the West in Vietnam.

This is one reason why Moscow has helped, tangentially, to get and keep the Paris talks going. It may also explain why some Soviet diplomacy in the Mid-East has been not unhelpful — her advocacy, for example, of a new UN peace force for the area.

The Kremlin has even hinted that it would welcome American participation in collective security against China. The effort to achieve an East-West detente is largely traceable to a desire for joint or parallel action against Peking.

An Izvestia commentator recently observed that a collective security system was becoming necessary in Asia in part because British withdrawal from East of Suez and potential American withdrawal from Vietnam would create a power vacuum.

He did not go so far as to disapprove the Anglo-American withdrawals. It still is Soviet policy to press for them. But there was an inference that the Kremlin may have begun to think on both sides of this question.

"Things impossible I dare," the poet boasted. In Asia the impossible may well be a feature of tomorrow's headlines.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

If you go to Goldstream, especially to the picnic site, you will notice that the stream is very shallow because of the water difficulties of the Victoria District.

In the stream are many interesting things to see, including the caddisfly that looks like a small bundle of sticks, or, perhaps, a string of sand moving along on the bottom and crawling over the little stones. This will be the larva of the adult fly and will eventually emerge into a flying creature during the summer months.

There will be the nymph of the stone fly, with its two tail-like appendages. If these little insects are taken from the water they soon die. They cannot even stand being in warm or still water.

Also in the stream there will be the crayfish, the creature that looks like a lobster. Sometimes you may find a female with a cluster of eggs which are stuck to her swimmerets. They eventually will hatch and stay attached for some time before becoming free to take care of themselves.

It is likely you will find some bullheads in the deeper pools. They can be identified by their large heads and stout spines.

But perhaps the most important life in the creek will be the "baby coho salmon." These tiny, fragile creatures seem to be darting everywhere. It is essential that they be left alone and not be caught nor penned up in little pools of stone corrals. They must have running fresh water that is cool or they will not live.

These little fish were hatched out this spring, will stay in the stream until next spring and then go out to sea on the freshet.

In three years time they will come back to the stream and the gravel bars they were hatched in and so will complete this cycle of life and, incidentally, provide food for mankind.

We did not have a good run of cohos last fall and with the present very low water and hot weather we should do all we can to preserve and save the little salmon in order that they will be able to carry on their species.

A Little Noblesse Oblige Goes Long Way at the Top

By MORDECAI RICHLER
New Statesman

Early in April, I discovered I was among this year's Governor-General's Award winners for literature.

"You're accepting it," my Canadian publisher said, astonished.

"Yes."

"You're pleased, you're actually pleased."

"Yes, I am."

Several years earlier, a friend of mine had won the award for a collection of essays. At the reception in Government House, Ottawa, his wife, suddenly distressed, drove him into a corner. "He says he hasn't read it himself, but his maid did and liked it very much."

"No, no," my friend assured her, "his aide, he means his aide."

Traditionally, the GG, the Queen's very own Canadian second floor maid, stands behind two major horse races: the Queen's Plate and the Governor-General's Awards (never more than six) for the best books of the year.

Though one Queen's Plate winner, the fabulous Northern Dancer, also came first in the Kentucky Derby, so far no Governor-General's Award winner has even been entered in the final heat for the Nobel.

The first Governor-General's Awards were presented by Lord Tweedsmuir in 1937 to Bertram Brooker and T. B. Robertson, who, it's safe to say, are now remembered for nothing else.

Among others who have officially signed the Canadian literary skies with their honor there are John Murray Gibson, Franklin S. McDowell, Alan Sullivan, Winifred Bambrick, William Sclater and R. MacGregor Dawson.

●

I could go on. I could go on and on, seemingly composing a letterhead with names fit to adorn only the most exclusvie Montreal or Toronto law office.

But, to be fair, in recent years the awards have also been presented to Morley Callaghan and Gabrielle Roy, Hugh MacLennan, Brian Moore, Rejean Ducharme, George Woodcock, Marshall McLuhan and, posthumously, to Malcolm Lowry.

COHEN

Until 1959, when the Canada Council took over the administration of the awards, the Governor-General forked out 100 guineas to the horse that won the Queen's Plate, but offered just a handshake (royal only by osmiosis since Vincent Massey became the first Canadian-born GG in 1952), and a copy of your book signed in his own hand, to writers.

The Canada Council, happily cognisant of the stuff that really excites this country's most artistic types, tacked a $1,000 purse to the awards in 1959, raising the ante to $2,500 six years later. What had once been a stigma was now inspiring.

●

It was also made reputable, because the Council saw to it that the judge's panel was literate. A new departure, for in years past the incomparable Canadian Authors' Association adjudicated the awards.

This year's awards created a small uproar. THE ESTABLISHMENT BEWARE! ran the headline in the Toronto Globe & Mail, THESE AWARDS ARE WITH IT.

Winners for 1968 were Hubert Acquin, for his novel, Trou de memoirs; Fernand Dumont, for his sociological work, Le lieu de l'homme; and Marie-Claire Blais, for her novel, Les Manuscrits de Pauline Archange. English-language winners were Leonard Cohen, for his Selected Poems; Alice Munro, for her first book of short stories, Dance of the Happy Shades; and me, for Cocksure, a novel, and Hunting Tigers Under Glass, a collection of essays.

Well now, the truth is we were a scurvy lot. Cohen, who enjoys an immense campus following in Canada and the U.S., is a self-declared pot smoker.

Hubert Acquin, a former vice-president of the militantly separatist RIN party, was once arrested and charged with car theft and being in possession of a revolver.

●

My novel, Cocksure, had been banned by the rest of the white Commonwealth.

Acquin, as was to be expected, turned down the award instantly, the GG being anathema to him. Fernand Dumont accepted the award, but two weeks later donated his prize money to the separatist Parti Quebecois.

Cohen, pondering the inner significance of the award in his hotel in the village, wavered. He told a Toronto Star reporter he wasn't sure whether he would accept the award, it would depend how he felt when he got up that morning.

In the end, he didn't wait that long, but issued a statement saying there was much in him that would like to accept the award, but the poems absolutely forbid it.

I accepted the award at once, but with mixed feelings. As a writer I was pleased and richer, but as a father of five, mortified.

When Cocksure was published in Canada, the reviewer in the Montreal Star revealed that I had churned out an obvious potboiler with all the lavatory words.

●

The man who pronounces on books in the New Brunswick Daily Gleaner put me down for a very filthy fellow and warned parents in Montreal that I would be teaching their children at Sir George Williams University, where I was to be writer-in-residence for a year. Others denounced me as a pornographer.

And now the ultimate symbol of correctitude in our country, the GG himself, would actually reward me for being obscene. For the establishment's sake I couldn't help but be ashamed.

The Governor-General, I was assured, had read and loathed my novel, but unlike Acquin or Cohen, he did turn up for prize-giving day. Which is not to say he didn't protest.

"The Governor-General is a patron of all the arts, but has little time to master any," he said. "But I do have views, literary as well as political, even though, as in the Speech from the Throne, I have to refrain from expressing them."

Many Canadians feel the Governor-General is an anomaly; his office, at best, tiresome, at worst, divisive. My own earliest recollection of the monarchy goes back to the war years when we used to purchase calendars with toothy photographs of Elizabeth and Margaret in their Brownie uniforms.

One night, while London was enduring the blitz, my mother read in the Star that King only poured one inch of hot water into his tub now. "It's to set an example for the people," she said.

●

'Who knows what he does when he's alone in the toilet," my father said.

I have, in my time, lived under seven Governor-Generals. Only one of them, Lord Tweedsmuir, was abhorrent to me, because under the name of John Buchan he wrote thrillers choked with anti-semitic nonsense.

Our present Governor-General, however, is hardly the sort to arouse strong feelings. Daniel Roland Michener is an upright, compact little man with curly grey hair and a natty moustache; he has, in this age of rock, the manner of the maitre d'hotel in a palm court restaurant.

Mrs. Michener, a more obdurate figure, is a case of life improving on the art of Grant Wood. She was born to chaperone the dance in the small-town high-school gym.

●

All of us assembled in the reception room at Government House, on 13 May, rose respectfully when the Micheners, preceded by uniformed aides, drifted in, their smiles frozen; but I, for one, would have found Mr. Michener more credible proffering that large black menu than mounting the dais with such confidence.

Behind the Governor-General and his lady, bolstering their acquired royalty as it were, hung enormous portraits of Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip.

The portraits were resoundingly awful, not so much poor likenesses as badly proportioned grotesqueries.

Roland Michener, rising to address us, seemed distracted, his manner that of a man who had just come from being photographed accepting a gift of snow shoes from an Eskimo child and must push on to award a Brotherhood plaque to a western mayor in a ten-gallon hat, rimless glasses and high-heeled boots.

The speech Mr. Michener read to us from small cards made for some nervous smiles and at least one giggle from the assembled literati.

Observing that all but one of the six award winners were from Quebec, he noted that this might not be a coincidence.

"Politics in Quebec today are tense . . . social order is in the process of rapid change and upheaval. This is the atmosphere which stirs people to write more and sometimes better, and to produce exciting paintings, sculpture, theatre and films."

Alas, the writings of Cohen and Marie-Claire Blais are equally non-political. They have been living in the United States for years, and I am normally rooted in London.

Finally, the award winners were summoned to the Governor-General one by one to accept leather-bound copies of their work signed by Mr. Michener. When my turn came, the Governor-General asked me, 'Etes-vous Canadien?'

●

Startled, I said, "Oui."

He then went on to congratulate me fulsomely in French. Is it possible, I thought, appalled, that the Governor-General is a covert separatist?

If not, why, when I answered yes to his question, had he assumed I was necessarily French-speaking? The mind boggled.

In any event, once he was done, I said, "Merci." I did not correct the Governor-General. In my case, it was noblesse oblige.

Generation Gap, Red China Style

By COLIN McCULLOUGH

PEKING — In the purges that have swept back and forth across China for two and a half years the blow of condemnation has hit hard at the sons and daughters of the men and women whom the Cultural Revolution has exposed as "renegades, enemy spies, diehard capitalist roaders, landlords, rich peasants, reactionaries and bad elements."

McCullough

Among Chinese Communists, there is the belief that class origin is all important. If your grandparents or parents were bourgeois, then you are suspect because you are susceptible to their thinking. The Communists also believe, though, that while one cannot choose one's family origin, one can choose one's road of life.

How to Prove It?

The question is, how does a young person prove himself a genuine revolutionary despite his parents' ideological failings? There is no question that it is necessary.

One can scarcely imagine the psychological pressure on the individual who is connected even remotely with the humiliation of denunciation.

The People's Daily, official organ of the Central Committee, got on this subject recently in an article that was clearly meant to serve as a guide to dealing with the children of purged class enemies.

The newspaper held up as a model a commune production brigade which "dug out quite a lot of hidden class enemies" and later found that some of their sons and daughters "felt there was no way out for them, and lost interest in working."

Must be Saved

The production brigade leaders decided these youths must be saved and turned into assets in Socialist construction. The solution was to hold mass meetings of criticism and repudiation — which the sons and daughters were organized to attend — to expose "the crimes committed by their reactionary parents in the past."

Some brigade members apparently argued that matters should be left to rest for the time being, or the young people's "positive factors" would be affected.

But it was finally agreed that without a campaign of criticism and repudiation, the young people would not realize the seriousness of their parents' misdeeds and would not be able to "draw a clear line with their reactionary parents."

A graphic illustration of what this means was provided by three girls, Lu Yang-Ping, Lu Yang-bing and Lu Yang-min, who wrote their story in a Shanghai newspaper.

The father, they said, was a capitalist roader who worked in the East China Bureau of the Central Committee. He was exposed during the Cultural Revolution.

"For a long time," they said, "we failed to recognize his reactionary features and failed to draw a clear line between him and us, particularly when he was being dragged out by the proletarian revolutionaries and we were in very low spirits with a heavy burden on our minds."

After attending Mao Tse-tung study classes with Red Guards and listening to reports about him, they realized he was a "dangerous enemy to the people."

"For many years he opposed the study of Mao Tse-tung's works, attacked the general line of the Great Leap Forward and people's communes, and pushed the revisionist line of Liu Shao-chi," they said.

At home, they reported, their father protected his mother though she had been a landlord and had attacked the Communist Party, the new society, and Mao Tse-tung. Their father refused to take their complaints seriously.

'Toppled Our Will'

"We knew we should rebel against him, but traditional ideas, the feelings between father and daughter, always prevented us and toppled our fighting will."

They also admitted their fears that their own futures would be affected if they added to the guilt of their father.

Eventually, they came to realize they were "youth of the Mao Tse-tung era" and even went to a struggle meeting against their father which was held by the revolutionaries of his own bureau.

"We went up on the stage and made a face-to-face struggle with our father, exposing his reactionary words and actions," they said.

"At home, we also waged a struggle against him, turning our home into a battlefield of class struggle . . ."

What finally became of the Lu girls and their father is not known, but since the emphasis of the current struggle-criticism-transformation movement is on allowing the guilty "to find a way out" through earnest self-criticism, they probably have been reunited as a proletarian, revolutionary family by now.

If They Can't Score Do We Lower Hoop?

By ART STOTT

When we were kids at Margaret Jenkins, physical education was a simple, almost primitive, subject. We didn't know the term at the time, but it was confined largely to calisthenics. We called them physical jerks when we called them anything at all — hips-firm, knees-bend, on-toes-stand, feet-astride-jump, arms-stretch, arms-fling, breathe-in, breathe-out. That was about it and we performed in the aisles beside our desks.

Stott

Periodically Capt. Ian St. Clair, a strapping Scot whose hearing had gone and whose sight was failing, visited as the official in charge of PE to see how we were doing. He told us to eat porridge to grow strong and he criticized those with long hair and dirty boots. We liked him and his oft-repeated stories and we responded properly to his closing command: "Gayurels curtsy! Uh-boys sal-lute!"

That was the formal program. We got our exercise, co-ordination and certain physical skills kicking a football, throwing a ball or rough-housing in the school yard before class, at recess, before and after lunch and when studies ended at 3.

We also "took" hygiene — a study which impressed nobody and which was outlined in a book that, if memory serves, advised us to brush our teeth, keep the windows open and stay reasonably clean. The advice was wasted.

★ ★ ★

Apart from the physical jerks, we didn't recognize physical education as such. We played games because we wanted to. We tried to become expert because in competency lay recognition as well as enjoyment. And we fought for places on the school teams because there was nothing more important than playing for the school in a kid's life.

Since that era, physical education has come of age. In addition to wearing the prescribed and up-to-date uniforms for the various sports, physical ed wears a white collar comfortably now, and oftimes dons a cap and gown.

The records show that better coaching, better equipment and better facilities have helped the moderns to outstrip their predecessors.

In this community, also, we had Archie McKinnon, a once-in-a-lifetime experience for any area, who put in a regular 12-hour day with no pay for overtime, improvised on available inexpensive material, and built enough champions to qualify him as coach for a handful of Olympic teams. And he did it without neglecting the youngsters who weren't headed for the stars — kids he taught to swim, to overcome physical handicaps, and to enjoy not only sport but the essence of participation and accomplishment.

Since physical ed has become more "educational" it has automatically encountered the dissent that is involved in education.

This week I heard an energetic, vigorous and thoughtful young man with an impressive degree declare that our gym equipment and methods were exclusive — keeping kids out of participation instead of bringing them in.

He noted, in passing, that schools as we know them now operated on the same principle.

So they do. A child is excluded from higher grades until he has learned to read, write and do his numbers. Life's a bit the same. An infant is excluded from the ranks of the ambulatory innocent until he learns to walk.

★ ★ ★

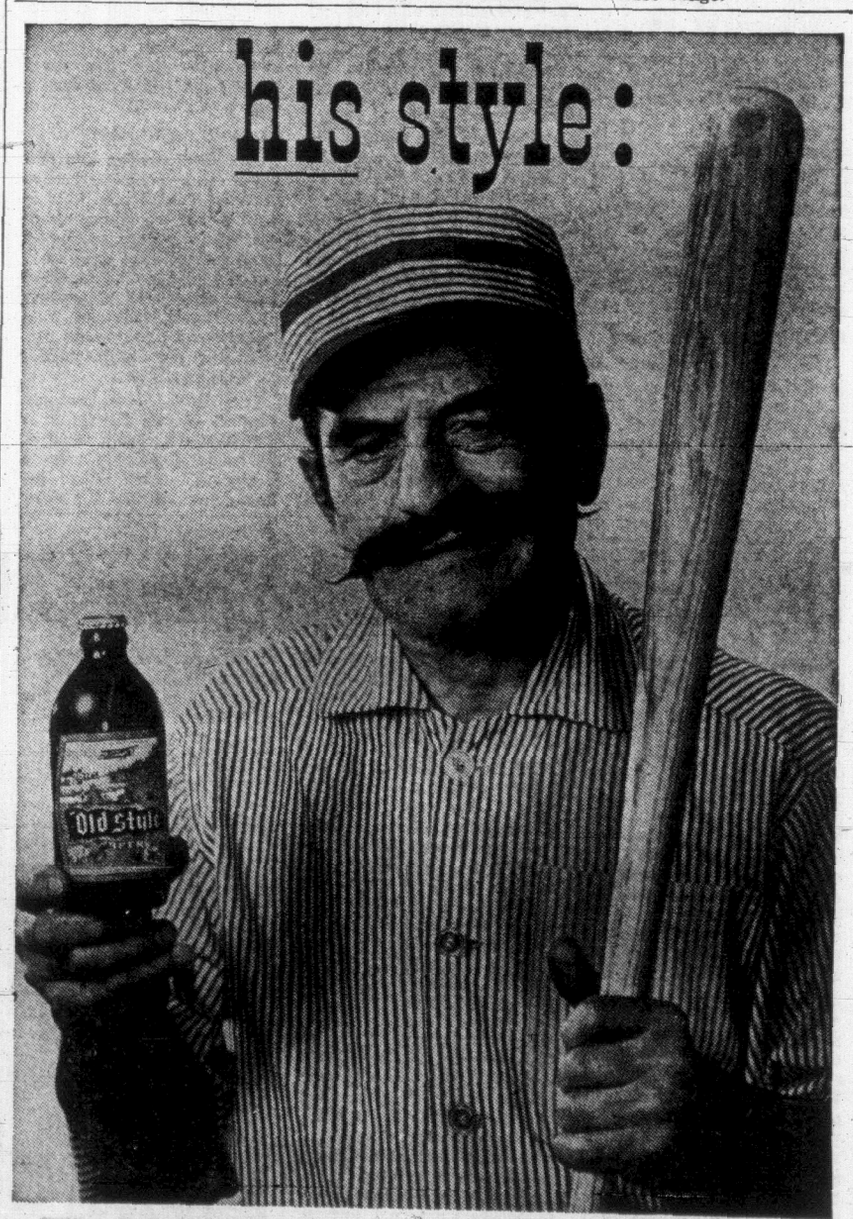

The authority who developed the theme this week, used two interesting illustrations to indicate exclusion in physical ed. He demonstrated the manner in which individuals were forced out of participation in the high jump when they couldn't clear a certain height. And he suggested, as an alternative, that a slanting line be used, almost touching the ground at one end and elevated to substantial height at another. Then everybody could go over the height appropriate to him. So they could and so they did, with an interesting inclination to try for a higher jump when they had successfully negotiated the lower. Everybody was included, not excluded. But the activity was not an accepted high jump.

He described also an exercise in elementary school where tiny tots were required to try to throw a regulation basketball through a regulation hoop at the regulation height. The ball was too big, and the hoop too high for them. They couldn't score. They were, he suggested, excluded. A smaller ball and lower, as well as bigger, hoop, would have permitted them to score, to accomplish, to succeed. They'd have been included.

But why include them in basketball at all if they can't handle the equipment? There are other, simpler, easier games to play in which all can take part.

★ ★ ★

I'd consider it very bad teaching if a teacher insisted that everyone, whatever his physical ability, should shoot baskets and clear the bar in the high jump or be relegated to the sidelines with no alternative activity for him. I'm not so sure that a teacher, trying to teach basketball or high jumping, should arbitrarily change the game or the sport merely for the convenience of the inept or underqualified. Ineptness or underqualification will eventually exclude some people from basketball and high jumping, but a lot, starting early, will meet the challenges and for the others different forms of physical activity should emerge. There's always golf.

With all these new-style rules and regulations, the early heroes of Cap Stadium wouldn't recognize the old ball game today. But, they'd still appreciate one style: Old Style. It's still brewed with natural ingredients and plenty of time. Still brewed in B.C. for Old Style flavour.

Look at It His Way: It's an Elephant's World

LIFE WITH DAKTARI, by Susanne Hart; Collins; 218 pages; $6.95.

Reviewed by Marion Jenkins

This second biography by Susanne Hart offers an intriguing account of the author's travels and veterinary work in East Africa with her husband Toni Harthoorn, well-known as a pioneer in immobilizing wild animals and as the original for the Daktari series on television.

Interested in the welfare of animals since childhood, the author comes into contact with a variety of wild life in Africa, as she helps her husband to heal those animals which are brought to them with some physical impairment.

The wife and husband team also have many adventures as they travel to remote outposts. They not only make new animal friends, but also meet people with a similar dedication to the preservation of wild life.

200 IN REVERSE

Of particular interest is the author's description of these people, each with his own animal preference, such as the famous Adamsons and their lions. This couple's "zoo in reverse" (the animals free, the observers caged) strikes the author, as well as the reader, as a sensible and admirable approach.

One incident described in detail is the eye operation on one of the Adamson's lions, Ugas. Joy Adamson, who was intensely involved in her work with cheetahs when the author met her, is portrayed as a fantastically energetic and dedicated animal lover.

ANIMAL ARK

At the same time that Susanne Hart presents a panoramic picture of African life, one is constantly aware of the many facets of her own personal life. Besides her veterinary work and travels, she is also seen as a busy mother of two children, devotee of Yoga and writer of children's stories for the Voice of Kenya.

She also contributed to the study of wild life through her former TV series, Animal Ark, a program which showed animals and children in close contact with one another. Her own personal philosophy, involving the treatment and presevation of animals, reveals a more serious and didactic side to her narrative.

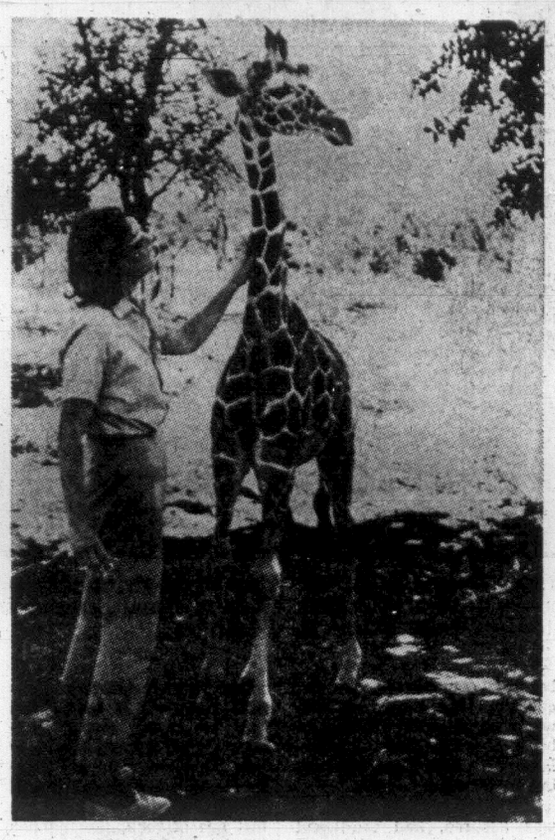

Especially perceptive and poetic are her descriptions of the African landscape.

To enliven her text, she includes many color and black and white photographs, as well as amusing drawings by her husband.

The author's frankness, courage, and humor further enrich this book. She admits her failings, particularly in a frightening encounter with an angry lion. From this experience, she learned that one cannot overstep the bounds that separate man from animal.

USED THEIR 'CHOO'

Her sense of humor is keenly reflected in the description of a visit to their home by Pimbi the hyrax. An air of mystery is immediately established, and it is only when Pimbi's human habit of using their "choo" (lavatory) is discovered that the mystery is solved.

Baby Giraffe Towers Over Author Hart

Another experience later reveals yet another side of her life in Africa. In the filming of a movie—Cowboy in Africa—starring Mary and John Mills, she helped to train an African boy to play a major role.

One of the many trials in the filming occurred when a rhino was required for one of the scenes. When one was actually secured, it destroyed one of its horns in a fit of rage. The crew had to replace the horn with a rubber one to make the scene look authentic.

RADIATION EFFECTS

Although Susanne Hart's personal philosophy is touched upon in earlier chapters, it is in the last one that she deals even more seriously with the problem of protecting animals rather than killing them.

For the outsider, who is often critical of experimentation on animals, she also defends one aspect of their work, particularly that in which her husband is involved —the immobilization of animals and the use of radiotelemetry: "The over-all purpose of this work was that of the study of the adaptation of wild animals to their environment and especially their reaction to stresses such as the sun's radiation and water shortage."

After the tragic death of the famous and friendly elephant, Odinga, who was killed by the "professional hunter and trophy collector," the author makes an even more urgent plea for man to protect the animals around him.

She quotes from the author-naturalist, Colin Fletcher, to voice her feelings: "Animals are not just curiosities crossing the landscape, but are part of the complex web of the whole of existence of which man is, at present, the dominant species. That, however, does not give us the right to assume that the world was made for man. From the elephant's point of view, the world was designed for elephants."

The author's sensitivity and perception, as well as her lucid style of writing, make this book on the magnificence of Africa one to be slowly "chewed" and thoroughly "digested."

How Humans Keep Burning Their Forests

THE FLAMING FORESTS, by Fred McClement. McClelland and Stewart, $7.95.

A history of forest fires in Canada is not perhaps the most appealing book for a summer day but it ought to be read, if only as a dreadful warning, and the reading provides as gripping a story as any horror fiction.

The book opens with a dramatic account of the Peshtigo fire of 1871, where 1,200 people died in 20 minutes. Then a brief chapter backtracks to speculate about earlier fires, explaining how evidence can be found in charcoal beds to date fires as far back as 245 AD that destroyed the solid forests of what are now the prairies.

DRY FOG

Even the archives of European cities help to date early fires: the "dark days" or "dry fog" which so terrified Londoners that they suspected witchcraft were in fact made by the smoke of Canadian forest fires carried by the northern hemispheric wind.

Fred McClement successfully continues this method of alternating gripping stories of actual fires with more general chapters on such subjects as bush pilots, water bombing and forest management, finishing with suggestions for improved methods of fire prevention and detection.

The accounts of the great fires, the Cochrane, the Matheson, the Haileybury and the Dance, have an inevitable and frightening sameness. The worst thing is not the speed of the flames, the thousand-degree heat, the survivors plunging into lakes and rivers while entire towns vanish in minutes, but human carelessness and failure to learn lessons.

REFUSE TO LISTEN

Over and over again, one reads of people refusing to listen to warnings, being smug in a false sense of security, repeating mistakes they knew had already cost lives.

After such a story of destruction and stupidity, McClement can scarcely be blamed for ending with an appeal: "There is hope that the forests may be saved for the betterment of all mankind. It seems terrible that the public can only be alerted to the problem by the great fires, by death, by destruction. Maybe a book like this, which can only remind everyone that forest fires can happen at any time that the combination of events is just right, can spark the needed interest."—J.C.

Daring Novel Goes On and ON About Things SO Trivial

FIVE LEGS, by Graeme Gibson; House of Anansi; 194 pp; paperback; $2.50.

This book seems to me to be typical of the sort of "experimental" movie that comes off the Canadian presses these days. It tries too hard to be avant garde, and it sets out to smash a way of life that has already become pretty dog-eared.

The premise that Canadians — particularly those who live in Toronto and its environs — are hidebound by a puritan ethic which though long dead still hangs heavy on one's individuality is not such a devastating idea, and it hardly occasions the frenetic call-to-arms that this novel proclaims. Why haul out a cannon to swat a fly?

BEHAVE SAME WAY

The novel divides into two parts that centre on two different characters. It is hard to see the advantage of this. Both narrators sound and behave exactly the same way. Perhaps this is an intentional irony, since both characters dislike each other yet they feel the same way about life. Whatever the intention, the result is repetitive.

The death of a graduate student, Martin Baillie, in a hit-and-run accident, acts as the catalyst for the pent-up feelings of Lucan Crackell, his thesis director, and for Felix Oswald, his roommate. Both Lucan and Felix (and the dead Martin, for that matter) yearn to be free, to love, to live, to "be themselves" in Europe or Mexico or some other non-Canadian place. Lucan is tied to a frigid wife; Felix is the prisoner of his virginal conscience.

SNATCH AT FUTURE

Both of them spend the greater part of their waking hours regretting the past, bewailing the present and snatching at a future that is represented by any girl who seems sensual and yielding but who will not endanger their masculinity by being over-eager.

The way the different levels of their lives gradually unfold in the course of each monologue is cleverly managed in a montage effect of fragments of memories that constantly shift and turn.

The weakness of the book lies in a failure of tone. The sentences are broken up, explosive and tortured, but they continue in that way without any let up. It is the sort of style that depends on capitals for emphasis: "Well . . . Taking a deep breath for another plunge, whipping open the bag and vanishing, his face his whole face OH NO inside! Felix appalled Oswald away with rising gorge, cringing from stronger, the muffled voice. Well . . . Well well, rustle rustle and poking around, but he did he ruined! Our dinner, Jesus, what's he doing eating IS HE EATING THEM? Churning stomach, these stabbing as he reappears and Felix looks for grease on his chin."

DRINKING EPISODE

This quickly becomes tiresome, especially when the things these people agonize about are so trivial. It's difficult to feel sympathy for Lucan's traumas about a drinking episode that happened years before when he was disgraced and dismissed. If the establishment's reactions were so petty and, well PURITAN, then why go on and ON about them?

I continually found myself on the wrong side in this book. The idea behind the title suggests that those who are sensitive, who want to BREAK OUT, are the victims of society's regimentation.

They are freaks in the human zoo, the ones with five legs, to be rejected and reviled by the "ordinary" herd. Unfortunately, the style of the book led me to think that the unfeeling masses are perhaps right in their scorn. These men with their self-plying sensitivity are freaks and it would be better if they found something practical to do with that fifth leg . . . such as walking on it. — A.W.L.

A Compassionate Look At the Irish Tragedy

A HISTORY OF MODERN IRELAND WITH A SKETCH OF EARLIER TIMES, by Giovanni Costigan. Fitzhenry & Whiteside, $9.95.

Reviewed by Ann Saddlemyer

To read the history of Ireland is to become so overwhelmed by the centuries of misery, degradation, and English perversity that the sheer weight of facts and figures acts almost as a disservice, stupefying the mind and numbing the conscience.

One is forced to make invidious comparisons: between, say, the latest total of Vietnam casualties and the horrors of the Irish famines. ("The great evil with which we have to contend," declared the head of the English Treasury Sir Charles Trevelyan, is "not the physical evil of the famine but the moral evil of the selfish, perverse and turbulent character of the people.")

NO RIGHTS

Or to top a recent campus slogan by recalling Bishop Berkeley's comment concerning his own American slaves: "The Negroes in our plantations have a saying, 'If a Negro was not Negro, Irishman would be Negro' ". Or to realize simply that in the years between the reign of Elizabeth I and the close of the 17th century 12 million acres had been "legally" confiscated so that although Roman Catholics made up four-fifths of the population, they owned only one-seventh of the land; nor did they have any right to vote, study, hold public office, or own a horse worth more than five pounds.

But the history of a country is more than a compendium of comparative data and troubled accusations. As with most nations who have struggled under conquest, it is a record of personal achievements and social consciousness.

This is even more so in the case of of Ireland, where Irish nationalism, as Professor Costigan shrewdly points out, did not even arise until well into the 16th century. And with this upsurge of national feeling, Ireland for the first time since the Viking raids which so effectively extinguished the brightest cultural light of the Dark Ages, once again expressed herself in thepublic arts.

What makes Costigan's History of Modern Ireland so valuable is his sensitive weaving of these different threads of politics, religion and culture into a gripping and dramatic narrative.

Yet the synthesis is as honest as it is complete: compassion is balanced by objectivity and the issues are never blurred by emotionalism.

The Cathedral Which Rose Above Convention

CHARTRES, by George Henderson; Pelican Books; 169 pp; $2.50.

Reviewed by Anthony Jenkins

This is one of the first of the new Pelican books devoted to the Architect and Society. Henderson has already contributed an exciting book on Gothic style to the companion series, Style and Civilization, and one of the merits of his discussion here is the broad cultural background against which he sets the architectural novelties at Chartres.

This is so much more than a guidebook to one of the jewels of the Gothic period. Cathedrals are sermons in stone, and Henderson sets out to interpret this building by explaining the religious philosophy of the clerics or the mood of the merchants and nobles who funded it and by reconstructing the intentions of the unknown architect who carried out the building of the entire main structure.

He explains the influences that led to various elements of Chartres, where certain features show evidence of a great leap forward in design, and he is generous with examples of experiments in the same style at other churches.

EXTRA CHURCH

The great west facade of the cathedral belongs to an earlier romanesque design. It too has its story to tell about changes in thought and style. Henderson points out that the western portico was constructed as an extra church to accommodate the throngs of pilgrims who flocked to see the tunic that the Virgin Mary had worn when she gave birth to Christ.

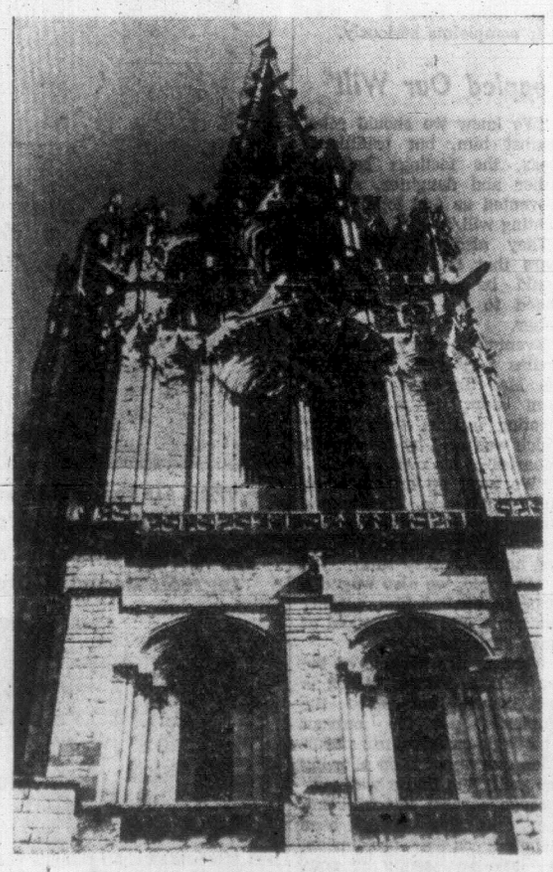

The northern tower in the facade was begun first and its capitals are decorated with satyrs and grotesques. By the time the second tower was completed, the strictures of St. Bernard of Clairvaux against such monsters had made their mark on the architects, and the new columns are restrained variants of Corinthian capitals.

GREAT FIRE

The critical event at Chartres was a great fire in 1194 which destroyed all of the old church above ground except for the western front. Miraculously the chemise of the Virgin was also spared, and this became the focus of a fund-rasing campaign as preachers ranged through Europe telling the faithful that the Virgin required a new and better church to rise up out of the ashes of the old one.

The readiness of so many levels of society to contribute to the cost of the building is seen as "a tribute to the prestige of the relics of Chartres, to the cult of the Virgin centred in that place, and also, of course, to a sense of cultural unity which was beginning in the early 13th century to draw all Frenchmen together . . . Notre Dame of Chartres was begun and carried to its superb conclusion as an outward sign of the grandeur of Christian France."

One of the most interesting parts of the book stems from what at first seems to be a dry academic question about whether the architect of the new cathedral built eastwards from the old facade or started from the choir and worked towards the old west front. In weighing up the pros and cons of both theories, Henderson lets the reader see into the mind of the unknown master-builder and leaves one with the impression of a man of distinctly individual tastes who was daring enough to cut across the latest fashions but who came into conflict with the conservatism of the establishment who wished to keep the surviving parts of the church intact.

Chartres' Northwest Tower and Spire

REMARKABLY FREE

"If the architect of the new cathedral originally intended to build an entirely new west front, he cannot properly have gauged the mood of his patrons. He must himself have been remarkably free from the conventional attitudes of his period . . . He was radical in what he actually achieved, in the dynamic deviation of the cathedral, in the criticism which he thereby levelled at all previous Gothic design, and in the solutions which he offered to aesthetic and technical problems."

This book is as gripping as a detective novel. Printed on fine paper in elegant type face, it is generously illustrated to bring out the details of the author's argument. It provides the initiate and the layman with a lucid and penetrating account of the human forces that went into the creation of one of the richest monuments of medieval Europe.

The Stories They Tell Sometimes Just Fancy

By RUSSELL FREETHY

There are always rumours flying high and wild in the entertainment business. Most of them, fortunately, do not contain a grain of truth. Pop writers are probably the worst offenders when it comes right down to where a rumour started.

Freethy

Always in need of material, the writer (especially one who contributes to a teen magazine or fashion rag) digs around asking leading questions and more often than not stretches the answers until they bridge the gap in his story.

So, if you believe in your favourite artists and groups, don't believe all that you read about them.

One rumour has it the the Jefferson Airplane has split up. Definitely not true. They mixed their sixth album for RCA three weeks ago while in L.A.

Nicky Hopkins of The Jeff Beck Group added his piano to six of the eleven cuts.

●

The Airplane pioneered the free concert in North America on May 13th when they played to an estimated 35,000 people in Chicago's Grant Park.

It was the first public event to be held in the park since the riots last year. Mayor Daly apparently gave the concert his blessings.

The group also got together to play a benefit for the People's Park Bail Fund (for Berkeley students) at the Filmore West along with the Grateful Dead and Creedence Clearwater Revival.

Bill Graham added $1,000 to the proceeds making a total of $17,600 which won't go very far in this day and age of ultra-high bails being set for college students who step out of line.

Although there is no truth to the Airplane split rumour, individual members of the group are busy pursuing their own careers.

Jack and Jorma are travelling around the country as a duo; Gracie is preparing a solo act set up for a nightclub trip; and Marty Balin is trying his artistic talents out on stage and screen.

●

Another rumour states the Morrison and the Doors have gone their separate ways. While this may be true in that Morrison is still on a super-ego trip and his head isn't with the others, as a group they still record and perform together.

The fourth Door, lp, The Soft Parade, contains Touch Me, Wishful Sinful and their latest single Tell All the People. All the cuts feature string and brass accompaniment similar to that used on Touch Me.

By mutual agreeement Howie Vickers has left The Collectors and will be following his career as a vocalist under his own name. He will record for New Syndrome.

This split will allow both Howie and The Collectors more artistic freedom in the creative development of their talent and music. Bill Henderson and Glenn Miller, lead and bass respectfully, will fill the vocal slot for the group.

As I hear it The Collectors will be appearing at Royal Athletic Park on Saturday, July 26th. Should be a bit of all right!!

●

Tommy, the rock opera written and scored by Peter Townshend and The Who, is being bid upon heavily by many Broadway bigwigs, but it is to be doubted that Townshend will let his work of three years be butchered by them.

Most likely he will arrange to produce it himself.

Tommy represents a major advance for rock music as a whole. Through the development of a theme and a character in a series of songs, lasting more than sixty minutes on the album, Townshend has presented the plight and pleasures of a deaf, dumb and blind boy who eventually learns to overcome his handicaps through absorbing the vibrations of music.

A truly remarkable work of art, Tommy should take the place of Hair, as the younger generation's Broadway musical.

Music Students Enrol For Summer Classes

For the seventh successive year a summer school for piano and string students will be conducted in Victoria by Clayton Hare and Dorothy Swetnam on the campus of St. Margaret's School.

The school is open to students at junior, senior and performer levels.

Registration has always been international with many young people coming from places outside the North American continuent.

This year students have enrolled who are domiciled from Nova Scotia to Victoria and the North Pacific United States.

Clayton Hare, violinist, at present in charge of the orchestra and string department at the University of Maine, will instruct string players and direct the student orchestra.

His wife, Dorothy Swetnam, is a widely known pianist, teacher and adjudicator.

She has acted as examiner and adjudicator for the National Guild of Piano Teachers in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Washington State Music Teachers' Association, University of Alberta and at music festivals across Canada.

Enquiries with regard to registration can be made through the secretary, P.O. Box 381, Victoria, or by telephone, 383-5248.

Nude Show 'Just Bore'

NEW YORK (AP) — Oh, Calcutta! the New York show most talked about since it began previews May 11 because it's the nudest of the shows with nudity, opened this week at the off-Broadway Eden Theatre.

All five actors and five actresses are nude at different times, walking and dancing around together, and some of them are nude during the 14 skits which make up the revue format of Oh, Calcutta!

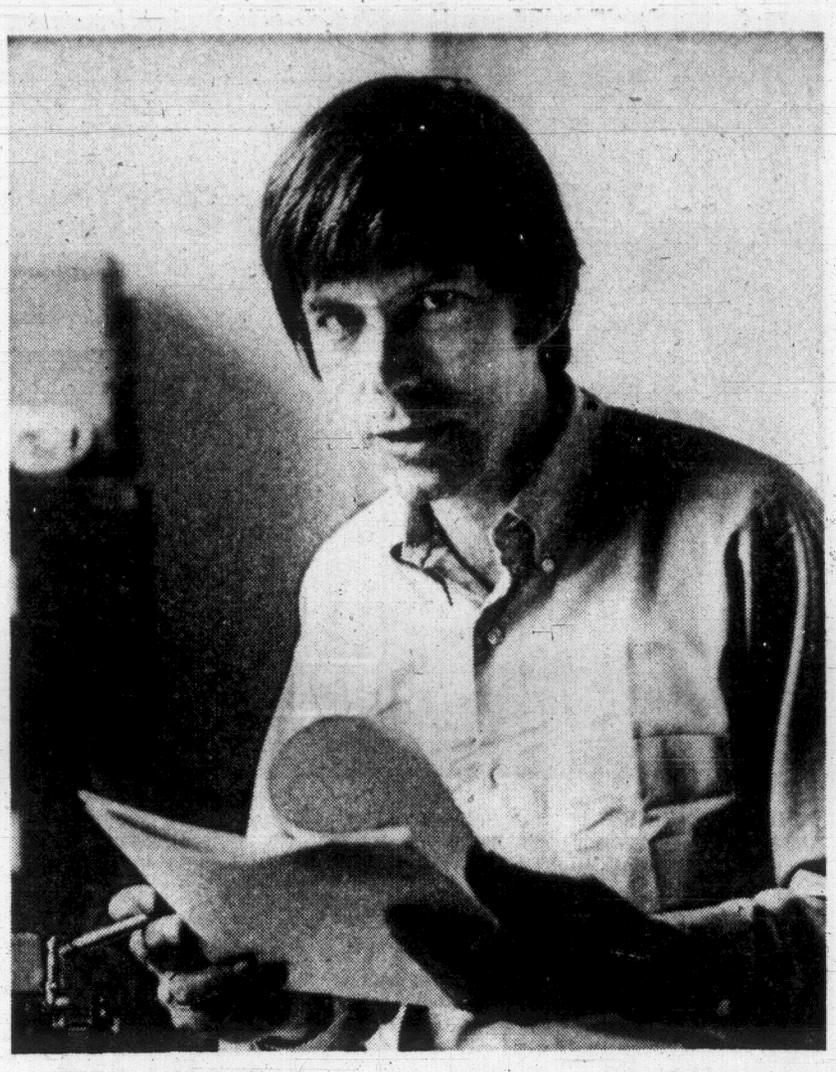

The show, being disconnected skits, makes a disconnected series of impressions. A great deal of it is boring.

NOT VERY FUNNY

The 10 persons in it have beautiful bodies. Far too little is funny. Very little offensive. Surprisingly little is sexually stimulating. The music is fascinating and you would like to hear the cast album so you can concentrate on it. You wonder who wrote what.

The only genuinely funny skit is a roaring, old-fashioned slapstick by four people, a la the Marx Brothers. A couple of slack-faced nurses and two crazy doctors skate around in chairs and jump into each other's laps. They're in a sex experiment laboratory, fastening electrodes onto a naked couple, but the fun is all from the antics of the medics.

Kenneth Tynan, the critic and literary manager of England's National Theatre, put together Oh, Calcutta!

VICTORIA FAIR STAR Christopher Newton, Dr. Ralph Allen's Hamlet, has achieved success at Stratford's Shakespearean Festival and looks to what he considers signs of a burgeoning theatre in Western Canada.

VICTORIA'S HAMLET

A Study in Contrasts

By AUDREY JOHNSON

At the outset, of course, the idea is to talk to Christopher Newton about theatre.

He's the impressive young Canadian actor here to play Hamlet in the Victoria Fair production directed by Dr. Ralph Allen.

Theatre does manage to hold its own as the core of the conversation. But the departures and byways shoot off in all directions exploring a hundred different topics over a couple of hours.

And three or four coffees after the first hand-shake one has the sensation of having known Newton for a long time. Well enough to appreciate his broad intelligence, his mature outlook, his effect of poised serenity.

★ ★ ★

He is a man of intriguing contrasts in certain viewpoints and in his career.

Born in England, his undergraduate work was done at the University of Leeds in Anglo-Saxon archaelogy which seems a far cry from the theatre that has become his profession — indeed, a bent in an almost-opposite direction.

But there came a switch when he went to the United States and received his Master's degree from the University of Illinois in English and Theatre.

★ ★ ★

Christopher Newton is intrigued by politics: "As a matter of fact I'm a card-carrying member of the Liberal party," he admits.

An analogy between politics and theatre is not difficult to find, however.

Nor would it create a precedent if he should one day desert the theatre for the political arena where his splendid voice and high degree of empathy — that quality that makes an instant and strong bond between actor and audience — would serve him equally well.

★ ★ ★

Meanwhile he has the satisfaction of pursuing his craft under circumstances he most enjoys.

"I have always been interested in starting things."

At Calgary a year ago, he responded to an invitation to launch, as artistic director, the only permanent professional theatre company in Western Canada.

Theatre Calgary is the outgrowth of a semi-professional group, Mac 14, which in turn was a development of one of the most distinguished amateur theatres in Canada — Betty Mitchell's Workshop 14.

The new company did well in its first year and has set up a full 1969-70 program for its salaried group of actors and technicians.

★ ★ ★

And now in Canada's farthest west city, something else new has beckoned the actor-director.

Victoria Fair, the first bid to establish a professional scale festival in this city, will see performances of Hamlet, Merchant of Venice and Tartuffe in the McPherson Playhouse over a seven-week period.

Starring Newton, Hamlet, designed by Robert Cothran (who designed the sets for Tartuffe, Measure for Measure and Playboy of the Western World) will ring up the curtain on July 11.

"Something very valuable could come of this. Judging by what has happened at Ashland, Ore., and Stratford, it could have an immense effect on the whole community in years to come."

Newton has a thorough personal knowledge of both North American festivals.

University Players clubs, Ashland and Stratford, Ont., have been his only theatrical schools.

At Ashland he spent two seasons as a member of the company.

★ ★ ★

Then he decided to try his luck with the Stratford Shakespearean Festival because it was regarded by leading American critics as this continent's finest classical company.

He auditioned at Stratford in 1960 and was turned down.

Not discouraged, he went to Toronto and soon found a place with Canadian Players which at one point was an offshoot of the Stratford company.

"I had a lot to learn," he says. "My voice was all right but I didn't know how to use my body. I didn't move well, couldn't fence — things like that."

After three years of Canadian Players' tours and television engagements, Newton came to the west coast in 1963 to play in the Vancouver International Festival.

He played Algernon in The Importance of Being Ernest and in Shaw's Saint Joan — "What a terrible production that was," he shudders.

Nevertheless it was a milestone in his career for in the role of the Dauphin of France was Mike Nichols, who also was handling his first directing job with the Wilde comedy.

And subsequently, Nichols invited Newton to play a lead in his New York production of The Knack.

Success at Stratford followed, with leading roles in the 1967 centennial tour of Gogol's Government Inspector and Twelfth Night and the winning of the Tyrone Guthrie Award as an outstanding young actor of the company.

★ ★ ★

In 1968 critics acclaimed Newton for his performances as Oberon in Midsummer Night's Dream and Artemis in The Three Musketeers.

Now his attention is turned to the early signs of a burgeoning theatre in the west.

"We should — and we can — work together to make certain that this development is well-nourished and mutually beneficial," he says.

He shares with Ralph Allen the confident expectation of a healthy exchange of theatre personnel and productions between Calgary and Victoria — a positive move toward a most desirable goal.

SPENDING SET

WASHINGTON (WP)—The house public works committee paved the way Tuesday for plans to complete the financially-troubled John F. Kennedy Centre for the performing arts, approving additional federal and private spending of $20 million.

The measure, passed by a 22-6 vote and sent on for action by the full house, would provide government matching funds and bonding authority to help meet a total of $66.2 million now estimated as the full cost of building the centre by 1971.

Summer Love Story

Summer and sunshine and falling in love — together with music and a magic piano — that's just about everything there is to know about Salad Days, Bastion Theatre's July-August musical.

It will be presented by Heritage Court, the name given to the whole Provincial Museum complex, in the museum's Newcombe Auditorium, from June 30 nightly through Aug. 23.

The Julian Slade-Dorothy Reynolds six-year record hit of the London stage ran for 2,290 performances, was seen by over 1,500,000 people and has been performed in 14 overseas countries.

Bastion's production of Salad Days features resident professional actors on the local scene as well as the fresh talent of the young company, on stage and back stage.

Lead comedy roles are being played by Peter Mannering, Stuart Kent, Dorothy Hosie and Owen Foran.

Barbara Desprez, who recently played Eliza Doolittle in the Nanaimo Theatre Group's production of My Fair Lady, plays Jane opposite John Heath's Timothy.

Wendy Packard and Barry Flatman play the other young couple, Fiona and Nigel.

Others featured are Mark Smith, Gina Sinclair, Tom Cox, Helen Simpson - Baikie and Charles Harper.

Another Bastion Theatre activity this summer will be the presentation of children's theatre in the two downtown city squares.

The all-time favorite, Three Little Pigs, by Ralph Kendall and the musical show, Box of Smiles, by John Hirsch and Victor Davies, are selections to be performed daily — one each in Centennial and Bastion Squares.

They will start about July 10 and be performed by a company consisting of Ramona McBean, Sylvia Hosie, Bill Hosie, Margaret Martin, Mark Smith, Barry Flatman, Gina Sinclair, Kyra Smitz, Paul Croy and Cam More.

Children's theatre performances are free. Tickets for Salad Days are on sale at Bastion's office, 30 Bastion Square, and at the Provincial Museum.

Chaplin Girl Weds Greek

CORSIER (AP) — One of Charlie Chaplin's five daughters was married in this Swiss village today and he said it was a "funny feeling."

Josephine Chaplin, 20, married wealthy Greek fur dealer Nicholas Sistovaris, 31, in this vine-growing village after a romance that started five years ago in Athens.

Charlie Chaplin and his wife Oona, daughter of American playwright Eugene O'Neil, attended the simple civil ceremony in the Corsier Registrar's office.

Josephine was the first of the five daughters to marry.

Chaplin, smiling, sat at his daughter's side during the 20-minute ceremony. Oona was visibly nervous and at one time seemed to be on the verge of tears.

Music Teachers Meet Here

The 17th biennial convention of the Canadian Federation of Music Teachers' Associations will be held in Victoria for the first time this summer.

Sessions will take place at the Empress Hotel July 7-11 and will include lectures, clinics, concerts and visits to the University of Victoria School of Fine Arts and Victoria Conservatory of Music.

Appearing in special concerts will be the Nelson Boys' Choir, mezzo soprano Phyllis Mailing with Hugh McLean, American pianist Harold Zabrack, the Purcell String Quartet of Vancouver and the Victoria Conservatory Trio.

Guest lecturers include Zabrack, noted British musicologist Dr. Howard Ferguson and Cortland Hultberg, director of the electronic studio and chamber singers at the University of B.C.

Victoria branch of the B.C. Registered Music Teachers' Association, headed by Rodney Webster, is working closely with the federation on arrangements.

Sounds Purple, Vulgar But Good

By BERYL PROUDMAN

Holiday for Harpsichord; Biggs; MS 6878; ML 6278.

Ever an evangelist, E. Power Biggs is constantly thinking of new ways of bringing good music into the lives of more people.

Holiday for Harpsichord is packed with familiar tunes short enough to attract even the uninitiated and bright enough to appeal to light-music fans.

Biggs' pleasure at adding new dimensions to old favorites is communicated through the lively, somewhat purple, sometimes vulgar, but musically authentic recording.

Mongrel-like, his pedal-harpsichord combines the strength of two instrumental families. It has the tonal variety and percussive attack of a purebred harpsichord plus the sustaining pedal-scope of the revered organ.

Aristocratic? No. Scholarly? Never. But fun, vivid and persuasive it certainly is.

Military attack and bugling echo-effects herald Schubert's March Militaire, and a humorous touch suggests a circus or toy-soldier parade.

A similar martial air surrounds Chopin's pounding Polonaise in A Major in which wide-spread vari-toned chords add to the splendour.

Completely different and impossible on a regular harpsichord is the heavily-chorded Prelude in C Minor which follows. Here the percussive attack is minimized and sustained tone emphasized.

The old-world charm of the equally famous Prelude in A Major is fully exploited on this ancient instrument.

Boccherini's "celebrated" minute in the same key benefits from the antiquity too but the harpsichord's ability to bring out distinct parts, unfortunately exposes a rather dull lower line.

Diamond in The Groove

Bagpipes can be heard in Beethoven's rowdy Turkish March and the passing discords are played with obvious relish.

Falla's Ritual Fire Dance is played with such dramatic intensity that it has almost the effect of a cartoon impresion, and the repetitious whirlings lend a sort of hypnotic montony to it.

Rondo Alla Turca, more than any other piece recorded, shows the tone variations available on the instrument.

One of the most successful numbers is Hall of the Mountain King from Grieg's Peer Gynt.

From the first note the truculent Troll atmosphere of the underground kingdom is captured.

Biggs, with his disarming charm admits that to some the recording may sound like heresy but many will welcome this robust 20th Century addition to the harpsichord repertoire.

SHERIFF ROLES EASY

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Recently a burglary suspect peered into the face of the investigating detective and inquired, "Say — aren't you that actor on TV?"

"Nah, I just look like him," said the detective.

Such inquiries are sometimes put to Sheriff's Deputy Michael O'Shea of Ventura County, but most people never suspect that an actor would be doing actual police work. He usually introduces himself as Michael Shaw to forestall recognition.

Film fans and students of the late, late show will recall O'Shea as the bustling, fast-talking star of Lady of Burlesque, Mr. District Attorney, Captain China, Fixed Bayonets and a few dozen other films. He also co-starred with James Dunn and Bill Bishop in a television series, It's a Great Life.

O'Shea now lives in this hilly community 30 miles north of Hollywood with his wife, actress Virginia Mayo, and their daughter Mary, 16. He still takes an occasional acting job, but his principal activity is working full time for the Ventura County Sheriff's department.

What's an actor doing in police work? O'Shea explained that it's the fulfilment of an ambition that dates to his New York childhood.

Legends of India Live In Stylized Drawings

By GORDON RICE

Folk art from India, paintings, drawings and batiks will be on sale at the Pandora's Box Gallery from now until June 26. The material was organized by K. S. Annand of the Konarak Gallery of New Delhi, and some of it will be on view throughout the summer.

Annan has done a great deal to encourage the village arts in the New Delhi area. One of his innovations was the introduction of the Indonesian technique of batik making to his own part of the world. The Indian folk artists have adapted this colorful dyed cloth medium remarkably well. Here you'll find representations of the old Indian legends in extremely stylized form: pictures of animals, dancing figures, musicians and actors.

LIKE CARICATURE

By stylized I mean the representation of the animals, for instance, is highly abstract, like caricature. A cow, in this kind of folk art, comes across like the very essence of a cow, but you realize the artist never sat down next to the cow and asked her to pose. The method of drawing anything in this sort of folk culture is handed down as a tradition.

Sometimes the traditional ways of representing animals can evolve into something quite abstract. Chinese characters were originally pictures of things, certain North American Indian designs symbolize figures which today we wouldn't recognize without some training. It's interesting to discover that this "East Indian" folk art displays forms which are recognizable to all of us.

The batik pictures have a sturdy, basic look about them. Some of this may be due to the regular emphasis on strong triangles, squares, circles, dots and stripes. Everything seems to have been made with a direct immediate touch. Yet nothing is rigid about the work, or stiff; it's both vivid and soft, without being garish.

One large cloth depicting men's heads, resembles Picasso's style of drawing, expecially in the treatment of the profiles. It's quite remarkable. Every face has a different texture, and a different color, although only four pigments have been used, black, white, yellow ochre and brick red. Combinations of these produce gray lavender, orange tans, etc.

Those who saw the show of Indian classical painting at the city's Art Gallery a few months ago will find this work quite a surprise. It lacks the delicacy and refinement of the court arts, naturally, but its homespun, honest look will be just as charming, and perhaps even more approachable for some.

There are also ten examples here of antique folk painting. These were done with fine brushes on handmade paper. They date from the 1800s and although authentic folk art, are closer in style and sophistication to the classical court paintings. They are small and jewel-like.

SIGNS ON WALLS

A third group of works consists of wax drawings on paper and these are new works. Villagers in this region paint decorative figures and signs on the walls of their homes, during festivals. It was Annand's idea to encourage certain villagers to transfer their designs to paper, thus preserve them, and also encourage a profitable craft.

Sometimes a venture like this eventually turns an authentic folk art into a second-rate imitation of the original, expecially when the imitations begin to sell like hotcakes to tourists or decorators. At this point, however, the wax drawings, like the batiks, don't exude an air of commercialism. They have the self-absorbed, even mysterious look, some of them, of our up-island petroglyphs. One would think that, matted and framed, some of these crayon drawings would have a very durable appeal.

INDIAN ARTS

One must be satisfied not to enquire too deeply into the meanings and the symbolism underlying the themes depicted in these Indian folk arts. Folklore, mythology, and religion in India is so complex, diverse and ancient.

Neogy, an Indian art historian, once remarked that a scholar might spend his whole life studying just a tiny part of this vast heritage. But then India is the oldest, and largest, surviving civilization. It is a pleasure to see these fragments of a great tradition.

WEEK ON MARKETS

Worst Is Yet to Come

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The big June slump continued on Canadian stock markets this week and with no sign of a break in sight, many experts are painting a gloomy picture — for at least the immediate future.

Markets have fallen every trading session in June — 14 days — except one.

And the worst is yet to come, according to many experts.

They noted that an increase in trading volume Friday could be the beginning of a major sell-off.

Unless some positive news comes — and quickly — Canadian and American markets could be in for a serious setback.

Tight money, high interest rates and increasing inflation originating in the United States touched off the slump.

Since Canadian markets traditionally follow those in the United States, the U.S. economy looms large in the future of both markets.

And the outlook for U.S. economy looks very gloomy.

William Martin, U.S. Federal Reserve Board chairman, Friday predicted "much pain and suffering" before the currrent wave of inflation ends.

One of the larger American banks said it has taken "drastic steps" to discourage borrowing.

A private economist in the U.S. forecast a spread of monetary and fiscal restraints from financial markets to the basic consumer level of economy.

In Canada, many companies are cutting back or postponing planned expansion programs, unable or unwilling to pay the high interest rates for the needed capital.

Lack of expansion undoubtedly will depress corporate earnings, the main guide of public investment.

Some banks are refusing loans — individual and corporate — to new customers.

Interest rates are expected to be increased again.

And if this happens the noose, already tight on money, will be tightened even more.

But there is still hope by many that both economy and stock markets will pull out of their slumps.

Canadian and American governments are both battling inflation with large-scale attacks.

Any encouraging news such as a U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam could send markets on a long-term rally.

On index at Toronto, industrials fell 5.40 to 178.35, golds 11.40 to 230.39, base metals 4.82 to 106.93 and Western oils 21.26 to 255.27. Volume was 15,883,000 shares compared with 23,465,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 699 to 163.

On the Canadian Montreal exchanges, the composite index fell 1.96 to 177.45. Combined volume was 4,702,000 shares compared with 6,219,000 last week. Losses outnumbered advances 287 to 69.

NO GOOD NEWS ON WALL STREET

NEW YORK (WP) — There wasn't many good news for Wall Street this week. Stock prices fell sharply to new lows for the year, a presidential news conference went by without any help on the vital interest rate front and periodic trading rallies quickly ran out of steam.

By the end of the week, the Dow Jones industrial average was down 18.68 points to 876.16. Only three of the 30 stocks in the average were able to buck the trend and post gains. The other 27 all lost ground with deficits ranging up to 4½ points in Alcoa.

Volume for the week slipped to 56.43 million shares from the 59.85 million turned over a week earlier. Turnover tended to pick up on the rallies, but the interest did not last long.

In the overall box score, declining stocks swamped advances by 1,344 to 279, a better reading than the 1,501 issues down and 160 up a week earlier. There were 11 new 1969 highs, down from 18, and 790 new lows, up from 721.

Tight money was the centre of attention, with troop withdrawals from Vietnam taking a decided second place.

Selective Lending Only

TORONTO (CP) — Want a loan to buy 100 shares on margin of a high-flying stock? Or a second-hand car you don't need desperately?

Perhaps you're looking for a low-interest loan to lump your debts and pay back some higher-interest finance company borrowing.

Chances are you won't get one for any of these purposes, or a similar one, from any Canadian chartered bank these days, although your chances would have been good even a few weeks ago.

"We're not turning down any special class of borrtwer," said a Toronto-Dominion Bank spokesman Friday. "But we're being more selective in who we lend to. A fellow who wants a loan to play the market these days is out of luck."

As the biggest lenders in the land, banks are primarily responsible if credit gets out of hand.

To stem the credit flow the Bank of Canada this month raised the chartered banks' secondary reserve ratio—the amount of easily-converted short-term paper they hold—to a minimum eight per cent of dollar deposits from seven per cent. This takes about $169,000,000 out of circulation for loans.

If the small-loan customer is not being turned down point-blank, he is not being pulled in the door to borrow as he once was.

A few weeks ago the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce withdrew its "red convertible loan" posters from most branches.

"It seemed the realistic thing to do,"

Forced Savings Loom

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — William McChesney Martin, chairman of the United States Federal Reserve Board, Friday warned that if the U.S. does not adopt stiffer fiscal discipline against inflation, it may have to exact forced savings to pay the government's bills.

The most outspoken U.S. apostle of a sound currency and fiscal responsibility issued his warning to the closing session of the American Bankers Association monetary conference.

He said he was not predicting collapse of the U.S. economy, but he insisted on the need for an even slower pace than foreseen by President Nixon's policies.

"If we get inflation as a way of life, we may get government moves toward forced savings," he said. "These are fighting words."

U.S. Conglomerates: Darlings to Doghouse

By STERLING GREEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The merger-minded conglomerates, yesterday's darlings of the stock market, are in the anti-trust doghouse today.

Their great clusterings of corporate power could reshape the United States economy in a decade or two, President Nixon's advisers fear—and in the process, damage initiative and free competition.

Conglomerate leaders say it isn't so, that the fear is exaggerated. Instead of harm, they say, conglomerates aid the economy.

Whatever the facts, the four-year-old merger movement roars on at record speed.

Government and private companies, including some of 5,000 and 6,000 independent companies, including some of the oldest and proudest names in industry, will vanish in mergers this year.

And if the pattern holds, sound and solvent managements will go down struggling, in many cases, to save their corporate identities from surprise take-overs by conglomerate raiders.

Against this "tax-propelled merger mania," as it is called by Nixon's anti-trust chief, Richar McLaren, the administration is swinging its anti-trust clubs-lawsuits and legislation to close tax loopholes—with a vigor not seen since the days of Theodore Rossevelt in the early 1900s.

PLAN REFORMS SOON

The tax reforms that McLaren wants will be enacted this session, Representative Wilbur D. Mills, and Arkansas Democrat who is chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, told The Associated Press. But Mills, the top tax man in Congress, added a warning:

"That won't stop them, you know. We will take the tax motivation out of the merger drive, but the mergers will go on."

The merger-minded aggressors of industry agree.

Still the certified elite of big business, whose companies as well as prestige are endagered, view tax reforms as roadblocks in the conglomerates' way.

Conglomerates are corporations that exist mainly to make money by owning other corporations which have little or no relationship to each other. In the conglomerate era, the same company-International Telephone and Telegraph, for example—makes bread, cuts lumber, rents cars, runs hotels, sells computer and transatlantic cable service, and builds houses.

In anti-trust suits filed only weeks apart, McLaren has tackled the two greatest conglomerates, ITT and Ling-Temco-Vought-LTV. Previous anti-trust chiefs assumed that existing anti-monopoly laws could not touch conglomerate mergers. McLaren believes otherwise.

CHANGE EVERYTHING?

Some officials predicted—especially after the biggest banks prepared to move into trade, insurance and manufacturing by forming one-bank holding companies—that giant conglomerated concentrations of economic power would change the face of the American free enterprise system.

The conglomerates, on the other hand, believe they are being smeared by "innuendo" and that they actually pose no threat of economic concentration. They point out what they consider the benefits of diversification and the likelihood that mergers can generate increased competition by providing financial strength for member companies.

The biggest U.S. conglomerates are concerned with $2 billion or $3 billion in annual sales. Their executives, when accused of rapacity, point out that they are dwarfed by such non-conglomerates as General Motors and A. T. and T.

But the conglomerates are growing, hand over fist. The first billion-dollar corporation to be gobbled up by a conglomearte was Jones and Laughlin Steel Co., taken over by LTV last year. That merger has been hit by one of McLaren's bone-shaking anti-trust suits.

MERGERS GET BIGGER

Even bigger take-overs have been tried, and more are planned.

It no longer takes two to make a merger. The conglomerate makes a "tender offer" for the target company's stock, at what appears to be a price far above the market value. It aims the offer directly at the stock-holders, over the heads of the management.

If it can induce enough stockholders to part with their stock, the conglomerate can elbow the old management aside and move in as new owner.

Perfectly legal. But the take-over tactics have been attacked on several grounds, including:

● Many acquisition deals are swung by unorthodox debt financing which conservative financiers call "funny money." The stockholders receive, in exchange for their shares, mixed kits of securities including the raider's stock; debentures, which amount to long-term promissory notes, and stock-purchase warrants. The real worth of the package is often conjectural and is fully redlizable only in the future.

● The use of debentures instead of cash or stock opens up tax loopholes for the acquiring corporation—thus making possible the inflated price it can pay for the takeover.

● The tendering stockholder not only gets the favorable capital gains tax treatment for his profit on the exchange, but can difer the tax payment until the debentures mature—15, 20 or more years later.

● The sprawling, many-leveled corporate habitats which may result are glued together with debt. But—if the target companies are cleverly seclected—the conglomerate can report enhanced earnings with each new acquisition, in a sort of chain letter growth.

● Such external expansion could mask in the corporate bookeeping a failure of the conglomerate to grow internally. What happens, however, when the chain letter runs out—when there are no more acquisitions? Nobody knows, yet.

Courtships Abound But Few Marriages

CHERRY HILL, N..J (AP) — The merger movement in the United States reached the wholesale stage Friday. Seventeen companies looking for mates completed hotel-room courtships with 53 prospective brides. Object, corporate matrimony.

There were 145 separate flirtations in three days, lasting two hours each. Probably one-third of them will result in further dates. Only a handful may end in weddings.

"We had more negotiations in one place at one time than have ever been held before, I believe," said Harlan J. Brown, president of H. J. Brown International, Inc., Washington, D.C., merger-making firm that organized and planned the multiple matings.

"There may be only a half-dozen acquisitions finally closed. The ratio of negotiations to closings averages about 25 to 1."

But to Brown's surprise, four of the suitor companies found themselves invited into negotiations by four other acquiring companies. The pursuers themselves were being pursued.

Each of the 17 merger-minded bridegrooms had dates with up to 16 of the prospective brides.

The latter had been selected in advance by the Brown company as having special technical abilities of interest to the acquirers.

Because all the negotiations had to be conducted with secrecy, Brown dispersed the meetings in 20 widely-separated rooms.

The 17 acquiring companies were mostly small to medium in size, ranging from $2,500,000 to $150,000,000 in annual sales. Each had received in advance from the Brown organization a directory of 400 acquisition prospects in this region of the U.S. The catalogue contained a one-page printed description of each prospect, but identified them only by code numbers until the negotiations actually were scheduled.

Home 'Nerve' Centre

VANCOUVER (CP) — A communications centre combining a wide range of technology will be standard equipment for the average home 15 years from now, the annual conference of the Audit Bureau of Circulation was told this week.

"It will become the primary source of information and entertainment, delivering on signal both still and moving pictures as well as the spoken word," said Herbert D. Maneloveg, vice-president of Batten, Barten, Durstine and Osborn, a New York advertising agency.

"When you want to watch a television program you will tune your set directly to a satellite. You will have a choice of perhaps as many as 25 programs of all varieties on all subjects from many parts of the globe."

He said other information will be transmitted to the communications centre by laser beam and advertising will be coupled with merchandising.

PRESS A BUTTON

"After you see a detergent you are convinced you can't do without, you can press a button at home and order it."

Movies and best-selling novels will also appear on the centre's screen. And if the people are lazy, the books will even be read to them. People will be able to select the sections of news they want to hear such as national, international, local, sports and business news.

"Along with the ads, you will be able to select the newspaper sections you want to buy, and all this too will be audited by ABC," he said, "and the advertiser will pay accordingly."

Star to Switch Toronto Landmark

TORONTO (CP) — Beland Honderich, president and publisher of Toronto Star Ltd., this week said the newspaper will move to a new 25-storey office tower on the Toronto waterfront.

Construction of the $31 million project at the foot of Yonge Street will begin in September. Publication of The Star at its new headquarters will begin on completion late in 1971.

Following the move, the newspaper's present 23-storey building on downtown King Street West will be demolished to make way for a new development.

Management and construction of the new building — to be called Toronto Star Centre — will be by Olympia and York Developments Ltd., the firm which recently purchased the Star's downtown property.

Honderich said the decision to locate on the Star's eight-acre waterfront property at No. 1 Younge Street was dictated "by our distribution requirements and also our strong belief that in the years immediately ahead, the harbor area will become the new and exciting focal point for all of Metropolitan Toronto."

Drawing Rights Plan 'Dangerous'

By JONATHAN C. RANDAL
The Washington Post

BASEL, SWITZERLAND — The Bank for International Settlements (BIS) has warned that rapid adoption of the controversial Special Drawing Rights (SDR) plan for increasing world monetary reserves could dangerously weaken the badly shaken monetary system.

"One waits to see by experience if Gresham's Law will operate," the bank's annual report said pessimistically, "and, if so, what bad money will drive out what good—gold, dollars or SDR's?"

The clear implication was that the dollar and SDR's—a new form of international money which could be used to settle inter-government debts along with gold and foreign exchange holdings—would succumb long before gold.

Jelle Zijlstra, chairman of the BIS board of directors, also warned in a speech to the annual meeting here that SDR's were no panacea for the western world's monetary ills.

REITERATED WARNINGS

"They cannot be expected to resolve the problem fully," he said, "so long as gold is kept as a valued medium reserve."

Both the speech and report reflected the conservatism of the BIS, a clearing house mainly for European central banks whose dislike of monetary tinkering is symbolized by BIS reckoning of accounts in Swiss gold francs.

Sometimes called the "central bankers' central bank," the BIS reiterated its standard warnings: only avoidance of inflation and balance of payments deficits and prompt parity changes for over—and under-valued currencies can end justified doubts about the monetary system's ability to survive.

The BIS's obvious distaste for SDR's was yet another indication of European resistance to United States hopes of arranging a rapid and large activation of the world's first internationally-managed reserve asset.

The report and Zijlstra's speech stressed dissatisfaction with the United States, French, British and West German efforts to handle their monetary problems.

HAD TO BE SAID

Underscoring this unhappiness with the troubled state of four such important world currencies, a ranking BIS official said privately: "It was our duty to say what we said.

"We know the politicians are under considerable constraint," he added, "but this should not discharge us from saying what had to be said."

FEWER CAMPERS CAMPING: ROUGHING IT GONE WEST

By ANNE ROBERTS

EDMONTON (CP) — "Roughing it" on a camping trip is going out of style.

Holiday trailers are replacing tents and sleeping bags as more and more Canadians enjoy the comforts of home while camping.

The sales boom enjoyed by trailer manufacturers in Western Canada for three years has, however, caused a strain on tourist facilities in provincial and national parks.

The more expensive units are equipped with all modern conveniences including toilets and showers.

To make use of these luxuries campers require electricity and water hookups and sewer systems in the parks.

Arnold Dickson of Dickson Motors Ltd., an Edmonton trailer retailer, says his sale of trailers increased threefold in three years.

CAN'T KEEP UP

"We have 2,000 orders, more than we can manufacture, for holiday trailers," he says.

One company in Edmonton sold 200 trailers in 1966, 300 in 1967, 637 in 1968 and 600 by June, 1969. Another sold 250 in 1968 and 700 by June, 1969.

Prices of these units range from $400 to $1,400, with a tendency toward the more expensive models, says Dickson.

Bob Thompson of the Alberta travel bureau says there are 5,377 spaces with full facilities—electricity, water and sewers—available for camping trailers in the province.

W. T. Galliver, administrative officer of the Alberta lands and forests department, says there are an additional 20,000 spaces for "random parking," not zoned into lots or with plug-ins or sewers.

"We are getting pressure from some people to have more formal facilities," he says.

"Once people have used full facilities, they want it in all the parks.

"We are trying to get away from formalized camping. It pleases a minority but does not serve the majority."

He says it is better to have 10 spaces with simple facilities than one with all the conveniences. Many people were buying the luxurious trailers only as status symbols in competition with their neighbors.

The manufacturers and retailers of holiday trailers disagree.

Art Foster of Travelaire Trailer Manufacturing Ltd. says people have more leisure time and get paid more. Tourists want good facilities in return for the money they spend, he says.

Edward Bryant of the Alberta travel bureau says he has maintained there are not enough facilities for trailers in Alberta.

Thompson says 30,000 trailers were given permits to use the national parks in Alberta in 1968. Foreign tourists with trailers, mainly Americans, increased 28.5 per cent over 1967 in Jasper National Park.

Galliver says the government will concentrate on more random parking facilities and in new parks they will not include space for formal facilities.

"There might be a demand for them, but we won't have the money to supply the facilities.

"We've been pleasing only a minority too long."

Natrusco Ltd.

National Trust Co. Ltd. had net profit of $1.15 million or 62 cents a share in the six months ended April 30, compared with $1 million or 57 cents in the similar period a year ago.

Announcing the results, the company also said it will increase the interest paid on its special savings accounts to 6½ per cent from 6 effective July 1.

It said savings deposits for the six-month period rose to $216.78 million from $202.4 million while total guaranteed accounts increased $28.9 million to $397 million.

Ministers Who Talk More to Press Than House Draw Opposition Ire

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — As Parliament heads into the home stretch, opposition MPs are becoming more angry with their allegations that cabinet ministers are bypassing the Commons to talk to the press.

The House is almost certain to hear more about this Monday when David Lewis (NDP—York South) says he will "raise Cain" with External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp for not first reporting to Parliament on his Scandinavian tour.

If Mr. Lewis raises the issue, it will be the third successive day for the Commons to hear charges that cabinet ministers are offending the House by giving more details to the press than to Parliament.

Mr. Sharp was sharply criticized by Mr. Lewis Friday, when the NDP member heard that the external affairs minister was holding a 4 p.m. press conference before he discussed his tour with Parliament. He moved that the minister make a statement to the Commons at that time but the motion was ruled out of order.

"I can't understand why the government treats this House in such cavalier fashion," said Mr. Lewis when he proposed the motion.

"Every time there is an important matter we hear about it through the press first."

OLSON UNDER FIRE

A day earlier, Gerald W. Baldwin (PC—Peace River) complained that Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson gave information to a newspaper which he did not give to the House.

"The practice about which I am now complaining has gone on continuously since the session started," said Mr. Baldwin. "It is part of what I suggest is a calculated effort to downgrade the functions and role of the House of Commons and of Parliament."

Mr. Olson denied saying any more to the newspaper than he did to Parliament. "There is no one in this House who has more respect for his institution than I have," he said.

Although increasing recently, the complaints by opposition MPs have been heard frequently since the current session began. During the Air Canada strike, Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey came under fire on several occasions for allegedly giving more details to television audiences than to MPs.

At that time, Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) described it as a "continuing pattern" by cabinet ministers.

Outside the Commons Friday, Mr. Lewis said Mr. Sharp's press conference "is part of a pattern of this government."

"I get the impression they (cabinet ministers) consider Parliament a waste of time."

While there is no Parliamentary rule calling for ministers to make all major announcements in the House, MPs say there is a long-standing tradition that it be done, when feasible.

"We are going to keep shouting about it," said a Conservative MP. "Otherwise traditions will change."

Pension Problems To Be Aired

OTTAWA (CP) — Pension problems of war veterans will be referred to a Commons committee next week for study and recommendations, Veterans Affairs Minister Jean-Eudes Dube said Friday.

It's about time, Conservative MPs said.

Speaking in a Commons debate on veterans affairs, Mr. Dube said the government is ready to send the Woods report on pensions to the Commons veterans affairs committee, along with a government policy paper. The Woods report is the result of a survey of the organization and work of the Canadian Pension Commission.

The study was made by a special committee under Mr. Justice M. J. Woods, appointed Sept. 8, 1965, and the report was tabled in the Commons March 26, 1968.

Charles H. Thomas (PC—Moncton) said the minister has been promising a government white paper and "immediate action" on the Woods report for so long that it has lost all credibility.

"But that's standard phraseology for this government: action is always going to be taken immediately."

Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin informed the Commons that grain farmers will be eligible for full interest-free cash advances for the crop year beginning Aug. 1 even if they have not repaid advances given for the year ending July 31.

He estimated that $65,000,000 will still be outstanding on July 31. This meant that farmers would be able to borrow about $65,000,000 more in the next crop year than would otherwise be the case.

Mr. Horner said the move is an admission that the government has failed to sell grain.

Speaking in the debate on veterans affairs, Mr. Dube said Canada has "an enviable record" of legislation in this area. His department's annual budget of $400,000,000 was increasing.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Temiskaming) said the government's refusal to act on previous recommendations of the veterans affairs committee "is a disgrace to this country.

TIRANA (AP) — Albania and Sweden have agreed to establish diplomatic relations and exchange ambassadors, the Albanian news agency ATA reported Friday. It said Albania accepted Finmark Tor Lennart as Sweden's ambassador to Albania.

Debate on Rules Changes May Keep Members Sitting

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Government and Opposition began digging in Friday in a confrontation that could keep Parliament sitting overtime into July, debating an effort by the government to get the powers it feels needed to plan parliamentary timetable.

"We're prepared to sit here all summer and all winter," Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin (Peace River) said, warning that the government would have to cut off parliamentary debate with the politically risky device of closure to get its proposed changes in House of Commons rules passed before the summer recess.

•

New Democrats and Creditistes were equally adamant in opposing quick passage of one new rule that would give a majority government power, as a last resort when it could not get the agreement of other parties, to set time limits on parliamentary debate on government legislation.

Reliable sources said the government was equally resolved to push for passage of the changes in rules, even if this kept parliament sitting past June 27 which had been proposed as the last sitting day before the summer recess.

The focus of the confrontation is a proposal that, if passed, would become standing order 75C in the parliamentary rule book.

•

It would give a majority government power to allocate time for debate of legislation in Parliament, but only for one piece of legislation and one stage of debate at a time.

Liberal members of parliament are being briefed on the government's main arguments for the change in rules to prepare them to argue the case in public.

The package of rules changes brought in by the Commons Procedure Committee, with all opposition members dissenting, would provide for allocation of time by agreement among the house leaders of all parties. This provision would become standing order 75A.

If agreement could not be reached among all parties, allocation of time for debate of one stage of one bill could be made if House leaders of a majority, rather than all, parties agreed. This proposed rule, 75B, would have enabled the government to end this year's filibuster by the Creditistes against the omnibus bill Criminal Code amendments.

•

Opposition parties are concentrating their criticism on the proposed rule 75C, which would enable a majority government to end opposition filibusters without resorting to use of closure.

For the Official Opposition, Mr. Baldwin argued that although the government should have the right to use its majority to end a filibuster, it should not be able to do this in a routine way, as part of regular programming of legislation.

NDP spokesman Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre), said the minimum of one day's debate for each stage of a bill, if 75C came into effect, was too short.

With only four sitting days left, two of them allotted to the opposition, before the proposed June 27 recess date, the government would need full opposition co-operation to get the proposed changes through the House.

WHY BOTHER?
Because for what it's costing you in gas alone, Niagara will put a full-size, in-ground swimming pool in your own back yard.
With no down payment. Ten years to pay.
And no more hot, summer safaris to gosh-knows-where for a cool dip.
Then, when you get home, call this number for more details . . . 382-3489.
Fair enough?

Arthur Mayse

One day this fall, if all continues well, a lively second-grader by the name of Florenda Joy Dick will present Royal Jubilee Hospital with a cheque for $3,810.33 on your behalf.

The sum will go toward the purchase of badly-needed heart-monitoring equipment. I expect the unit it helps provide will carry Florenda's name.

I can't think of a finer use for the surplus of the crash rescue fund you piled up to finance the heart surgery that has redeemed a child's life.

The surplus itself stands at $2,717.33 after final settlement that included the hefty United States discount on Canadian dollars. A couple of weeks ago, Mr. and Mrs. David Dick enriched the kitty by a cheque for $1092.60.

This, they explained, was the British Columbia government contribution to hospital care and surgery at Mayo Clinic that brought in bills for upwards of $4,000.

Meanwhile, Florenda is looking forward to her summer holidays with healthy enthusiasm.

She comes to her seventh birthday in July, a happy, pretty little girl to whom those grim days when her life hung in the balance are scarce more than fading memory.

★

For years past, the birds have shared the yield from our two cherry trees.

Our share last year totalled eight reasonably ripe Queen Annes, and four Byngs. The year before, the wild pigeons, robins, crows and lesser fowl left us precisely one pecked cherry.

We have tried to even this unequal balance in various ways.

We've put out water on the theory that the feathered friends were merely thirsty. They used the dish as a finger-bowl after each greedy feast.

Strips of silver foil? Scarecrow? The birds treated all such measures as attempts to amuse them. The trees down by the wildland edge, are too big to net. A friend who tried a bolder experiment told me the stuffed owl he mounted in his own boughs was promptly unstuffed by wrathful crows.

But this year, thanks to a secret weapon, we are getting our rightful portion of the fruit.

This is a compact little walkie-talkie set—a Fathers Day gift from my favorite fishing partner that should make pool-to-pool comunication a cinch.

For the last few days, we've been mounting one unit in a crotch of the close-together cherry trees.

Results of the first test was nothing less than spectacular.

A menacing "meow-w-w!" into the battery powered unit up at the house sent a pack of robins kiting from both trees in panic flight. A pair of crows took off at the next threat to their tail-feathers.

The cherries are ripening nicely now, and except for early-morning raiders, the birds are staying away in droves.

Pretty soon, I expect the smart crows will realize there's no cat attached to that voice from the trees. By that time, though, we hope to have harvested cherries galore!

From Sun River Press at Croton-on-Hudson in New York State, comes a zestful little paperback titled "Best Restaurants of Europe and Israel."

This could be useful to travellers, but perhaps we should put it to the test.

Let's see now . . . Here's Simpson's in the Strand, which is listed as "The chophouse for the kind of food that means 'England' to so many. Roast beef with Yorkshire pudding, delectable roast mutton. It is carved right at your table (you should tip the carver—a shilling is fine) and you cannot believe the quality of this meat! The prices are moderate, even for London; do not omit this place."

Will some travelled Victorian who has eaten at this restaurant be kind enough to report whether it deserves the above high rating?

And also if it doesn't?

"THE THINGS a fellow has to put up with," Sean Getson, 1½, of 2501 Wark, seems to be thinking. "I know, I know—be a gentleman, put up with feminine whims—but honestly. It's enough to put you off girls for life." Two-year-old Teresa Sager, 1109 Kings, is unperturbed—he wouldn't dare hit a lady. This skirmish in the battle of the sexes took place in a Central Park sandbox.

Officer Dragged By Fleeing Car

Youth 'Sort of Panicked'

Two taxi drivers and police combined forces early today to catch the young driver of a car that dragged an Esquimalt police constable for 70 feet along a central Esquimalt street.

Christopher Morgan, 21, of 979 Abbey, told Magistrate William Ostler in court today he "sort of panicked" when approached by Esquimalt Constable Gordon Jenkins outside a dance at the Esquimalt Sports Centre.

"I had an open case of beer in the car," he said.

When Jenkins opened the door to the car which contained five youths it sped away and the constable, his hand caught in the door, was dragged along.

Jenkins hooked his foot under the rear wheel and fell off the swerving car which then sped away on Lyall Street.

CALLED DISPATCHER

Taxi driver Frank Waelti, 279 Westdowne, witnessed the event and radioed his dispatcher.

A second taxi driver, Robert Davies, of 105 Island Highway, took up the 50-mile-an-hour chase and caught the fleeing car on Old Esquimalt Road.

"The taxi drivers did an admirable job," said Esquimalt police Sgt. Arthur Burton today.

In court, Morgan was fined $500 after pleading guilty to dangerous driving. He was also prohibited from driving on any highway in Canada for three years.

"You'd take a chance on killing a policeman rather than getting caught with a case of beer," Ostler told Morgan.

"I didn't know he was hooked in the door," Morgan replied. "I heard him yelling 'Stop,' but I didn't know I was dragging him."

Ostler said in a similar case in England recently the policeman was killed and the man convicted of murder.

"Does that interest you?" he asked.

Jenkins received cuts and bruises to his left hip. He was treated at hospital and released.

Anti-Cool And a Fool!

By BOB MITCHELL

Geza Benko doesn't like Cool-Aid, hippies or long hair.

He intends to apply to City Hall for a part-time job as town fool.

"Right now it's uncertain whether I will get the job, but I intend to go ahead with it.

"I would call it a spare-time job, just until the next mayor has been elected."

Mayor Hugh Stephen said today Benko took the proposal to him last week.

"I told him if he wanted to do this he should send a letter to committee."

The mayor asked that his other comments on Benko's idea be kept off the record.

Benko, a Hungarian immigrant in his late thirties, said during the next few months he intends to campaign on behalf of a certain candidate for mayor of Victoria—he isn't saying which one.

He doesn't expect any financial remuneration for his efforts, and intends to steer clear of any Canada Council grants, such as the one awarded last year to Vancouver's town fool, Joachim Foikis.

Benko recently sparked the short-loved "Freeze Cool-Aid" group which opposed municipal grants to help the youth-run organization help transient youths.

Benko confirmed he recently visited the Cool-Aid house at 953 Balmoral disguised in sunglasses, wig and hippie-style clothes. He found the door locked and tried to get in with a ring of keys he found on the porch.

Cool-aid staff member Charles Ball finally unlocked the door. As Benko entered the house he demanded to see Charles Barber, Victoria Youth Council organizer and main supporter of grants for Cool-Aid

★

When Benko was told Barber was not there, he left, saying he would return.

Ball later said:

"Not many of our kids have Hungarian accents and sound like they're 35. Besides, his own hair showed through his wig at the back."

Benko said his costume would be useful if he became town fool.

"I plan to use this type of disguise on different occasions to embarrass these people."

He said the "Freeze Cool-Aid" movement had failed because "it was turning into a debating society," and because the membership was opposed to running it secretly.

Today Benko was recovering from a motorcycle accident in which he injured his knee Friday. He said he would need a crutch "to get mobile again."

Skiers and Opponents On Collision Course

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Another confrontation between water skiers and their opponents over use of Elk Lake is shaping up for Monday night in the Saanich council chamber.

But while the two sides are expected to be out in force for a public hearing, the rezoning bylaw which they are concerned about will not be specifically dealt with.

Saanich has proposed a number of controls on water skiing, amounting to a tougher attitude towards motorized sports on Elk Lake, one of the most popular recreation areas in the region.

POLICE PERMITS

They include police permits for boats over 10 horsepower, protection of areas designated for swimming and the intake area for water supply to the Saanich Peninsula, specific course for water skiers to follow and penalties including impounding of speedboats on the first offence.

"We are expecting delegations from the ratepayers association, from water skiing associations and from water skiing enthusiasts as well at Monday night's public hearing," said Ald. William Noel, chairman of the parks and outdoor recreation committee.

Feeling has run high against power boats on Elk Lake since unidentified persons in a power boat gunned down a swan earlier this year, although Saanich was considering tighter rules before this incident.

IRRESPONSIBLE FEW

Residents near the lake have called for a ban on power boats, but water ski enthusiasts have been quick to reply that the actions of an irresponsible few should not result in a penalty against all.

Acting Mayor Ald. Leslie Passmore said Friday there will be a public discussion on the proposed changes but the bylaw itself won't be submitted.

"We will invite comments so we can get some idea of what the final bylaw should be," he said.

"We are looking further into the bylaw, reconsidering the wording, and would like to get opinions."

Houses Escape Blaze

A grass fire blazed over four acres of bush on Mount Tolmie Friday, threatening several Mayfair Drive homes.

The blaze, which started low on the Richmond Avenue side of the hill and was fanned by 30-M.P.H. winds, was extinguished by the Saanich fire department before it damaged any property. Fourteen firemen from four trucks spent more than three hours putting out the flames in the tinder-dry bush area, and mopping up.

Don Robbins, 3490 Mayfair Drive, said the fire was only about 15 feet from his house when firemen extinguished it.

"If my house had caught fire, probably three or four others nearby would have gone up too—mine is cedar siding, and tinder dry like everthing else up here," he said.

Robbins said a group of "willing volunteers" helped him move 80 per cent of his furniture out onto his front lawn when it seemed sure his house would burn.

ENTER SUMMER COOLLY

Summer arrived quietly at 6:55 this morning bringing cool, 65-degree temperatures and brisk westerly wind.

Today, the longest of the year with sunset at 9:19 p.m. was overcast and dismal. Clouds may disappear for a short time this evening.

The weather office prodicts rain for Sunday and a continuation of chilly weather for a few days at least.

Hours of daylight will decrease by about two minutes a day from now until Dec. 21, shortest day of the year.

Bet Shop Still Open Despite Police Moves

Victoria's off-track betting shop hasn't lost a day of business since its manager, Vern Geisler, was remanded without plea Thursday on a charge of keeping a common betting house.

The Victoria office of R. T. Enterprises and nine in Vancouver will remain open "unless the courts declare it illegal or until the federal government passes an amendment to the Criminal Code declaring this type of operation illegal," said the company's owner, Bill Wosk of Vancouver.

$100 BAIL

Wosk is free on $100 bail and seven shop managers are out on bail of $50, after seven Vancouver betting shops wer raided Wednesday.

Charges include keeping a common betting house, bookmaking, and conspiracy to keep a common betting house.

Business — placing bets at Exhibition Park in Vancouver for a fee — is "below normal" since the raids, said Wosk.

Exam Theft Decision Next Week

It will be at least Monday, and possibly later, before a decision is reached on the fate of students involved in the theft of departmental exams from Esquimalt Senior Secondary.

District Superintendent of Schools A. J. Longmore said today the decision rests with the B.C. board of examiners, the provincial body responsible for exam makeup and security.

"What I have found out and what the school has found out has all been turned over to the board of examiners."

The exams went missing earlier this week. Officials close to the investigation carried out by the school and department of education said Friday they knew who was involved.

Copter Flips; Three Unhurt

A Victoria pilot and his two passengers were rescued uninjured Friday after their helicopter flipped over on landing near Chutanli Lake, 120 miles northwest of Quesnel.

RCMP flew in to rescue Rodger Mann of 10195 Resthaven and passengers Tom Garrish, 19, of Oliver, and Duncan McCulloch, 19, of North Vancouver, after a B.C. Forest Service aircraft spotted the Vancouver Island Helicopters Ltd. craft.

Welfare March Heads to Ottawa

Even "if it takes two months to get there," the Victoria Low Income Group plans to leave Monday for Ottawa to present a brief to Welfare Minister John Munro.

The delegation, representing old-age pensioners, welfare mothers and employable welfare recipients, will travel slowly, stopping in towns to appeal for funds to continue the next leg of the journey, said Walter Olszewski, group president.

Originally only three representatives planned to hitch-hike their way to Ottawa but when other interested welfare clients came forward and someone offered a car, the idea of a caravan was born.

"We were going to get hotel rooms for the old-age pensioners while the rest of us slept in tents along the way but when I asked one pensioner he said, 'No sir, I'd enjoy sleeping in a tent,'" said Olszewski.

HOPES TO GET MORE

He explained that the caravan hopes to pick up more welfare people as they go along to present a good-sized pressure group by the time it reaches Ottawa.

Demands in the brief include: Pressure on the provincial government to pay medical costs for pensioners and low income patients; uniform welfare rates across the country; legal action against allegedly negative and abusive attitudes of welfare workers; end to discrimination against welfare clients in housing; and free university education for welfare children with ability.

Everybody's An Esquimalt Buccaneer

Every kid in Esquimalt must have turned out for the Buccaneer Day parade through the municipality this morning.

Ever second kid was in it.

Pirates, bunnies, bees, majorettes and a host of other little animals pranced up and down Esquimalt Road hanging off floats or running along beside them.

A salmon barbecue, baseball game, lacrosse tournament, garden club flower show, and golden age tea were planned for this afternoon.

An adult dance begins in the Esquimalt Sports Centre curling rink at 9 p.m. following a variety show.

Speedy Tommie Smith May End Track Career In Race Here Tonight

Tommie Smith, the super-star of American track circles, could be making his final appearance as an amateur at Centennial Stadium tonight.

Scheduled to run the 200 metres and, perhaps one other event, in the international track and field meet co-sponsored by the Victoria YM-YWCA and The Daily Times, Smith is considering a pro football career and is currently talking terms with Los Angeles Rams.

If he doesn't reach an agreement with the Rams, Tommie may try for a place with a Canadian Football League club.

One of the great track athletes of all time, Smith won the 200 metres at last year's Olympics in Mexico City and, at one time, held 11 world records in distance up to 440 yards.

Preliminary heats in age-class events were held Friday night and continued this morning. Heats in open events and some age-class finals were slated this afternoon to clear the decks for open finals, which start at 6:30 tonight.

•

One of the highlights of the meet promises to be the women's 100-yard sprint, involving Vancouver Olympians Irene Piotrowski and Stephanie Berto and Victoria's Anne Langdale.

Meet officials have obtained a collection of stars that ensures top competition for all open events. One of the latest entries was pole-vaulter Curtis Hissaw of Spokane, who recently won the U.S. small colleges' championship with leap over 16 feet.

His top challenge was expected to come from Tacoma's Mark Edman, who has cleared 15 feet, 10 inches.

Busiest contestant at the meet will be another Tacoma athlete, Steve Gough, a finalist in the U.S. Olympic trials last year.

Gough is entered in the high, long and triple jumps, along with the discus and the javelin events. Gough has cleared six-eight in the high jump.

CASINO LINKS SEVERED

Slick Snipping Boosts Bowie's Status

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn's smooth moves to snip the ties between team owners and Las Vegas gambling casinos have boosted his own odds for a long-term job as boss of baseball.

Kuhn, a compromise choice as a one-year commissioner, stepped in Friday to cut the stock links of Atlanta Braves and Oakland Athletics officials with gambling casinos in a settlement that left even the owners happy.

"It's a beautiful ending," said Athletics owner Charles O. Finley, one of three baseball figures asked to sell their Las Vegas stock.

"I am gratified," added Braves president William C. Bartholomay, also involved in the multimillion-dollar stock shuffle.

Kuhn carved out the compromise without an open display of force or pressure on the club owners. The baseball commissioner said the settlement was completely voluntary.

Bartholomay and another Braves official, John J. Louis Jr., will resign from the board of Parvin-Dohrmann Co., which owns three Las Vegas casinos.

BOWIE KUHN

They and Finlay will sell their combined $3,000,000 stock holdings.

Delbert W. Coleman, who heads Parvin-Dohrmann and also owns another casino operation, will resign as a director of the Braves.

Kuhn said there had been "no question of any wrong-doing or impropriety" by the club owners.

The Wall Street attorney was installed as a compromise commissioner earlier this year after American and National League owners had struggled through marathon meetings that eliminated earlier favorites in closed-door feuding.

Although Kuhn disputed any comparison of his handling of the Las Vegas affair with the forceful era of commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis in the 1920s, the successful settlement clearly boosted his stock with both the public and the owners.

Reggie's Swan Dive Topped By Swallow

By The Associated Press

If Reggie Jackson thought his swan dive was embarrassing, he should have seen what happened to Ed Herrmann.

Jackson fell down rounding third Friday night and instead of scoring what would have been Oakland's tying run against Minnesota Twins was tagged out.

Herrmann wasn't even moving when he ran into trouble. The Chicago catcher was behind the plate in the fourth inning of the second game of a doubleheader and a foul ball off the bat of Bill Voss struck him.

Herrmann swallowed his chewing tobacco and collapsed, falling backward to the ground. It was several minutes before he recovered and was helped off the field.

Fortunately for the Athletics, Jackson's unexpected trip didn't put them out of the game. They came back to edge Minnesota 3-2 in 14 innings to take a one-game lead in the American League's Western Division.

In other AL games, Chicago White Sox defeated California Angels 9-1 after losing 2-1 in the 12 inning opener, Baltimore Orioles downed Cleveland Indians 5-1 after losing 7-2, Washington Senators whipped Detroit Tigers 7-2 in 10 innings and Seattle Pilots trimmed Kansas City Royals 5-3 before losing 6-2. Rain washed out New York Yankees at Boston Red Sox.

Jackson's trouble came in the eighth inning with Minnesota leading 2-1. He walked with two out, went to second base on Sal Bando's single and raced for home as Danny Cater singled. But as he rounded third, he fell and was thrown out—left fielder Cesar Tovar to catcher John Roseboro to shortstop Leo Cardenas.

California won the opener of its doubleheader on Sandy Alomar's two-out, run-scoring single in the 12th inning. The White Sox recovered in the nightcap, behind the two-hit pitching of Paul Edmondson in his major league debut.

Seven-Single Inning Didn't Save Bucs

Three home runs kept Atlanta Braves riding high, but seven singles in one inning didn't do a thing for Pittsburgh Pirates in National League baseball action Friday.

The Braves used Bob Tillman's one-out home run in the 12th inning to turn back San Francisco Giants 4-3, after consecutive bases-empty homers by Rico Carty and Bob Aspromonte had tied the game for Atlanta in the ninth inning.

The Pirates paraded 12 men to the plate, seven of them singled, in a seven-run third inning, but Philadelphia Phillies rallied for an 8-7 victory.

In other National League action, Los Angeles Dodgers remained one game behind the Braves in the Western Division with a 4-2 victory over Cincinnati Reds. New York Mets edged St. Louis Cardinals 4-3; Chicago Cubs snapped a five-game losing streak by beating Montreal Expos 2-0 and Houston Astros swept a double-header from San Diego Padres 6-1 and 3-1.

Bill Hands hurled a five-hitter for his first shutout of the season in beating the Expos.

Chicago grabbed a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Ernie Banks' sacrifice fly. It was the 1,537th RBI of Banks' career, tying him for 15th place with Joe DiMaggio on the all-time list.

San Francisco's Mike McCormick had checked the Braves on four hits until Carty hit his third homer of the season with one out in the ninth and Aspromonte followed with his first of the year.

Reliever Frank Linzy then retired the next nine Braves in order before Tillman's winning shot.

Gene Stone's run-scoring triple in the seventh gave Philadelphia its victory after the Pirates' early explosion.

The Pirates' big inning gave them a 7-3 lead, but John Briggs' two-run homer chopped it to 7-5 in the third.

SIGNING ENDS TRADE RUMORS

CHICAGO (AP) — Star centre Stan Mikita, dethroned as National League scoring champion last season, is the first Chicago Black Hawk player signed for the 1969-1970 season.

General manager Tommy Ivan declined to reveal terms but said: "We're very happy and I'm sure Stan is, too." The signing dispelled rumors Mikita might be traded after Hawk failure to reach the Stanley Cup playoffs with a dead-last divisional finish.

Frigid-Fingered Stars Fall Before Hot Villa Pitching

By STEWART LANG

While chilling winds cooled the enthusiasm of fans at Royal Athletic Park Friday night, a pitcher named Murray Gagecole served up some hot hurling to apply a deeper freeze to Victoria All-Stars.

All-Stars did little to warm up the more than 900 spectators when they came up with a bunch of frigid fingers and bobbled away their hopes.

Gagecole, who played for University of Washington this year, scattered six hits, struck out eight batters and only walked two while guiding Vancouver Villa to a 7-0 shutout over All-Stars in the opening game of the B.C. senior baseball "Canada Games" tournament.

Winner of the four-team, double-loss-elimination tourney will represent B.C. at the Canadian Summer Games at Halifax and Dartmouth in August.

While Villa remained blemish-free throughout the game, Victoria turned the first four innings into a comedy of errors and compiled a total of five miscues for the game.

Single errors occured in the first, third and sixth innings while two bobbles in the fourth aided a four-run outburst by Villa.

The Vancouver team opened scoring in the first inning as right-fielder Stu Winrob came home on a passed ball after gaining first on a single, stealing second and reaching third on an error.

Shortstop Tim Chapman put Vancouver further ahead in the third by hammering a high drive into centre field that brought Winrob across the plate again. Winrob had led off with a single, and gained third on a single by former-Victorian Dave Graas.

Five successive hits off losing pitcher George Brice were tallied in the fourth inning to produce a 6-0 lead for Vancouver.

The runner in the sixth inning came around the diamond from first base after Gord Strongman hit what at first looked to be a home run. Instead of going over the fence, however, it slipped underneath, and Strongman was forced to take a double.

The tournament, whic ends Sunday, was scheduled to have continued today with an opening game between Trail and Okanagan Mainline All-Stars. Victoria was to take on the loser of that contest this afternoon while Vancouver faces the winner at 8 tonight.

The two teams with only one loss each meet in the opening game at 10 a.m. Sunday with the final slated for 2 p.m. If an extra game is required, it will be played at 6.

Victoria ..... 000 000 000—0 6 5
Vancouver ..... 101 401 00x—7 12 9
George Brice, Pete Jolly (7) and Mike McAvoy; Murry Gagecole and Norm Caig.

Strongman Clout Limited to Double

Bill Stebbings started the surge when he singled and advanced as Victoria first-baseman Art Worth and Brice got their signals crossed on what appeared an "easy out" situation at first base.

Singles by Chapman, a bunt by Gagecole and a double by Graas compounded Victoria's troubles in the Villa uprising.

Centre-fielder John Haar chased home the final run for the Vancouverites in the sixth frame, when his high fly to centre was fumbled by a pair of All-Star outfielders, giving Chapman ample time to scamper around from first base.

Plenty of hustle in both the Vancouver outfield and infield capped the victory for Gagecole as Victoria was only able to bring two runners as far as third base in the game, one in each of the sixth and eighth innings.

DRAGGING GUNFIGHTER WHEELSTANDING CAR

The "Gunfighter" is coming!

Gary Coe of Portland, Ore., will have his "D" Class, altered 1957 Ford on the line Sunday at Van-Isle Dragways.

Coe's car, a feature of this drag-racing meet, is capable of wheelstanding in every gear change as he accelerates up the quarter-mile strip.

With some changes in the suspension, the wheelstanding ability, used primarily for exhibition, is removed. Then the Gunfighter is one of the most competitive units in the Pacific Northwest, moving through the quarter-mile in the 10-second bracket with speeds up to 130 miles per hour.

Gates open at the Cobble Hill strip at 9:30 a.m. with eliminations set to start at 1:30.

Course Too Long, But Lefty Leads

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Bob Charles, professional golf's best left-hander, was quiet Friday despite taking the second-round lead in the $150,000 Kemper open tournament.

"I'm really not playing that well,' the lean New Zealander said after shooting a two-under-par 70 for a 36-hole total of 138.

"This course is too long for me," he said of the 7,250-yard layout. "It's a bit of a struggle. "The shots are not coming easy to me."

One shot behind Charles, at 139, are eight others, including Dan Sikes, Lee Trevino and Sam Snead.

Five others are at 140 and seven more at 141, as 21 players are within three shots of each other going into today's third round.

Sikes had the day's best round, 67, while Trevino and Snead, 57, each had 69. They were tied with rookie Bob Payne, 70; Australian Bruce Devlin, 70; England's Tony Jacklin, 69; Mason Rudolph, 70, and Dale Douglas, 70.

CANADIANS CLOSE

George Knudson and Al Balding, both of Toronto, are within striking distance of the lead. Knudson is two strokes off the pace at 140 and Balding shot a 71 round for 141.

Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver shot a two-over-par 74 for 146 and Butch O'Hearn from Dartmouth, N.S. had a 73 Friday for a two-round score of 147. They both missed the cut-off of 145.

Charles, 33, a former British Open champion whose last tour victory was in the 1968 Canadian Open, didn't realize he was leading the tournament when he finished and went to the practice tee "to try to get my swing down a little better."

"I have been putting well, though," Charles said. In the last two days I've had three at 40 feet or more."

He got in one 40-footer Friday and also dropped birdie putts of 15 and 18 feet. The other came when he put a five-iron six feet from the pin and canned the putt.

Senior Golf King

VANCOUVER (CP) — George McKay of Vancouver Marine Drive Friday defeated Ed Hill of Vancouver Quilchena 2 and 1 to win the British Columbia seniors' golf title. McKay, on his home course, rallied after trailing by two at the 12th.

Vicettes Win Friends But Lose Exhibition

Victoria's Molson Vicettes lost the game but won friends Friday in a women's exhibition softball game at Royal Athletic Park.

Playing before a turnout of almost 1,500 fans, Vicettes dropped a 6-5 decision to the four-member "Queen and Her Maids" team. But the Wally Yeamans-coached Vicettes impressed with their good fielding, sharp hitting and Dodie Skaife's pitching.

Dodie allowed eight hits, one less than Vicettes managed off 22-year-old Rosie Beaird, the "Queen" of the youthful touring team. Shortstop Barbara Tribe of Vicettes discovered Miss Beaird's offerings no puzzle, banging out three triples and a single in four trips to the plate.

Miss Beaird struck out two Vicettes blind-folded en route to an 11-strikeout performance.

Vicettes play H. Y. Louis of Vancouver in an inter-city series Sunday at Central Park, starting at 2 and 6:30 p.m.

LEADER in stock car driver standings at Western Speedway this season, Mel Marshall will be attempting to boost margin over rivals tonight as stockers return to Millstream Road track. Time trials start at 7 with first race heat race at 7:45.

Like Mother . . . Like Daughter

PORTRUSH, Northern Ireland (Reuters) — Catherine Lacoste of France today won the British women's amateur golf championship, defeating Ann Irvin of Britain one up on the 18th hole. Miss Lacoste's mother won the same title 42 years ago.

ARTS AND LETTERS . . . . . WON'T TACKLE PRINCE

'Match Races Prove Nothing'

NEW YORK (AP) — The trainer for Arts and Letters says he is not interested in sending his Belmont Stakes champion against Majestic Prince in a match race.

"As we said after the Belmont, Arts and Letters will be given a rest and will be pointed for the Travers Stakes at Saratoga in August," said Eliott Burch.

The management of Arlington Park in Chicago had announced that a $100,000, winner-take-all showdown was being sought at a distance of anywhere from five-eights of a mile to a mile and five-eighths. The Prince beat Arts and Letters in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness but lost in the Belmont.

Both Burch and Johnny Longden, trainer for Majestic Prince, were said to be interested.

In a formal statement issued through Belmont Park, Burch said:

"The news media said Mr. Mellon (Paul Mellon, owner of Rokeby Stable) and I were considering a match race for Arts and Letters. That definitely is not true. We feel match races prove nothing and too frequently one of the horses comes up to the race in less than top condition."

Hudspeth Is Hope To Replace Frank

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League announced Friday the signing of Bob Hudspeth, 23, an offensive tackle and a graduate of Southern Illinois University.

Hudspeth, who weighs 270 pounds, will be one of the candidates at the Eastern Conference club's training camp to fill a vacancy left by all-star tackle Bill Frank.

Frank, who last week was given his release when Argos were unable to meet his salary demands, Friday signed with San Diego Chargers of the American Football League.

The Denver native was originally drafted by the Chargers in 1962. He played briefly with Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League in 1964 after a short spell with the CFL's British Columbia Lions.

Hudspeth played two seasons at Kansas University before transferring to Southern Illinois. In 1968 he was voted to the all-Illinois first team.

Frank is the fourth CFL player to join an American team this season. Bo Scott, an all-star fullback with Ottawa Rough Riders last year, signed with Cleveland Browns of the NFL. Quarterback Peter Liske of Calgary Stampeders and defensive halfback Phil Brady of Montreal Alouettes both joined the AFL's Denver Broncos. All three played out their options in 1968.

Wakeham Trails Ontario Leaders By Four Strokes

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Par remained elusive Friday during the second round of the Ontario open golf championship and after 36 holes only nine competitors could boast a score of par or better.

Leading the pack were Phil Giroux, a professional from Cartierville, Que., and Nick Weslock of Brantford, Ont., a veteran who has won this tournament six times before, including the last time it was held in St. Catharines. They were tied at 138, six under par.

Two strokes back was Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg, a seasoned touring professional.

Another two back was defending champion Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., who made a brilliant second-round recovery after a terrible opening round. Tied with him were Bill Wakeham of Victoria and Ken Fulton of Richelieu, Que., the former junior ace out of Winnipeg.

PAR IS 72

Professional Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., and amateur Jim Neale of Burlington, Ont., were tied at 143. Gary Bowerman, an assistant club professional from Richmond Hill, Ont., was the lone par shooter.

Par on the 6,801-yard St. Catharines Golf and Country Club course is 36-36—72.

Cowan, disgusted with his opening 75, bounced back with a 67, the best round of the tournament so far.

The course Friday lent itself to a bold, charging game.

Rain was falling long before the first players left the tee at 7:30 a.m. and didn't stop until mid-morning. It left the course springy-soft and the greens holding well.

EASY TO HANDLE

"You could throw a wedge shot right at the pin," said Weslock, a noted short-iron player. "If your game was under control, you could really do things with the ball."

Sixty-five players survived the cut of 152, eight over par.

Weslock considers the course among the best he has played, even though some new sod on the 17th cost him a stroke to par.

His tee shot on the par-three hole landed in a crack between two strips of new sod. Since the area was not marked as ground under repair he was forced to play the ball as it lay.

The first 36 holes of the tournament also counted as the first 36 of the Ontario Willingdon Cup trials. The second 36 of the trials will be the first 36 of the Ontario Amateur.

Weslock, Cowan and Neale are the leaders, followed by Ken Trowbridge of Bolton, Ont., with a 70-76—146.

Kelly Hinted New Coach Of Penguins

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette said in a story it has learned that Red Kelly, former coach of Los Angeles Kings, will be the new coach of the National Hockey League's Pittsburgh Penguins.

The newspaper said Kelly, a forward and defenceman in the NHL for 20 seasons, will be named successor to Red Sullivan early next week.

Sullivan was fired at the end of last season after the Penguins failed to make the NHL playoffs for the second year in a row.

Kelly quit the Los Angeles job at the end of the 1968-69 season after a series of disagreements with owner Jack Kent Cooke.

Kelly broke into professional hockey with Detroit Red Wings during the 1947-48 season. He went on to play 20 seasons, seven with the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Clifford Shoots Seven Birdies To Share Lead

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Shirley Englehorn and Clifford Ann Gordon shot sizzling five-under-par 67s Friday and forged into the first round lead of the women's $30,000 Pabst classic golf tournament.

Miss Englehorn, who has finished in second place twice on the tour this year, posted a 34-33-67 in a round that included five birdies.

Mrs. Gordon had seven birdies but was over par on the 14th and 18th holes.

Two strokes back of the leaders in the 54-hole tournament were Betty Burfeindt, Sue Berning and Donna Caponi, 34-35—69.

Sandra Post of Oakville, Ont., shot 38-35—73.

White Tripped On Extra Hole

RICHMOND (CP)—Doug Roxburgh, 17, of Vancouver Marine Drive, and John Morgan, 27, of Vancouver Quilchena teed off today in the 36-hole final for the British Columbia amateur golf championship.

Roxburgh tripped Harry White of Marine Drive on the 20th hole at Richmond Country club Friday. Morgan defeated Ron Fratkin of the host club, 2 and 1, in the other match-play semi-final.

White had dominated early play, leading the qualifying rounds and disposing of defending champion John Russell of Vancouver Point Grey in a 23-hole match Thursday. But Roxburgh's fine approach shots and putting finished him.

EVEN AT TURN

The two were even at the turn and Roxburgh moved one up when White lagged a putt on the 16th hole. White evened the match on the 18th hole but lost on the 20th when he three-putted.

Morgan was two up after nine holes but lost the 10th and 11th holes to Fratkin. He took the lead back on the 12th and when Fratkin had trap trouble on the 17th Morgan closed him out with a par.

"I borrowed a friend's driver for the day and it served me well," said Morgan. "I'll use it against Roxburgh."

Replied Roxburgh, seeking to become the youngest title holder: "I'm 10 years younger than Morgan and I love a 36-hole match."

Laver Lacks Usual Flair In Semifinal

LONDON (Reuters) — John Newcombe of Australia Friday upset top-seeded Rod Laver 6-4, 6-4 in the London grass court championships and qualified to meet compatriot Fred Stolle in the final today.

Newcombe, hitting powerfully and showing great court speed, was never in trouble against Laver, who lacked his usual flair and was consistently off target with his running ground strokes.

Stolle advanced to the final with a see-saw 6-3, 3-6, 8-6 victory over Dennis Ralston of California.

In an all-British women's final today, Winnie Shaw of Scotland played Ann Jones of England.

Miss Shaw knocked out Mary Ann Curtis of the United States 9-7, 6-3 and Mrs. Jones beat French professional Francoise Durr 6-2, 6-3.

SHIFTED to Detroit Red Wings in National Hockey League trade Friday was veteran winger Larry Jeffrey (above). In exchange, Wings sent goalie Terry Sawchuk and winger Sandy Snow to New York Rangers. Sawchuk, 39, holds NHL career mark of 102 shutouts. Jeffrey is 28, Snow 22.

AMATEUR HOCKEY GETS $800,000

This wasn't about to be an easy day for Marty Taylor.

A standout soccer player, the youthful Taylor faced a busy schedule after reaching the finals of four events in tennis championships being staged simultaneously at Oak Bay and Victoria Racquet Clubs.

He reached the singles and men's doubles finals at both clubs.

DAVIES DOWNED

At Oak Bay, Taylor defeated Ted Davies 7-5, 6-2 to move into the singles final against Greg Miller. In the doubles, Taylor and Ivor Goodmanson were to face Jim Hassard and Trev Jones, who downed the father-son combination of Howard and Dave Tooby, 9-7, 6-0.

The ladies' singles final matched Theo Booker and Felicity Graham.

At the Racquet Club, Taylor was to meet Pat Skillings in the singles final while Sally Wood and Wendy Cuppage emerged as the women's finalists.

Skillings and Taylor then were to join forces later in the men's doubles playoff against Ed Hedley and Ted Smythe.

Barclays Use Power Goals To Trip Kings

Bob Jones and a rash of penalties were too much for Victoria Kings Hotel in a Vancouver Island Senior Lacrosse League game Thursday night at Memorial Arena.

Port Alberni Barclays collected five power-play goals in the second period after Kings had grabbed a 4-3 lead in the opening period and went on to trip the Victorians 13-10.

Jones fired five tallies for the winners, who also got four goals from Brent Atkins. For Victoria, Owen Richman scored four goals and Bruce Kellow and Jerry Bains each notched a pair.

Ted Langlois Leads Forces Golf Event

Ted Langlois fired an 82 at Gorge Vale to earn low-gross honors in the monthly medal competition of the Canadian Armed Forces Golf Association. Boyd Brooks finished in second place.

F. Burnett and A. Southall tied for the low-net handicap award as each carded a net 72.

Bates Stretch Shutout String To 29 Innings

(Special to The Times)

VANCOUVER—Just "good" or merely "great?"

That's the question being bandied around B.C. men's softball circles as Bate Construction of Victoria continue to fling "goose-eggs" in impressive fashion.

Bates extended their shutout string to 29 innings and a fourth straight game by clipping Victoria Molsons 7-0 in Friday's opening-round action at the B.C. open tournament.

The 10-team, double-knockout affair to determine a B.C. representative in the Canadian Summer Games at Halifax continues today and winds up Sunday.

In other games Friday, Vancouver Merchants defeated North Vancouver 8-3 and Vancouver Johnstons blanked Vancouver Molsons 3-0.

ACTION TODAY

Nanaimo O'Keefes, Vancouver Island's only other entry here, blanked Trail 2-0 this morning on Ken Larsen's one-hitter. Victoria Molsons and Vancouver Molsons also met today in a game that would sideline the losers.

Bates, however, loomed as the team to beat. Friday's shutout was their seventh in their last nine games. In that stretch, rivals have managed only 29 hits in 63 innings off the combined offerings of Gordie Huston, Barry Jackson and Brian Pearce.

Equally impressive is the fact that Bates, coached by Lou McCorkall and managed by Herb Bate, have committed only four errors in their last nine games.

HUSTON SHARP

The stretch includes four games in the tough Cascade Invitational tournament in Seattle which Bates won two weeks ago.

Huston was the stopper Friday, allowing Bates' rivals from Victoria's Major Men's League only three hits. Huston struck out four and walked but one.

Catcher Jim Moody touched off Bates' strong offence. He banged out three singles in three trips to the plate, scored three runs and drove in three.

Ahead 3-0 after three innings, Bates wrapped up the victory by adding four runs in the fourth. Lyall Gornett's leadoff triple, a walk, an error and singles by Don Lancaster and Moody did the damage.

White Polecats Ruined Great Totem Culture

By DENNIS BELL

HAIDA, B.C. (CP) — In the ancient Queen Charlotte Islands Indian village of Yan there once stood a magnificent twin-spired death totem supporting an intricately carved cedar coffin that contained the remains of a Haida chief whose name is long forgotten.

But the totem pole carvers of Yan more than 150 years ago had cut their cedar logs and blocks too young, for unlike the chief whose bones it held, the wood did not die.

The slim tendril of a cedar sapling grew out of the rotting coffin lid, found the sun and flourished. Roots wound their way down the twin spires, around the dreaded Raven clan crest, over the scowling countenance of the Bear Chief and into the sandy soil below.

Today, the double-trunked cedar stands and thrives in the desolation of a village long ago abandoned by the Haidas, who moved across the mouth of Masset Sound to this reserve on the northeastern tip of Graham Island.

Hilbert Grem, a 56-year-old former logger from Vancouver who was lured to the Queen Charlottes permanently 19 years ago after many visits, first saw the death totem in 1940.

Bones Fell Through

"The old chief's bones had fallen through the bottom of the coffin and were lying on the ground, but otherwise it was intact," he recalled in an interview. "The first time I saw it, the coffin had a two-foot-high sapling growing from its lid."

He never forgot the totem at Yan. Twenty-eight years later Grem, who roams the islands between odd jobs, returned to the deserted, windswept village for another look.

"The tree had grown down the poles and into the ground, the bones were nowhere to be seen. Now it's huge. Civilization perishes, nature survives."

Death totems are one of six recognized types of poles indigenous to the Indians of British Columbia and southern Alaska.

The other types include the House Pole, which formed part of the architecture of a lodge; the Memorial Pole, equivalent to a tombstone and usually raised to honor a dead chief by his successor; the Heraldic Pole, recording the mythological history of a family or clan, and the massive Potlatch Pole, over which there was great inter-village rivalry.

Subject of Ridicule

The sixth style is known as the Shame Pole and was erected to ridicule a person of high standing who failed to live up to his promises or obligations.

Of all the totem pole carvers, the Haidas were the greatest. Their poles are found today in museums across Canada and the United States as well as Europe — but there are no poles at all in the Haida reserve.

Their former island stronghold boasts some of the finest timber in the world. Cedar and spruce ranging up to 17 feet in diameter were not uncommon before the forest products companies moved into the Queen Charlottes after the Second World War.

Presented with excellent carving material, the Haidas borrowed their tools from the white man for the golden age of carving during the middle of the last century.

The carved figures tell stories when totems are read from top to bottom. Basic designs were passed from generation to generation. The Memorial Totem to Chief Skedan, a duplicate of which now stands in Vancouver's Stanley Park, is believed to tell of settlement of the islands following the glacial age.

The golden age did not last long. Smallpox, liquor and influenza had virtually destroyed the Haida culture by 1900 and with it died the art of carving.

Only One Left

Of the thousands of totems that once marked dozens of Indian settlements there remains but one — the Eagle and Beaver totem on the 350-member Skidegate band reserve on the northeastern tip of Graham Island.

The best were plundered by museums and taken away to cities most Haidas had never even heard of. Those that remained were chopped down by the Indians themselves for firewood during the hard times, or rotted and toppled in the litter of abandoned villages.

Now the federal government and the Indians have declared the old village sites out of bounds to museums and private collectors, but there are few artefacts left. A Seattle university professor who tried to remove some without tribal permission a few months ago was caught, convicted and fined.

The Haidas, especially the elders of the 1,000-member band here, see the incongruity of a paternalistic white society that seeks to protect their cultural heritage by hauling their most treasured artefacts to museums most of the Indians will never visit.

Revives the Art

There is one Haida who is doing something about it, 22-year-old Robert Davidson, born and raised on the reserve here. He returned to Haida after a year at art school in Vancouver this spring and has started work on "a 40-foot-long Potlatch Pole.

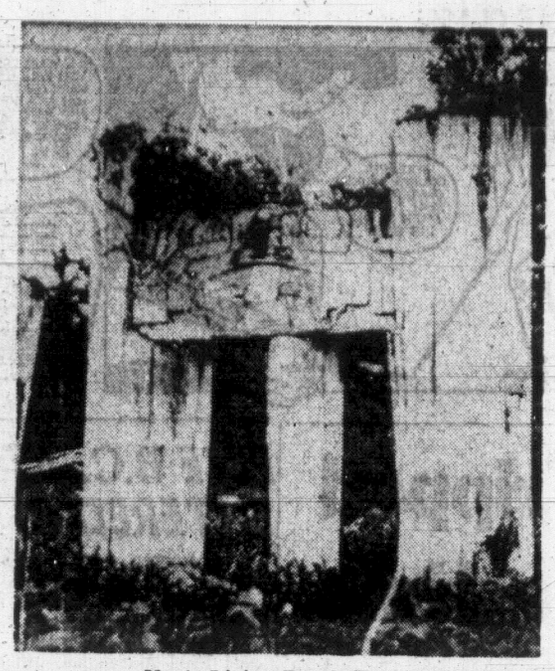

Davidson comes from a long line of carvers and is the great-grandson of Charles Edenshaw, the most famous carver in the history of the islands.

"I thought about this for two years before I started and I want to give the pole to the village," said Davidson.

"I want to do it for elders of the village especially, who haven't seen a standing totem here in years. The old people are dying off too fast; I want to do it while they are still with us."

Davidson said he plans to spend four months chiselling out 10 traditional figures on the huge cedar log depicting the legend of the Bear Mother, one of the most well-known Haida tales.

The Bear Mother legend deals with a Haida maiden who was kidnapped by bears, married by the Bear Chief and gave birth to twin cubs that founded the two principal clans of the islands, the Ravens and the Eagles.

Norway Celebrates Weighty Artistry

OSLO (CP) — This year marks the 100th anniversary of the birth of Gustave Vigeland, a Norwegian sculptor whose life work on the basis of weight and size alone qualifies him as an artistic giant.

His work, collected in Oslo's Frogner Park, consists of hundreds of nude figures of men, women and children powerfully executed from granite and bronze to represent various stages of man's journey through life.

The focal point is his 57-foot Monolith, a tower of 121 entwined human forms struggling upwards. It took Vigeland 10 months to prepare a scale model, and three men took 13 years to transfer it to a 470-ton chunk of granite.

Monolith was completed in 1942. Vigeland described it as his "religion," but left it to visitors to decide what that was.

Arranged in three circles around Monolith are 36 granite groups. They begin with small children and end with the dead.

Vigeland had long thought about creating a sculpture park based on a central theme. His ideas caught on with city politicians and in 1921 they gave him a studio and money.

Plush Hotel String Moves In On Deprived South America

BUENOS AIRES (WP) — In a move that could revolutionize the depressed state of Latin American tourism, the Sheraton Hotel Corporation is mounting a multi-faceted campaign to become the biggest innkeeper south of the Rio Grande.

Symbolic of Sheraton's bid to dominate the Latin hotel field are negotiations currently in progress for the Boston-based chain to take over operation of Mexico City's 560-room Maria Isabel. If successful, the deal would see the Sheraton name added to what is widely regarded as the most luxurious and prestigious hotel property in all Latin America.

The Maria Isabel negotiations are only one stage of a drive that extends southward from Mexico into almost every corner of the region. In recent weeks, Sheraton has started construction of a 600-room beach-front hotel in Rio de Janeiro and has acquired the ownership of the 350-room San Cristobal Hotel being built in Santiago, Chile.

Within the next month or two, Sheraton will break ground for a new hotel here in Buenos Aires that is eventually expected to become the biggest in Latin America with 1,000 rooms. In addition, the chain is known to be actively exploring or negotiating for building sites in such cities as Sao Paulo, Lima and Bogota.

When these projects are added to the hotels Sheraton already owns or operates under contract within Latin America (principally a Caribbean resort network composed of hotels in Puerto Rico, Jamaica, Aruba and Caracas), Sheraton will emerge within the next decade as the unquestioned dominant force in the Latin hotel business.

USE POTENTIAL

As Harley Watson, president of Sheraton's Latin American division, explains: "Our aim is to pinpoint those cities with the greatest tourist potential and to establish Sheraton as the ranking, first-class hotel in each of them. We are also trying to mesh our operations with the patterns of tourist flow so that when people plan a Caribbean or a South American tour they will be aware of the availability of Sheraton accommodations and services as they move from city to city."

In short, Sheraton appears to be gambling that Latin America, which has always lagged far behind Europe and the Far East in its ability to attract U.S. tourist dollars, will begin to move up the ladder in the years ahead.

To be sure, Mexico and the Caribbean resort islands have cashed in handsomely on the tourism boom of the last decade. But the largest part of the region—the South American continent—has never been able to exploit more than a tiny fraction of its tourist potential.

In large part, this has been due to South America's lack of modern luxury hotel accommodations favored by U.S. tourists. Until construction began on the San Cristobal, for example, a major capital like Santiago was able to boast only one first-class hotel (the Carrera, whose ownership also has been taken over by Sheraton), and even the famed beaches of Rio de Janeiro do not have a single hotel in the luxury resort category.

Prairie Voters Like to See Them

KELVINGTON, Sask. (CP) — People out here like to see their politicians face-to-face; size them up in the flesh and ask them straight questions about gut issues like this year's wheat sales crisis.

For the three candidates in next Wednesday's Kelvington constituency provincial by-election, that means forgetting about television and big newspaper advertisements and the like and hitting the road for some old-style canvassing.

There are about 7,500 eligible voters in the constituency. And they are spread out in small communities and on farms over 2,500 square miles of rolling parkland.

To hit as many of the voters as possible in the 4½-week campaign, the candidates and their workers are on the go constantly.

"It's exhausting for them" says Ott Kubat, husband of Progressive Conservative candidate Anita Kubat, 38, a nurse at Invermay Union Hospital.

"My wife works at a very small hospital, and she has to keep on with her work. They don't have many nurses.

"Tonight she's going to a public meeting, and then at midnight she has to be back at the hospital for her shift. In the morning she'll be off to canvass again."

MLAs HELP BYERS

Neil Byers, 40, the New Democratic Party candidate, got a substitute to take over his teaching duties at the Foam Lake high school. He has a number of NDP MLAs plus numerous other workers including his 15-year-old son, Wayne, stumping the country roads and village streets on his behalf.

Liberal candidate Bryan Bjarnason, 45, a Foam Lake insurance agent who won Kelvington in 1964 and 1967 but had his 1967 victory controverted by the courts to force the by-election, has enlisted the help of more than 20 Liberal MLAs and cabinet ministers.

Each of the Liberal members is spending four days in the constituency canvassing door-to-door and attending public meetings.

There are no Conservative MLAs for Mrs. Kubat to call on, but she is getting help from PC members of Parliament from surrounding federal constituencies.

Don MacLennan, Liberal MLA for Last Mountain and campaign manager for Mr. Bjarnason, says the NDP in particular is making hay with the farm issue.

There is lots of grain in the granaries, but no markets.

CAN'T DISCARD IT

"The over-riding issue is wheat," Mr. MacLennan says.

"We'd like to discard it, but we can't.

"Our opponents are making it an issue. We are forced to discuss it, and in some areas of the constituency it's caught on.

"We're doing our damnest to point out to them that it's a federal problem, but the others are really trying to tag us with it."

While the voters seem preoccupied with the wheat sales issue, the candidates are dealing with a number of provincial issues as well.

Mr. Bjarnason is pushing the notion that as a member of the government party, he would be able to do more for the constituency than an opposition member. He stands on the Thatcher government's record of five consecutive balanced budgets which are said to have "saved the taxpayers millions of dollars in interest charges."

Mr. Byers is attacking the Liberals for placing small out-of-pocket fees on the provincial medical insurance plan. He calls the fees "a tax on the sick."

Mrs. Kubat says the issues are the medical care fees, increases in land taxation and an increase in the fuel tax.

She says she is staying away from the grain problem because it is a federal issue.

The NDP and Liberal candidates are treating the byelection as a two-way fight and are not taking Mrs. Kubat's candidacy very seriously.

Go 'Underground' At Art Gallery

You may have to sit on the floor if you're late for performances of Vancouver's "Intermedia" at the art gallery Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday night.

Advance sales have been good for the three showings of underground film and mixed-bag music and poetry, says gallery curator William Hoare.

Among six films to be shown tonight is a new one by Vancouver poet and film maker Al Razutis, in its first Canadian showing.

•

Razutis describes his film as "an eye wise journey through apocalypse and theatre . . . a process of psychic self-inauguration . . . a visual tapestry of life twisted and rearranged into abrasive and harmonic patterns."

All films were made by members of the Vancouver Intermedia co-operative, which distributes films mainly to American university audiences.

Tuesday night is for poetry and electronic music. The poets, all from Vancouver, are Judy Capithorne, Gerry Gilbert, Maxine Gadd and Ed Varney. Accompanying sound is to be "sculpted" by Dennis Vance and Dave Rimmer who overlap taped tracks with sounds they make on the spot.

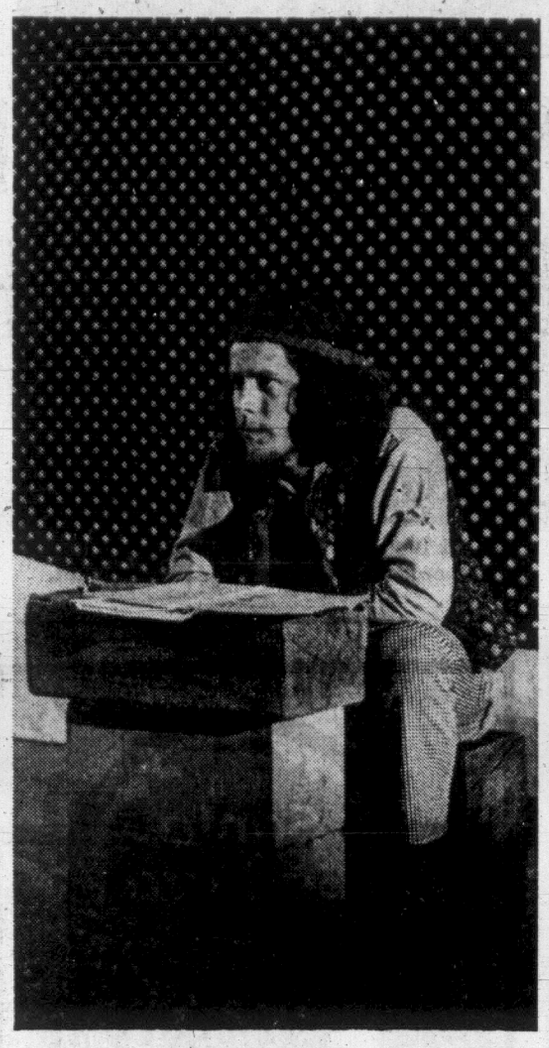

•

Jazz in a new and imaginative style moves in Wednesday night, as Al Neil and Greg Simpson combine light, toys, noise-makers and electronic tapes with their piano and drums to form a musical "collage."

Coda, the Canadian jazz magazine, compares Neil to Sun Ra, Thelonius Monk and Cecil Taylor and says his music "demands from the listener new responses (not only to music) by freeing him from academic and stock responses."

It will be the first time the group has performed in Victoria. They have appeared at the Vancouver Art Gallery, Simon Fraser University and the University of British Columbia.

Intermedia was formed two years ago, financed basically by Canada Council grants.

POET ED VARNEY of Vancouver is one of four writers who will read their works accompanied by electronic music at Intermedia in the art gallery Tuesday night.

Revamped Hollywood Set Was O'Brian's Brain Child

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A "new" motion picture studio has arisen in the land of the palm and the orange and, fittingly, it's a bit wacky.

It is called Beverly Hills Studio Inc.

However, it is located in downtown Culver City.

One of its founders is actor Hugh O'Brian, the catalyst who brought together the elements that form a studio.

The word "new" in this case is one of the great misnomers in the long history of abuse of the English language in Hollywood.

Beverly Hills Studio Inc. was born physically about 1915 as the Thomas H. Ince Studios, where silent movies were ground out on hand-cranked cameras by directors in puttees and wearing the cape backwards.

It was purchased by David O. Selznick in the 1930s and became known as Selznick Studios.

LARGEST SOUND STAGE

Most of Gone With the Wind — currently in re-release — was filmed on the lot which includes the world's largest sound stage.

Thereafter Selznick sold the aging property to RKO, which Howard Hughes once owned.

Then along came Desi Arnaz and Lucille Ball who bought the RKO properties and renamed the lot Desilu Culver. When Paramount bought out Desilu it became Paramount Culver.

Now O'Brian along with businessman Lou Chesler — who put up more than $9 million — and Martin Leeds, president of the company, own the 40-acre property and 11 sound stages.

Asked why he named the property Beverly Hills Studio when it is in Culver City, O'Brian fired back, "What else would you call it?"

Pressed further, the actor said: "Beverly Hills is a recongnizable name. Anyhow our corporate offices, legal staff, accountants and tax people are in Beverly Hills.

RICH IN LORE

"At first I was tempted to call it Mammoth Pictures because that's the name you see in movies and television when they depict a studio."

The studio is rich in lore. In addition to Gone With the Wind, such others as The Greatest Show on Earth and The Greatest Story Ever Told were filmed on the lot. So were The Real McCoys and Batman.

At the moment only Lassie is shooting there.

STAMP NEWS

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

Prince Charles on July 1 will be invested as Prince of Wales in Caernarvon Castle. To commemorate this occasion, Great Britain July 1 will place on sale five stamps and a air letter form.

The first three pictorials are of 5d denominations, and they each show a view of Caernarvon Castle. Featured on one 5d stamp is the King's Gate. The second shows the Eagle Tower, and Queen Eleanor's Gate is portrayed on the third 5d multicolor.

A Celtic cross from Margam Abbey in Glamorgan is depicted on the 9d value. The 1s denomination features a portrait of Prince Charles. Appearing on each stamp is: "Prince of Wales," and the Welsh equivalent: "Tywysog Cymru."

★ ★ ★

This set was photogravure printed by Harrison and Sons Ltd. the designer is David Gentleman. The format is vertical, and they are perforated 14 by 15. The colors of the 5d stamps are green, silver, red, French grey, mid-grey, dark grey and black. The 9d is in gold, dark grey, light grey and black colors. Black and gold are the colors of the 1s adhesive.

This won't be the first time that Prince Charles has appeared on a stamp—a few New Zealand "health" semi-postals bear his likeness.

The air letter form, also designed by David Gentleman, features ships in the sea, with Caernarvon Castle prominent in the background. A view inside the castle is on the front of this form.

Prince Edward (now the Duke of Windsor) was installed similarly as Prince of Wales in Caernarvon Castle on July 13, 1911. A number of Canadian and Newfoundland stamps show him as Prince of Wales.

The U.S. 1.6c stamped envelope to be issued June 16 replaces the 1.4c envelope which becomes obsolete July 1.

On Aug. 8, the Tokelau Islands will place on sale four commemoratives honoring four notable changes in the island's status. Each value depicts a scroll which is inscribed with the relevant data. They are 5c, Tokelau Islands became a British protectorate (1877); 10c, Tokelau Islands became part of the Gilbert and Ellice Islands colony (1916); 15c, administration of Tokelau Islands transferred to New Zealand (1925), and 25c, Tokelau Islands became New Zealand territory (1948).

The Tokelau group is situated about 300 miles north of Western Samoa. Their first adhesives were issued June 22, 1948. They attractively show engraved scenes and maps of the islands.

On July 16, the United States will release a 6-cent stamp in San Diego to observe the bicentenary of the settlement of California. Featured is the belfry (sans bats) of the Spanish mission in Carmel.

Man Directs His Own Play

A one-act play by Colin Moncrief of Victoria was presented by the newly-formed White Cross Drama Club in St. Barnabas Hall recently.

Moncrief directed his own play entitled A Morning at the Office.

Bing Mansfied played the president of a wholesale drug-distributing firm, in trouble with his wife, his employees and his secretary.

Jean Stark was delightful as a female security analyst, and Clara Hill Maunsell was in good form as the boss's irate wife.

The set, with its modern computers and scientific equipment was simply but artistically designed by Mel Hughes. Henry W. Maunsell was stage manager.

New Attack in Air On Mosquito Plague

Aerial and ground spraying may begin next week in an attempt to rid the Crofton-Westholme area of a mosquito plague.

North Cowichan municipality stopped free issue of the pesticide Malathion to residents Thursday, when health inspector Douglas Roe said use of the spray may be harmful to humans and domestic animals.

Municipal clerk A. Vande Casteyen said the mosquito problem has not increased since the spraying stopped. But an entomologist said, while poison was still being used, it was the worst infestation he had ever seen.

The new attack will be on breeding areas, he said.

The infestation had affected lumber work this week. Longshoremen complained that the insects made it difficult for them to unload lumber at Crofton Wharf.

The pulp mill at Crofton has been issuing insect repellant to workers, and in the wharf area, diesel oil was spread over water to cut down the number of mosquitos.

NORTH COWICHAN — Cowichan school district ratepayers living in North Cowichan will elect a school trustee today to fill a vacancy left by the recent retirement of Jack Efford.

David Roy Haywood, an employment supervisor at Crofton pulp mill, and Fred Zantvoort, a stockbroker, are candidates.

Polling stations are located at North Cowichan municipal hall, Southend fire hall and Maple Bay elementary school.

★ ★ ★

DUNCAN — Assorted municipal officials and 115 school patrols gave a noisy good-bye Friday to RCMP Cpl. Colin Smith of the RCMP.

Smith, head of the highway patrol at Duncan, has been in charge of junior safety patrols for seven years. He will leave for his new post in Terrace next week.

At the going-away assembly in Duncan elementary school, Smith praised the patrols for a 20-year, accident-free record.

ATTENDING the 1969 Lions International Convention in Tokyo July 2 to 5 will be Ernest H. Emery, district governor of District 19-H, of Lions International multiple district. ## West Coast Summer Ship Starts Early

Extra service to the west coast of Vancouver Island via motor ship begins a week early this year to accommodate Dominion Day vacationers.

Alberni Marine Transportation Ltd. said its vessel Lady Rose will inaugurate summer excursion service Sunday, June 29, augmenting the regular Port Alberni-Bamfield schedule to provide a total of three trips per week during July and August.

The vessel will leave Port Alberni an hour later than usual, at 9 a.m., arriving at Bamfield at noon and returning at 7 p.m. each Sunday.

The company said that since many holidayers would have a long weekend prior to the Dominion Day holiday Tuesday, the ship would start its Sunday service early to accommodate them.

Convention Hears Radical Theories By New-Idea Men

By STEVE HUME

Hair was short at the Canadian Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation convention at the University of Victoria this week—but the atmosphere was distinctly radical.

It was no accident, and the intensive program of lectures, seminars and research sessions would have cheered the gloomiest student dissenter.

Uvic professor Fred Martens, committee chairman who organized and co-ordinated the 18th national CAHPER summit, says the convention format had been planned for two years.

It was aimed at a wide cross-section of physical education instructors, scientists, sociologists, administrators, athletes and education researchers from across the country.

Martens frankly admits he aimed at shaking some of them up with radical socially and psychologically oriented theories about education, athletics, man and society.

He and his 21-man committee spent "many thousands of hours planning the convention format," he said.

It Was a Bit of a Gamble

"And one of the things we did deliberately was to get people coming to this convention who were provocative people with provocative ideas.

"A convention of this sort that fails to stimulate people and get them thinking over their own and new ideas would be a failure."

It was a bit of a gamble, but it paid off in delegate participation, as 400 of the 550 attending were moved enough to stick around for the final banquet Wednesday night.

Despite soaring temperatures and the lure of beaches, most delegates put up with the sticky heat, switched to shorts and sweat-shirts, and stayed on the sweltering campus for the three days of sessions.

When Martens went for a radical tone he didn't go the whole hog.

Traditional commercial displays ranging from electronic gear to gymnastic equipment, track shoes and sports clothes provided a splash of color in the grey halls of Uvic's education and arts complex, the Maclaurin building.

To offset the flamboyant new-idea men like Dr. Howard Slusher of the University of Southern California and Dr. Muska Mosston of Rutgers University were steady, if brilliant, researchers like Dr. Lawrence Rarick of Berkeley and Dr. George Szasz of the University of British Columbia.

Slusher's opening day address on sport, athletics and physical education and their relation to student unrest was a stimulating and controversial presentation that effectively polarized delegates, said Martens.

Suffer in Quiet Frustration

"They either thought he was the best or they hated him."

The Berkeley professor tied physical education in with student unrest and campus authoritarianism, and passed a ringing indictment of current physical education practices, "as a system that presents possible obstacles to the solution of the problem."

He told the audience he was sympathetic to youth, and was sympathetic to campus dissenters because "they do not love excessively the world we have created, and they hate some things well worth hating."

But he said the great majority of students suffer in quiet frustration or erupt in occasional violence, or worry, hoping somehow they will find and maintain a pattern of escape from the walls that continue to close in around them.

In the United States, as in many other countries, school authorities are increasingly recruited from former gym teachers—this despite the fact they are not among the intellectual elite, Dr. Slusher said.

"These men bring to school administration the spirit of the informal martinet, superficially jolly, slapping everyone on the ass, but internally Napoleonic—intolerant of spirit in young people and of poetry in anything."

"This is a paradox, for the athlete and today's young hippie should be allies. In short, to be a fine athlete one must be turned on, must be hippie about sport—hanging tough but loose."

If physical education is to survive, he told them, it must strive to make itself relevant to life and the life of youth, and accused instructors of being too quick to harass those with different ideas and values.

Impact Two Days Later

He said sport is applied art, like ballet, and among the most formal of the arts it can be relevant to the socially oriented young and thus provide a "workable bridge" between the generations.

The impact of his address was such that it was still being discussed over coffee and during sessions two days after he had left Victoria.

Israel-born Mosston of Rutgers was another radical thinker who slapped current modes of physical education.

His indictment was of course design and teaching methods based on competition and elimination rather than on including all students in the learning process.

Rarick and Szasz were slightly more scholarly in their presentations, but the subject matter was controversial and had sharp overtones of a radical preoccupation with social values rather than abstract academic postures.

Rarick was concerned with the fact that virtually no mentally retarded youngsters receive beneficial physical education when they could be instructed with relative ease.

Sex education, the teacher and the community concerned Szasz, who accused the society at large of ignoring the teacher's role as a potent male or female sex symbol in the classroom.

He proposed a system of integrating sex education into the schools without setting it aside as either a course for biology teachers or anatomists.

725 PINTS OF BLOOD NEEDED

Three blood donor clinics in the Victoria area Monday to Thursday hope to collect 725 pints of blood for the Canadian Red Cross.

Clinics will be held Monday and Tuesday at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort St. from 1:30 to 4:30 and 6:30 to 9 p.m.

Clinics will be open in the Legislative Buildings from 1 to 4 p.m. Tuesday and 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. on Wednesday. Thursday the clinic is at HMC Dockyard, Esquimalt from 9 a.m. to 12 noon, and 1 to 4 p.m. in the officer candidate school gymnasium.

YOUNGSTERS EVACUATED from a home for retarded children in Hamilton because of fire early today are cared for by staff members and pyjama-clad apartment dwellers in an emergency "field hospital" established on an adjacent parking lot. None of the 101 patients was injured. (AP Wirephoto).

Arab Ambassador Role Seen For Russia in Mideast Talks

By DAVID HIRST

BEIRUT (The Manchester Guardian) — The Soviet Union is acting as little more than Egypt's ambassador at the Four-power talks on the Middle East, an authoritative Egyptian journalist asserted Friday.

The claim by Muhammed Haikal, editor of Al Aharam and a confidant of Egypt's President Gamal Abdel Nasser, comes amid a series of militantly self-assertive noises from Egypt that seem calculated to impress Moscow as much as everyone else.

SHOULD CONTINUE

According to Haikal's weekly column, Soviet Foreign Misinster Andrei Gromyko asked Nasser during his recent visit to Cairo whether he wanted the Russians to end their talks on the Mideast with the United States. Gromyko suggested that the great power talks should continue, Haikal wrote, but also told Nasser;

"The final decision on the matter is yours because the crisis concerns the Arabs more than anyone else. If you think that the talks with the U.S. should be discontinued we would oblige immediately."

Even if Gromyko did not show the extraordinary deference which Haikal said he did, it is growing increasingly clear that the Soviet Union can only preserve Egypt's good will by far-reaching concessions to the Egyptian position.

More significant than all the current publicity about the solidity of Arab-Soviet friendship are the increasingly insistent declarations of Arab self-reliance which have accompanied it. No sooner had Gromyko left Cairo, for example, than the Egyptian commander-in-chief declared that Egypt had now entered the "year of liberation" of the territories occupied by Israel.

But the most striking development is the sudden rapprochement between Egypt and the Syrian Baathists, with Egypt apparently drawing much closer to the Damascus hard line against Israel.

The Egyptian version of a joint communique issued Thursday after surprise talks between Egypt and Syrian leaders in Damascus was even more toughly worded than its Syrian counterpart. The communique, which didn't even mention peaceful solutions to the Mideast crisis, declared that the "Resumption of fighting on the largest possible scale" was the only way to recover Arab territory from Israel.

Both countries, it said, were determined to extend "absolute and unlimited" support to the Palestine guerrillas.

Police Trade Charges Over Hidden Tapes

TORONTO (CP) — Officials of the Ontario Police Commission, the provincial policemen's association and the Toronto police Friday night traded accusations of using hidden recording equipment.

Dennis Latten, executive secretary of the Police Association of Ontario, denied statements by two police commission members that commission investigator Fred Davies was the victim of electronic eavesdropping while investigating an intra-departmental problem of the Brantford police force last spring.

The association represents 10,000 police in the province.

Commission Chairman Percy Milligan and Judge Thomas Graham, a committee member, said Mr. Latten "admitted frankly" at a recent commission meeting that a conversation was recorded in Brantford by a policeman wearing electronic equipment and that the association owns a $700 tape recorder built into an attache case.

Mr. Latten said later the association does not own such a recorder and did not tape any conversation in Brantford.

The police association's president, Sydney Brown, said in another interview he will "immediately resign if anyone can prove that we have ever used bugging devices as a police association."

WILL INVESTIGATE

"The charge that we have bugged anyone is totally erroneous and incorrect," Mr. Brown said. "We have tapings for our general executive meetings but nothing else. . . . I will conduct an internal investigation and if these accusations bear any semblance to the truth I will resign."

The accusations against the association were made after Mr. Latten said Toronto police make "indiscriminate use" of wiretapping and go "far beyond what is necessary in the enforcement of law and order."

"That's a ridiculous statement," Toronto Police Chief James Mackey said later.

The accusations and denials developed following testimony on police eavesdropping given at meeting of the House of Commons justice committee. The committee was told that Toronto police recovered 33 of 50 pieces of electronic eavesdropping equipment found by Bell Telephone in Metropolitan Toronto.

Mr. Latten said in an interview more wiretapping is done than has been revealed and that he had "personal knowledge" Metro police have lent men and equipment for wiretapping to other police departments within 100 miles of Toronto.

MPs Probe Role of Archaic House

By ANTHONY WESTELL

The special caucus of Liberal MPs this weekend is seeking to answer the question: What is the role of the MP?

Westell

But behind the discussions on this issue lies a much deeper and seldom publicly acknowledged concern: What is the role of Parliament?

Many of the Liberals who came into politics in the general election a year ago are still amazed and frequently appalled by the dusty procedures and creaking ceremonies of the House of Commons, so far removed from the fast, modern world of real life in their constituencies.

They are not alone in their uneasy feeling that Parliament, after 1,000 years of history, may be irrelevant—a pompous emperor waiting for a small boy to draw attention to his absurd nakedness.

Talking to People

Among the advisers to Conservative leader Robert Stanfield there are those who are beginning to think that time spent in the Commons is time largely wasted, and that he would make more political capital out in the country talking to people, rather than to empty seats.

In the parliamentary press gallery, newsmen grumble that it is less and less rewarding and more and more boring to sit through the question period in the Commons.

The reporters long ago gave up listening to the tedious debates, and MPs—who used to complain piously that sparkling speeches were being ignored—have now followed the example of the newsmen and spend as little time as possible in the Commons chamber.

With a majority government solidly in power, the political battles are obviously sham warfare. The opposition parties may launch a seemingly ferocious attack on some such issue as the cost of living, but perhaps 20 MPs are actually in the chamber to hear the speeches, and they are snoozing, reading the newspapers or politely concealing their yawns as they wait their turn to read their speeches into the pages of Hansard.

Obviously Wrong

Some things about Parliament and its members are so obviously wrong that they are hardly worth discussing, and in fact have been almost ruled off the agenda for the Liberal caucus. If MPs have value as representatives of the people and as important cogs in the machinery of democratic government, they should be paid substantially more than $12,000 a year salary and $6,000 expenses. And they should have adequate offices with telephones and staff. If public opinion and the government are not ready to agree, the point is made that Parliament has ceased to have real value in the eyes of the country.

What the Liberal backbenchers are talking about this weekend are the slightly more sophisticated questions of whether they are entitled to research assistance, to some freedom from government discipline to vote as they please in committees, to the opportunity to influence cabinet policy before legislation goes to the Commons, and so on.

These might be called fundamental freedoms for government members and it is extraordinary—when one stops to think about it in a rational way—that they are still up for discussion. Who can argue?

Community Status

More provocative is the subject area of the MP outside Parliament—his status and place in the community, his right to a private life, and similar matters to be discussed in one of the caucus seminars.

But when backbenchers chat in private, in the House of Commons fifth floor cafeteria, in their offices or at social gatherings among friends, many tend to take even these questions for granted and to discuss deeper problems.

Most of them recognize that they are elected almost by accident, as by-products of the battle between party leaders. Voters go to the polls to choose a prime minister but are forced by the system to express their preference by electing a constituency MP. One ready-reckoning is that the election of a backbencher depends on his own efforts for about 20 per cent of total input into the campaign, the remaining 80 per cent coming from the national party image and the leader.

Faceless Emissary

Having elected an MP, do constituents take any further interest in him? Once upon a time the member was an important and respected figure in his community, and he may still have status in a small town or rural riding. But in an urban constituency the MP is quite likely to be unrecognized and unregarded.

Members of the public often treat him as a faceless functionary, or ambassador to the bureaucracy, handy in Ottawa to hurry up a passport or to sort out a pension problem. But when the citizen wants to influence a political decision, he is likely to do it directly through the party machinery, by representations to a cabinet minister or, perhaps, by the techniques of public protest.

The public, in other words, recognizes two primary sources of power and decision, the cabinet and the bureaucracy, and its not much impressed by Parliament or its members. And this may be an instinctively accurate understanding of realities.

Premier Fulfils Promise Of Continuity, New Ideas

By HARVEY HUDSON

PARIS (AP) — Suave Jacques Chaban-Delmas, France's new premier, is the incarnation of President Georges Pompidou's campaign promise of continuity and new ideas.

Chaban-Delmas, 54, was a resistance leader during the Second World War but was not with the coterie that surrounded Charles de Gaulle. During his political career he has been favorable to Gaullist principles but not unswervingly attached to de Gaulle himself.

He accepted ministries in the Fourth Republic at a time when it was fashionable for hard-core Gaullists to shun the oft-changing governments. But as defence minister in 1958, he helped in the manoeuvring that led to de Gaulle's return to power.

Paul Reynaud was de Gaulle's choice for president of the National Assembly when the Fifth Republic was installed in 1959, but Chaban-Delmas opposed Reynaud and won. By protocol the job ranked fourth in France, but Chaban-Delmas was never invited to move closer to the formation of policy.

OUTSIDE INNER CIRCLE

Thus Chaban-Delmas has been a faithful Gaullist in his own fashion and can confidently claim to represent a continuity of Gaullist policy. But he has also been an outsider to the real inner circle, and can pretend to bring a new face and new methods of government.

The move to the Hotel Matignon, the premier's office and residence, may force some radical changes in Chaban-Delmas's rhythm of living.

He has been mayor of Bordeaux since 1947, and has established a routine of spending four days in Paris and three days in Bordeaux. The premier's studies may force him to devote much more of his time to Paris.

CHABAN-DELMAS
. . . important role

And he may have much less time for his athletic activities.

Chaban-Delmas was an avid rugby player in his younger days and was selected for French amateur teams in international competitions. Later he turned to tennis and got all the way to the finals of the men's doubles in the French national championships in 1965.

He still plays tennis.

Golf is his latest passion, and he says vigorous early-morning calisthenics help a man arrive at his desk "with his brain well irrigated."

Chaban-Delmas became a journalist-trainee on a financial newspaper at the age of 19. But he went on to the School of Political Sciences in Paris, then became a member of the elite corps of finance inspectors.

With the war coming on, Chaban-Delmas attended the Saint Cyr military school as a reserve student-officer. When the fighting started he was a sub-lieutenant assigned to mountain troops.

Later he joined the Resistance. He once parachuted into occupied France and was a liaison officer between the Resistance inside Paris and the French division that advanced on the city in 1944. De Gaulle appointed him a brigadier-general the same year—at the age of 29.

Chaban-Delmas was born Jacques Delmas, the son of a well-to-do business executive, but during his resistance activities he used the code name of Chaban. After the war he adopted his hyphenated name.

Chaban-Delmas has served as a deputy continuously since 1946. He was a minister in the cabinets headed by Pierre Mendes-France, Guy Mollet and Felix Gaillard.

LABOR CLEANS UP DIRTY PROBLEM

LONDON (CP) — Ten women lavatory cleaners voted today to end a five-day strike—and gave Britain's Trades Union Congress its first success in controlling wildcat walkouts.

The strike had thrown 2,500 people out of work at the Joseph Lucas Motor Works in Birmingham. They were sent home because the women's toilets at the factory had become unsanitary. Hundreds of men were involved because the assembly line depended on the women's production.

No details of the settlement were disclosed; but even on this relatively trivial issue TUC regarded the back-to-work decision as a triumph.

Earlier this week the TUC solemnly promised Prime Minister Wilson to act against wildcat strikers in return for an undertaking that the Labor government would abandon plans to fine workers who defy union orders to return to their jobs.

Wilson's government says restraints on Britain's rash of unofficial walkouts is essential to restore Britain to economic prosperity.

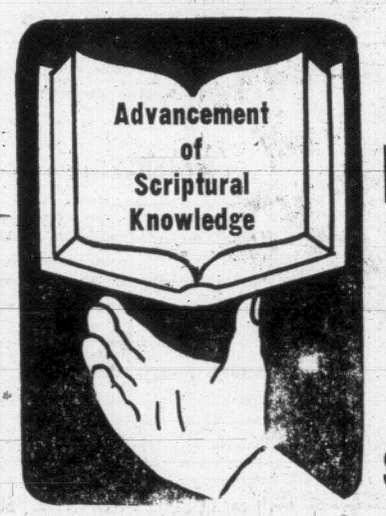

The TUC's first chance to show what it can do came in the dispute over the women cleaners. They went on strike to press demands for equal pay with men lavatory cleaners at Lucas plants—a matter of being paid the equivalent of $7.80 a week more.

TUC chiefs intervened and urged the women to go back to work pending negotiations.

Changing Sunday Schools May Even Be on Mondays

TORONTO (CP) — Sunday school classes — which aren't necessarily held on Sundays any more — are changing with the times.

Lagging attendance in the early 1960s prompted many of the Protestant denominations here to take a hard look at their curricula. For some, the result is more activity and bright, attractive literature.

The Anglican Church recommends, among other literature, the use of A. A. Milne's fictional Winnie-the-Pooh for eight and nine-year-olds because it says "you can see Christian values everywhere."

The United Church of Canada, also brightening up its literature, got into difficulty with some of its members over it. Collage, one of the church's new monthly publications for young people, devoted one issue to an understanding of the Chinese.

Complaints started over an illustration featuring a large picture of Mao Tse-tung and a small picture of Prime Minister Trudeau. Small print explained that the difference in picture sizes represented the population of the two countries.

But not all churches have changed. Extremes are represented by the Unitarian Congregation which says "We don't force a belief of God," and the People's Church "where Christ is the heart of the message" and where the Bible is the only Sunday school textbook.

BUILT AROUND CHILDREN

Canon P. C. Jefferson, Anglican director of parish and diocesan services, says other weekend activities are affecting his church's Sunday school attendance and he would like to shift the classes to another day.

About two-thirds of the Anglican churches here use a curriculum which the church completed in 1967, Canon Jefferson said. "We learned that you don't build an education program around the Bible but around the children."

The new curriculum gives the teacher a variety of ideas and he can deal with a topic which seems appropriate for a particular Sunday.

The United Church began working on its new curriculum a decade ago and introduced it in 1964, placing the emphasis on group participation in various activities and leaning away from the Bible.

Margarete Emminghaus, secretary of youth, says the program stresses such activities as painting, writing and drama "to help them express and use what knowledge they're getting."

She urges week-day classes in religion if they suit a parish.

"Eleven o'clock on Sunday morning wasn't the only time God spoke," she said.

SUPPORTED DEOMOCRAT

In 1884, the Republicans deserted James G. Blaine, their nominee for president of the United States, and supported Grover Cleveland, and Democratic candidate.

Moscow Likes Communist Christianity

MOSCOW (AP)—The Russian Orthodox Church has found new favor here by developing "Communist Christianity."

This accepts the Communist social system as just and good and supports Kremlin policies. It plays down the philosophic conflict between the Christian faith and the atheistic materialism officially espoused by the government.

Notable evidence of a changed attitude toward the church appears in the latest issue of the magazine Nauka I Religya (Science and Religion), the leading Soviet publication on religious matters. The magazine used to assail religion and proclaim the need for its disappearance from Soviet life.

The new article praises the Russian Orthodox Church, which claims 50,000,000 members, for turning to Communist Christianity, citing pronouncements by Orthodox leaders and theologians to show they associate the Soviet system with the kingdom of God on earth.

The previous issue of the magazine, taking a similarly favorable attitude, wrote admiringly of church members as good Soviet citizens. It referred to polls taken recently which were said to have confirmed this.

In an unusual move, the government is promoting a meeting in Moscow July 1-4 of Soviet religious leaders of all faiths. They are to discuss peace and international friendship, two favorite Communist propaganda themes.

Incredible Clergyman Likes His Ooze Dry

By REV. L. KINSOLVING

NEW ORLEANS — Just after he was re-elected president of America's largest Protestant denomination, the Rev. Wallie Amos Criswell, spiritual leader of 11 million Southern Baptists, was described by one of them as "a cross between Billy Sunday and King Kong."

Kinsolving

But in so describing Criswell, the younger and infinitely more liberal pastor was smiling—among other reasons because it is inordinately difficult not to enjoy W. A. Criswell.

Whether it is his great grin and hearty, homespun humor, or the amusement value in a religious patriarch who is only slightly left of the Flat Earth Society; or a preaching technique in which he has mastered what might best be described as a sort of symphonic bellow—Dr. Criswell is an attraction not to be missed.

★ ★ ★

He can be seen most Sunday mornings in the pulpit of the First Baptist Church of Dallas (membership: 14,000). And if Liberace in contemplating his detractors "weeps all the way to the bank," Criswell smiles beneficently upon his critics, while his church board is obliged to rent an armored car to transport each Sunday's collection receipts.

This incredible clergyman has recently written a book which is a cinch to ease (if not eliminate) the work load of Southern Baptist chaplains on any (non-Baptist) campuses. Its title: Why I Preach That the Bible Is Literally True.

And since the author was overwhelmingly re-elected president of 16,000 delegates ("messengers") of the Southern Baptist Convention, this book takes on as close an approximation of dogma as is possible in this conglomeration of 35,000 fiercely independent local congregations.

In "Why I Preach . . .", the outspoken Dallas pastor charges among other things that "the big lie of our modern era is evolution. I read the lie in textbooks taught our children and I see the lie on the inside."

★ ★ ★

(Asked at a press conference if Dallas school teachers who teach evolution might not be regarded as merely "mistaken" rather than "lying," Criswell replied: "It just depends on how vigorously I'm a-talkin' about it.")

The evolutionists, he scoffs, ask us to believe that "out of this ooze came human personality." Apparently the Rev. Dr. Criswell accepts such an origin, however, provided the "ooze" is dry—as the dust which Genesis reports as the origin of Adam.

"One of the chief cornerstones of Christian faith is removed if the historical reality of Adam is abandoned," he writes. Moreover: "There can be little doubt that Cain married one of the numerous offspring of Adam and Eve." (Neither Genesis nor Criswell condemns this obvious case of incest, despite his assurance that "The Bible is not many books but one book . . . one system of ethics.")

★ ★ ★

Other notable information in this astounding book:

"Formerly it was thought incredible that Moses could have written the Pentateuch." (The Pentateuch, the first five books of the Bible, contains the description of Moses' own death.)

"There is no contradiction in the Bible to any known fact of science."

Joshua's total annihilation of the Caananites was a "visitation from heaven" due to "their hopeless depravity."

St. Peter, in his First Epistle, "is saying that the prophets wrote down what they were told to write (by God) whether they understood it or not."

Criswell repeatedly stresses "the inspiration of each word" of the Bible. "Each sentence was dictated by God's Holy Spirit." And "If we believe in God at all, we could believe that God is able to prepare a whole suite of rooms in that ocean monster to take care of Jonah."

Yet there are parts of the Bible unacceptable to the outspoken pastor. For example, he refuses to accept as literal a statement of Jesus at the Last Supper, when he took bread and said: "This is my body." (A miracle, according to Martin Luther.)

Criswell also brusquely dismisses the story of the angel at the pool of Bethesda (John 5:4): "The whole thing was the work of an unkown copyist." Furthermore: "If the literal meaning does not make good sense, it is figurative."

But let even the most distinguished Southern Baptist Bible scholar confess his belief that it is Jonah's fish or eternal damnation that is nonsense (rather than those passages designated as nonsense by Criswell) and: "If a man does not believe that the Bible is the Word of God, he has no place in any pulpit in the land."

★ ★ ★

And where the warmly congenial Criswell ceases being amusing or enjoyable is in his engendering a doctrinal rigidity which in the last decade has resulted in the firing of more than 20 Southern Baptist theological seminary professors.

The 200 member Association of Baptist Professors of Religion has protested an atmosphere of "harassment, Biblicism and witchhunting." Two of its leaders, Rev. T. C. Smith of Furman University and Rev. Robert Alley of the University of Richmond, have contended that "Baptist colleges are no longer as controlled by the denomination as are the seminaries—most seminary professors would switch to colleges if the teaching posts were open."

And if such denial of academic freedom continues, they promised to "advise all college students to avoid Southern Baptist seminaries." Both professors add that they can envisage the possibility of "a major split in the denomination."

It's the Month of the Bearded Iris

By JACK BEASTALL

Every month there seems to be a popular garden plant requiring attention; this month it is bearded iris.

To the average gardener an iris is an iris, and the one species recognized by all is the bearded, or as it was once called, the German iris.

Jack

However, the genus includes enough species for the gardener to have a different kind of iris in bloom every month of the year if right conditions for growing can be created.

Many species dislike disturbance and for this reason we stress that it is German, or bearded, iris which needs attention in June.

These plants have nearly finished blooming for this year, although late-flowering varieties are still at their best. In either case, work on them is done as soon as the last flowers fade.

Bearded iris (Iris Germanica) grow from a rhizome, an elongated storage stem usually situated below soil level, from which leaves and roots extend.

●

In the case of bearded iris, this rhizome is half in and half out of the soil where it can be well baked by the hot sun of summer. Low planting is often the cause of poor flowering.

New growths extend from the rhizome each year, the first year bearing only leaves, flowers coming the second year. After a few years, the centre of the plant becomes a mass of rhizomes, and the growing parts and leaves are at outer edges of the clump.

Where space permits, this habit of spreading will continue as the plant reaches out for richer soil, but in the limitations of the home garden it is necessary to exercise some form of control.

In the average garden time limit seems to be five years, leading to the often repeated admonition that bearded iris should be replanted every five years, but this is not a fixed period by any means.

●

When time arrives for working on these plants, the gardener realizes why we so often suggest that plants be grown in groups of one kind instead of dotted here and there among totally unrelated plants.

One reason is greater color effect achieved with minimum of plants, but more to the point is the fact that when grouped in one bed the plants can be worked on at the right time without interfering with others that resent disturbance of roots now, or at any time.

To renew an iris bed we must first dig up all the plants. Before doing this, each clump should have its name written on a wired label and attached by pushing the wire through a leaf.

A wise precaution is to put the lifted clumps into heaps of one variety so that chances of mixing are reduced.

Since bearded iris likes summer baking, clumps and heaps may be left in full sun without protection, for the old roots will die as soon as removed from the soil and nothing is gained by trying to save them.

●

Having cleared the bed of old plants, the soil is turned over and, if you have it, compost may be added. One caution, however: never add any animal manures to an iris bed, and be sure the added compost is rotted down to a fine mold.

If the soil is dry, it can be watered a little and left for a few days to settle. In the meantime, the old clumps can receive attention. If soil is clinging to the rhizomes, wash it off with hose water.

Next, remove outside rhizomes that have leaves attached, and discard those with no leaves. It is easy to separate rhizomes with a sharp knife, cutting through the narrow joining sections.

The long leaves pose a problem to many gardeners but a sharp knife and strong wrist soon disposes of problem and leaves.

Holding rhizome in left hand, slash through leaves from edge of fan to centre on one side, then repeat on other side.

●

When finished, the fan of leaves is reduced to a peak like a gable of a roof, about four inches high, where the cut started, and six to seven inches at the centre.

Next comes replanting, and this differs somewhat from planting a shrub or tree.

Instead of taking out one hole for each rhizome, we make two holes and leave a ridge of undisturbed soil between.

We set the rhizome on top of the ridge and push the roots into holes each side—just to anchor the rhizome, for these roots will shrivel and be replaced with new ones. If too long for convenient handling, roots may be shortened to six inches. Bonemeal may be added but no other kind of fertilizer.

When planing, always place fan of leaves to north and rhizome to south, so that leaves will not shade rhizome in summer when it needs baking.

Rhizomes may be planted in groups of three or five to give the effect of a large clump.

When bed is finally raked and levelled, each rhizome should be half in, half out of the soil like a duck on a pond.

Tips for The Home Gardener

●

WEEK'S WORK

The surface mulch of any kind around shrubs must be inspected frequently to be sure there is dampness below.

As the true lilies put up their flower stems, give a feeding of 6-8-6 or 6-10-10 plant food, well watered in.

See that early potatoes are not exposed to light, but do not hill or cover too deeply.

Keep up small succession sowings of vegetables being sure that enough compost is in the sowing rows to hold moisture at roots for germination. The shade of a long piece of shiplap leaning on sticks, will keep off hot sun yet allow air to reach the ground.

Remove side shoots from staking varieties of tomatoes as soon as seen. Leave all side shoots on the bush varieties.

Shop Centre Tendering Likely Soon

Tenders are expected to be called in August for a $2.5 million shopping centre in the North Shelbourne area of Saanich.

Municipal council has given three readings to the necessary zoning bylaw and final reading is expected early in July.

The development, at the corner of Shelbourne Street and McKenzie Avenue, will be called University Heights Shopping Centre.

Developer Jack Aceman of Vancouver said completion is expected by spring of next year.

It will include a K-Mart department store of 84,000 square feet, a 23,00-foot Canada Safeway supermarket and various specialty stores. K-Mart is part of the Kresge store chain.

The Wonderful World of Animals

DEAR DR. MILLER: As mother's doctor is non-committal about my suggestion, I'd appreciate your opinion. The problem is my mother's reluctance to leave her apartment. She goes out maybe three times a month for groceries and that's it. Her doctor says there is no physical reason why she shouldn't go out. He has, in fact, recommended walking as being very good for her. I would like to get her a small dog, one which would naturally need to go for walks itself. My feeling is my mother, who has always loved animals, would in this way start getting out herself to take care of "her" dog. Is there anything wrong with my thinking on this?—C.M.

DEAR C.M.: Not that I know of. Pets are used therapeutically in many situations. Certainly this would seem an ideal application. As long as your mother's doctor doesn't disapprove, why not? Both parties should benefit from such an introduction. It would provide an incentive for your mother and, I'm sure, good care for her canine companion.

DEAR DR. MILLER: The wife says you said not to feed grit because it can kill a bird. Since then, our spunky little parakeet, Hercules, hasn't had any. I think he's lost some weight and I know that he passed quite a bit of whole seed in his droppings. I wonder if he doesn't need some grit after all? And why would it kill him?—K.P.

DEAR K.P.: Grit will not kill or even harm a healthy bird. But it can cause a serious, even fatal, impaction in a puny parakeet—especially one with chronic diarrhea or a nutritional deficiency, because such an affected bird is most likely to gobble grit excessively. Normal birds don't. An X-ray could prove revealing in Herc's case. He does need a bit of grit in his gut (specifically, in his gizzard) to help him grind up seeds and other solid food. It would be simplest, perhaps, to offer just a small amount of grit to see if this helps him digest the seed properly. If not, the doctor had better find out why.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: I suspect my son's tortoise may have worms. Is this possible? If so, what kinds do they have?—C.W.

DEAR C.W.: Yes, a tortoise may have gastro-intestinal worms; including small roundworms, tapeworms and pinworms.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: Grandfather has suggested I give my horse a tonic of sulphur and molasses. He says to use a pound of sulphur and a quart of molasses. How does this sound to you?—A.F.

DEAR A.F.: Sounds sickening. It could be worse than sickening for the horse. It could kill him! While many horses have survived a dose of sulphur in excess of one pound, others have been killed by a dose half that large. If your horse really needs a tonic, better let the veterinarian, not your grandfather, recommend one.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: Of all the things my cat has to chew on, his favorite is always a soup bone, preferably one about as big as he is. Is this dangerous?—X.S.

DEAR X.S.: Not unless you trip over it. Actually chewing on a big bone is good exercise for a cat, especially for teeth and gums. Many cats ignore a big bone entirely, some chew half-heartedly at the meat still on it, but those willing to whittle it down a bit are, unfortunately, in the minority.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: I had a pet cricket. Then I got another one. I put them together and one ate the other one up. What does this mean?—B.D.

DEAR B.D.: It means at least one cricket was very hungry. It may also have meant they were both the same sex. A cricket won't usually eat another cricket if: (1) it has something else good to eat and (2) if they may make a pair.

U.S. Resentment Created Halifax

By BOB BOWMAN

Recent stories have told how a force of amateur soldiers from New England captured the mighty French fortress at Louisburg, Cape Breton, in 1745.

Bowman

Then Britain disgusted the Americans by trading Louisburg to France for Madras, India.

The resentment increased for 20 years, and Boston became a hotbed of agitation against the Mother Country. When the American Revolutionary War began, Colonel Gridley, who had planned the assault on Louisburg, prepared the defences of Bunker Hill against the British.

American resentment also led to the creation of Halifax to counteract Louisburg. Although Britain had owned Nova Scotia (except Cape Breton) since 1713, little effort had been made to colonize it and most of the people were French.

So when it was decided to build a fort at Halifax, nearly 2,500 settlers were sent from Britain where peace had brought unemployment.

They sailed across the Atlantic in small ships with picturesque names like Fair Lady, Brotherhood, and Merry Jacks.

When they got to Halifax on June 21, 1749, they were given provisions for a year, free land, and no taxes for 10 years.

The new settlers were chosen carefully so there were farmers, fishermen, carpenters, masons, blacksmiths, butchers and bakers.

The townsite was laid out by engineers, and sites for homes were chosen by lottery. Work went ahead quickly and the town of Halifax had been created by winter.

It was the beginning of the final conflict for Canada. While the British were building Halifax, the French from Canada were preparing to occupy the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers to the Gulf of Mexico. Both sides were determined to drive the other from North Americal.

Other events on June 21:

1694—Canadian and Indian attack on Maine was repulsed.

1732—Coal mining began in Nova Scotia.

1764—Quebec Gazette was founded as second oldest newspaper in Canada.

1814—Third party of Selkirk settlers arrived at Red River.

1893—Liberals formed trade policy at convention in Ottawa.

1919—Winnipeg general strike led to serious riot known as "bloody Saturday."

1946—Newfoundland held convention to decide future form of government.

1954—Railway opened from Labrador iron mines to Sept Iles.

HORSE OWNERS STONED HIM

Head Over Heels for Wheels . . . And Quite 'Engine-Mad'

By Pat Dufour

A "love affair with wheels" dies hard.

Edward H. Livesay, 1596 Midgard, has had one since he was a boy of five. He still has it . . . and he turned 87 May 17.

This is no idle love affair. He's become a world-wide authority on locomotive engines through decades of intensive study. He has been writing articles in the London magazine "The Engineer" for 30 years.

Livesay has ridden the rails in the cabs of some of the most famous trains in Canada, the United States, England and France. In 1938 the Canadian Pacific Railroad gave him permission to ride in the cabs of their trains. He did, often at the throttle.

Livesay is just as much an authority on machines that use the highways. As he says, "I've been engine-mad ever since I can remember."

His memories date back to the beginning of the "horseless buggy" era. He was 16 when he first took to the road on a De Dion tricycle.

Red Flag Act

This was in Croydon, England. It was there he was to witness the famous run of cars from London to Brighton which was to be the forerunner of the annual classic. This was in November, 1896.

Livesay reports that the race was arranged to celebrate the end of the Red Flag Act which demanded that speeds not exceed four miles an hour and that each car be preceded by a man walking ahead, carrying a red flag as warning.

When the law was repealed November 13, car drivers were able to speed along at the magnificent pace of 12 miles an hour—minus the red flag!

About 30 machines took part in the race, held the next day "skidding, slithering all over the place." Livesay recalls "There were about 30 of them. The winner was a Duryea, a very fine American machine, and in second place was a Bollee Voiturette, a French machine that was a cross between a tricycle and a car."

Two years later Livesay bought himself a De Dion that was capable of 25 miles an hour, and had an air-cooled engine that functioned at 1,800 revs.

Looking back, he remembers that it took stamina to drive the machine.

"It had no clutch and no change of speed gear. It had pedals which were used to help start it and give an assist when you climbed hills. The machine weighed about 200 pounds."

In 1898 Livesay wrote the first of many articles for the classic car magazine "Autocar".

He decided to head for Canada in 1904 and spent two years learning the farming business at Norwood, Ont.

Those were engine-hungry years for Livesay.

"There were probably only 50 motor vehicles in the whole of Canada in those days. The farm was on the main highway between Montreal and Toronto. During the two years I was there I didn't see a single car pass." The first car in Canada was bought in 1899 by a Dr. Casgain of Montreal.

Drivers couldn't afford to be impatient or timid.

FINEST OF THEM ALL says Edward Livesay of this French steam locomotive, which he often drove on the run from Paris. The engine is now in the museum at Hirson, east of Paris.

"If you passed a restive horse on the road the law made you get out, lead the horse out of the danger zone, and then return to your machine. I can remember being yelled at, and having stones and other things thrown at me."

During the First World War Livesay indulged in a different kind of riding.

He joined HMCS Rainbow on Saturday, July 31, 1914, four days before war was declared. "We were a pretty pathetic ship. She was 25 years old, and had a scratch crew, supplemented by 25 volunteers from Vancouver and 25 from Victoria, of which I was one.

"At the time war broke out we were Canada's only fighting force. There was no army, no air force, and the Rainbow's sister ship, Niobe, was out of commission at the time because most of her crew had deserted. Those that didn't had been sent to Rainbow.

Germans Faster

"The Germans had a modern fleet, newer and faster. If one of them had come anywhere near us, we'd have been at the bottom of the sea by now."

After eight months he was sent to the now-operational Niobe. He spent his birthday aboard her.

"I received a fine birthday present, a wicker basket in which we carried coal. It took 2,000 tons of the stuff to fuel her."

In August 1915 Niobe was withdrawn from service as "inoperational" and Livesay acted.

"I was fed up to the teeth so I wangled my way out of the Canadian navy, enrolled in the Royal Navy and spent two years in the Channel on minesweepers."

His Canadian discharge read "at his own request for reasons of urgent private affairs".

He was invalided in 1917.

Returning to Canada, Livesay settled on 18 acres in Saanich, hewing a strawberry farm "out of jungle and bush." Livesay Road now leads to the site of his farm, which is now owned by Arch Bain.

Livesay retired from farming at the age of 55.

As in the First World War, Livesay was anxious to do his bit when the Second World War came along. He did, first as a roundhouse man with the Canadian Pacific Railroad at Victoria and Courtenay, and later he joined the radar asdic department of HMC Dockyard.

Built Home

At the outbreak of the war Livesay had headed for Ottawa, thinking to clear the necessary red tape so that he could go to England and take a full part in the war effort.

"I felt that England was where the real action was, and that was where I should be."

He was told that he was now a Canadian and it was in this country that he should do his bit.

He settled for the railroad job.

At the age of 66 Livesay decided to take up yet another hobby . . . home-building. With no previous experience he built the sturdy comfortable home in which he now lives.

The walls of his study are lined with bookcases containing hundreds of magazines to which he's contributed and pictures of some of the famous locomotives he's driven.

His days are almost as busy as those of his earlier years.

Livesey is kept busy answering correspondence with overseas friends who share his love affair with engines. When he's not typing letters, he's working on a book he intends to have published.

And, what spare minutes he has left during the day are spent on house-keeping.

"I won't live forever and I don't want my executors to be faced with a house that's a mess."

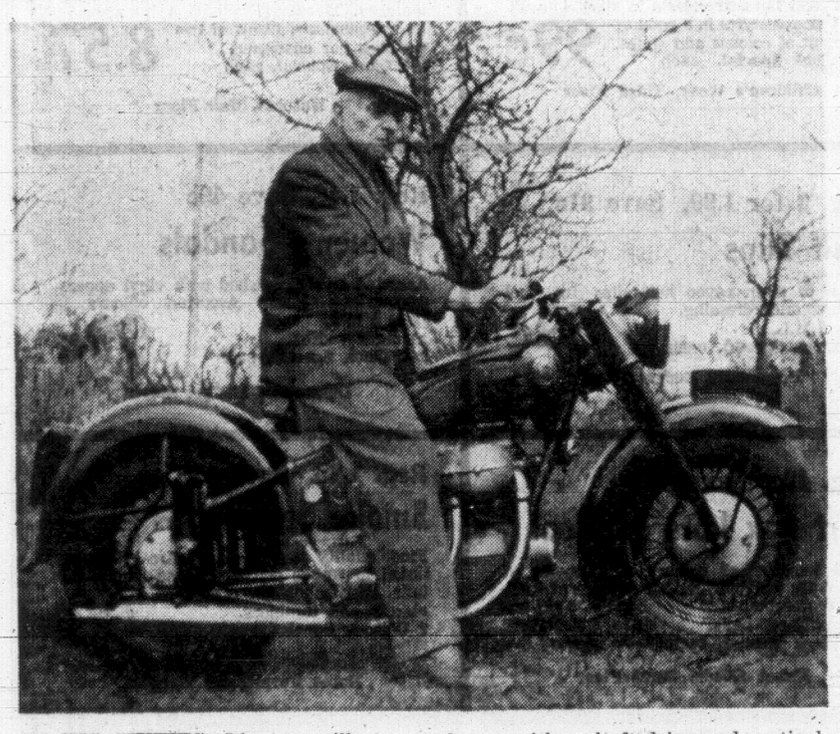

He says his days of riding the national railroads are over . . . "The days of steam and a lot of the romance have gone."

But he's not a bit despondent. When nostalgia overtakes him he can still ride the rails on the miniature locomotive at Mattick's Farm. His eyes gleam as he reports, "she's a little beauty!"

And, he has another satisfying hobby well in hand. He's busy handing on the intimate details of his "love affair" to 17-year-old John Lund, the tiny engine's chief engineer.

BACK IN 1898 Livesay bought his first machine at the age of 16. It was an 1898 De Dion motor tricycle, which cost him about $325. He remembers that the first pneumatic tires were invented by Dunlop in 1893. "I had them on a push-bike in 1895 for the first time. It felt like floating on a rainbow stuffed with cloud!"

IN HIS SIXTIES, Livesay still enjoyed a spin along the highway. The machine he rode then was a Sunbeam, with a shaft drive and vertical twin, loaned him by another ardent Victoria motorcyclist, Reg Shanks.

ABREAST WITH THE TIMES, Livesay discusses merits of Robin Burgess' light-weight machine, a far cry from the heavy motorcycle he rode in the early days.

Another Nail-Biter Joins Navy's White Knuckle Club

By BOB MITCHELL

I now have the dubious honor of belonging to the navy's "white knuckle club."

To join I had to transfer from one destroyer-escort to another while both were travelling at 15 knots on a rope-pulley device called a jackstay.

The term "white knuckle club" derives from the fact that most novices in a jackstay transfer hang on as if their life depended on it—and it does.

But when I transferred from HMCS Qu'Appelle to HMCS Yukon and back again weather conditions were ideal: the sea was calm, so the distance I had to cover was a mere 60 or 70 feet.

●

When my turn came I stepped forward and put my foot through the stirrup at the end of a seven-foot length of line (rope) suspended from a moving pulley.

"Cross your legs," I was told, "just like a woman, and hold on."

"All taut the jackstay!" came the command over a megaphone, and I shot aloft and was whisked out over the roaring water between the two ships.

It only lasted a few seconds, but it was long enough. There was the thrill of being momentarily suspended over the turbulent water between the two ships, and the realization that more than 200 pairs of eyes were watching the expression on my face.

●

I dropped on to the deck of the Yukon, and just had time to feel for my wallet and say "hi" to couple of seamen before I was picked up again and returned to Qu'Appelle.

The jackstay transfer was perhaps the most delicate operation performed by the crews of the two destroyer-escorts that day.

A line of 20 sailors stood on the bow of the Qu'Appelle each holding handfuls of the 2-inch manilla hawser that ran from a pulley on their ship across to Yukon. The men were ready, on command, to make the big line taut or slacken it.

Whatever object, man, ammunition, potatoes, to be transferred on the jackstay, is hung from a travelling pulley on the big line and pulled by groups of sailors on either ship.

The operation calls for precise manoeuvring by navigation teams on both ships. They must sail at exactly the same speed with a constant distance between them for whatever time the transfer might take.

Even with a calm sea that isn't easy, as one officer explained. When a ship travels through water it creates areas of pressure and vacuum, much like an aircraft in flight.

●

Thus, when two ships sail side-by-side they tend to be driven away from each other or sucked toward each other, and the ships' navigation teams must be constantly on the alert to compensate for these alternating forces.

The jackstay transfer completed, Yukon veered away as both ships headed home. It was the most exciting event of the day, but there were other things to remember.

Earlier, with the help of sonar, radar and two Tracker aircraft, Qu'Appelle and Yukon homed in on an imaginary enemy submarine.

The payoff came after an hour of manoeuvring, when six computer-controlled mortars launched their 400-pound (unarmed) bombs which arched in a slow trajectory, trailing each other by a few feet, to plunge into the water less than 300 feet from the ship.

●

Then someone tossed a dummy overboard, and a demonstration of lifesaving tactics followed. As the alarm sounded a diver jumped off the side of the ship to swim in pursuit of the dummy; the ship executed a 360-degree turn in minutes to bring it back to its original course. A lifeboat was lowered to pick up the diver and dummy.

As the ships reached the navy's firing range, off Sheringham Point, east of Jordan River, they opened up with anti-aircraft guns on a target being towed by a tug four miles away.

●

On the way home a T-33 jet trainer made repeated low passes over Qu'Appelle in simulated air attack.

The action is all routine exercise for the 12 officers and 210 men in Qu'Appelle. Commissioned in 1963 at Lauzon, Que., she is a Mackenzie class destroyer, as is the Yukon.

Qu'Appelle has been under the command of Commander John Allan since Dec. 20, 1968. Yukon has been commanded by Commander P. G. May since Jan. 24, 1968.

Born to Lead —The Hard Way

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eventually it happens to anyone who is a member of an organization, whether the PTA, the garden club, the church guild, the business and professional women's club.

You're called on to serve as president.

The members start with flattery about your natural qualities as a leader, and how the organization really needs some new blood, new thinking at the top. You lap up the flattery and first thing you know, you've accepted the call. You're now Madame President.

Then, born to lead or no, you soon learn how—the hard way. I know. I'm in the throes of helmsmanship of the Newspaper Women's Club of New York. Now, we're primarily a "do good" group raising monies for assorted scholarships, working to upgrade the standards of our profession in communications.

We're also more than 200 members, that means more than 200 personalities, and more than 200 viewpoints on what to do and how to do it.

I suspect this holds true in any organization. But remember, you're Madame President and all the failures during the years will be yours directly. If you're lucky, you may get some of the credit for any successes.

One thing I learned right off—everyone knows how to run the organization and hesitates not at all to offer advice in person, by letter or telephone.

Another fact came early. No matter how carefully your committees are chosen, there is no way around some do-it-yourself administration. Every president must be a dictator, too, but try to be benevolent about it.

If you're about to take office, don't let me scare you off. Somebody has to do it. You'll find it swells the ego, your name looks nice on letterheads, and there is some reward inwardly in telling (er, asking) people what's expected of them.

Clear With Your Husband

But talk to anyone who's ever presided with a copy of Robert's rules on her lap and she will tell you the things bound to happen.

It'll be more work than you bargained for. I was conned with, "Well, most of the job is the monthly meeting of the board."

Hah!

So clear with your husband before accepting high office. For he will have a choice of either pitching in when he can or just saying "Good bye, Dear" for a few nights each week while he warms up leftovers for dinner.

You'll find your home telephone bill soars, the house takes on a neglected "Mamma's president this year" look, the occasional long lunches with the girls are out, and you'll be muttering "decisions, decisions" in your sleep.

Find time, somehow, to establish your goals, for the time you serve, and long range. Here, you're feeding the old ego, of course, for you don't want to leave office known as the did-nothing president.

Getting your goals accomplished calls for skilful handling of members to get their backing. Here, you have to be a miracle worker but a little private discussion here and there becomes a matter of course.

It's bound to happen when it comes to the treasury. Someone will hint that you overspent on an event even though a civic-minded citizen donated space and the caterer gave you cut-rate because he hoped to serve you again. Okay, so you say, "Next time we'll charge the members." Brace then for another onslaught.

But somebody up there must like presidents. They manage to survive. Or most do. I know one president who at the end of her term was admitted to the hospital treated for "complete nervous and physical exhaustion."

A recent bachelor of fine arts honors graduate from the University of British Columbia, Mrs. Kathleen R. Hargreaves has been awarded an Alice E. Wilson grant of $500 by the Canadian Federation of University Women. Two of her works were accepted for the recent Vancouver Island Jury Show, with one receiving honorable mention. Another painting has been donated to the permanent collection of the Art Gallery. (Simpson Studio)

MARK DIAMOND ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. James W. Clark will be honored guests on July 5 when their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Edwards, entertain at a reception at their home, 596 Oliver Street, to mark the diamond anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Clark. The couple will receive guests between 2:30 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and from 7 to 9 in the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Clark were married June 23, 1909, in the County of Durham, England. They came to Canada in 1912 and lived at Weyburn, Sask., until coming to Victoria in 1946. A small private dinner party will be held for the couple on Monday. Their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Clark, will come from their home in Toronto for the reception in July. They have another married son, William, in Ottawa, and three grandchildren. # Mao's Rules Useful Guide To Economical Weddings

By JOSEPH MA

HONG KONG (UPI) — Communist China is rewriting the etiquette book for weddings.

The new system saves bride, bridegroom and friends a lot of money but takes some of the thrill out of old customs.

Departing from the great issues of the day, Peking's official New China News Agency (Hsinhua) gave an account of the kind of matrimonial planning which has evolved from the Cultural Revolution.

Wang Chu-sheng, a Chinese farmer, was about to marry off his daughter, the agency reported.

Wang wondered about this daughter's dowry and consulted his little red book containing the thoughts of Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

"We must not take a short view and indulge in wastefulness and extravagance," Mao's book said.

So farmer Wang lectured his wife: "To make a show with a dowry and banquets for the wedding is an old feudal custom, a bourgeois way. We poor and lower-middle class peasants should not copy their style."

Therefore, no dowry for Miss Wang.

As the wedding day approached and excitement in the village increased, Wang wondered what he would do if relatives and friends arrived with gifts for the newlyweds.

He consulted Mao's thoughts again and found these words from the chairman: "We still have to wage a protracted struggle against bourgeois and petty-bourgeois ideology."

That set the father of the bride to thinking. He decided that wedding presents were bourgeois and would not be accepted.

The big day neared. The father of the bridegroom called on Wang to pay his respects.

"Your daughter and my son are getting married, and we will be relatives," the father of the bridegroom told Wang. "I'm very sorry I haven't brought you a gift nor pretty clothes for my new daughter-in-law."

"Never mind," Wang replied. "Both you and I have studied Chairman Mao's work. Let's free ourselves from old customs. Let's smash bourgeois practices."

They did.

But when Wang's daughter left home to join her new husband, the father relented somewhat and pressed five gifts on his daughter.

He gave her three books — "Selected Works of Mao Tse-tung," "Quotations from Chairman Mao" and "Chairman Mao's Three Constantly Read Articles" — and two Chairman Mao's badges.

The Communist Chinese news agency called it: "A new wedding custom."

Box 99 Where Are You?

Victoria consumers may soon experience a delay in getting their complaints to the federal government.

By July 15 the direct mailing address, Box 99, Ottawa, will go out of existence. In its place will be a go-between consumer consultant in Vancouver, one of five across the country. The consultant will listen to your complaints, feed them to an Ottawa computer which will in turn pass them on to the federal consumers bureau.

The local federal branch of the consumer and corporate affairs department was asked about the complaints shift. A spokesman could not comment and was unaware of the existence of Box 99.

Any inquiries will be referred to the regional office of the department in Vancouver, he said.

The box number was set up a year ago by consumer and corporate affairs minister Ron Basford. It has received 8,000 letters from complaining Canadians so far.

Victoria residents still interested in local action on their complaints can approach the Consumer's Association of Canada, local chapter. Complaints chairman is Mrs. Elizabeth Mills, 855 Vancouver Street, Suite 8.

Children Break Barriers Between Different Societies

CHRISTIAN ISLAND, Ont. (CP) — When studying Indians and whites, why just talk about it — why not mingle the two groups so the students can see for themselves?

That was the idea behind a program that brought three white girls to this Indian reserve that looks out over Georgian Bay.

All around them were Indian children and the three visitors from a Toronto suburb seemed nervous and ill at ease.

Suddenly one of the Indians, a little girl of about 10, got up from her desk and walked over to the whites with a big grin and stuck out her hand. The tensions lifted.

In another classroom in Markham, more than 100 miles south, three Indian children, two boys and a girl, were sitting at a desk writing letters home.

STRANGE WORLD

They, too, were in a strange world and the apprehension was on their faces as they bent over their writing paper. Then one of the white boys approached with the class mascot.

"Here, you hold Irving," he said, thrusting a tame pigeon toward a boy. "Let him sit on your head."

Giggles broke the tension.

"This is the reason we organized the student exchange between the two schools," said Gino Ferri, a Grade 6 teacher at St. Joseph's separate school in Markham, just north of Toronto.

WHY JUST TALK?

"We were studying about the Canadian Indian and I thought, why just talk about them, why not do something about it and let the children from both societies see for themselves how the others live?"

So Mr. Ferri got in touch with Chief Rodney Monaige of the Beausoleil band on Christian Island, an Ojibway reserve, four miles out in Georgian Bay and 35 miles northeast of Owen Sound.

The island is home to 500 Indians. It has two schools, one Roman Catholic and one Protestant. It is criss-crossed with abandoned farms. There are no grocery stores, no theatres, no restaurants and little traffic. There is plenty of space and woods.

The band's five-man council finally agreed to the exchange. It was decided to hold six, each lasting a week with a total of 60 students being involved.

PARENTS PLEASED

Next Mr. Ferri had to sell the idea to the parents of his own students. This proved easier than expected. On the island the Markham visitors were billeted with different Indian families.

Homesickness has proved the big problem for both groups, accentuated by the vast difference in the two societies.

On Christian Island the exchange students must learn to live without modern conveniences. Few of the homes have inside plumbing. The adjustment is usually more difficult for the boys than the girls.

For the boys Christian Island has been a ball. Within minutes of stepping ashore, John Fray, 12, Terry O'Neill, 11, and Stephen Shankland, 11, were roaming the bush and shoreline with Indian boys.

The played soccer during recess and dodge ball in the evening and Fray became a celebrity as he sat on the sagging steps of the King house playing Charlie King's guitar.

SHY AT FIRST

In Markham the Indian children, Jeanette King, 11, Conley Mixemong, 13, and Norman Marsden, 12, mixed in well at school.

For the first day they were shy and backed off from the other children, but they gradually warmed up and were soon playing football and marbles during recess.

Jeanette, who stayed with Mr. and Mrs. Philip Mihorean in Stouffville, 30 miles northeast of Toronto, was taken to her first Girl Guide meeting.

"She was simply thrilled," said Mrs. Mihorean. "And she's fitted in perfectly with our other four girls and two boys."

"I think so far the idea has been successful," said Mr. Ferri. "If we can create a mutual feeling of understanding and interest between these kids then I feel the program is worth continuing."

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Every piece a poem in crystal . . .

"Crystallized poetry" . . . that's the best way we know of describing the beautiful Lalique we saw on display at Montague Bridgman's this week . . . It's a new shipment just in from France . . . and Bridgman's are literally bursting with pride in their large selection of famous Lalique pieces! . . . They're lovely, lovely, lovely . . . from the massive, heavy-as-lead cockatoo . . . to the miniature birds, fishes and owls (which can be purchased for as little as $11.50!) . . . All pieces are heavily based . . . the clarity of the clear glass is wondrous to behold . . . while the satiny finish of the frosted crystal makes you want to caress it! . . . There's a gorgeous vase known as the Ispahan . . . A footed bowl of clear crystal supported with frosted crystal owls . . . A handsome eagle head paper weight . . . delightful little perfume bottles . . . the famous Elizabeth bowl . . . A couple of enchanting big cats, one sitting, the other crouching . . . A fascinating ornament consisting of two fishes entwined . . . A graceful Madonna done in a medieval mood . . . The popular Angel-champagne glasses, tall and slim and stemmed with angels whose wings soar up onto the bowl of the glass itself . . . If you're a connoisseur of beauty . . . don't miss seeing this choice Lalique crystal at . . . Montague Bridgman Ltd., 811 Government St., 383-0821.

Galanos has a chocolate brown chiffon jacket costume completely covered with tiny tucks and a flutter of pleats. Price tag over $1,000.

Feel daring? See this see-through dress . . .

We saw our first real see-through dress at Madam and Eve this week . . . It's a "one-only" Ondine original . . . size 10-12 . . . which M & E refer to as their "handkerchief dress" . . . because it looks as if it were made from two huge handkerchiefs or scarves . . . in French voile printed in shades of blue . . . Skirt dips down in points . . . it's completely backless but has a collar in front . . . and it comes with a matching bra . . . Why the bra and nothing else? we asked . . . well the bra gives it shape . . . . and as for the rest, why you're supposed to wear a body stocking underneath . . . Quite adorable and very daring . . . but then, Ondine's slogan is "for the woman who dares!" . . . Oh yes, we forgot to mention that this dress is hand-washable . . . and the price is just $65 . . . Something really new in Irish knits are the mini-skirts and matching sleeveless weskit style sweaters . . . They're hand-knit in Cloonfad, Ireland, by those talented villagers who are making all of Wilson's fisherman knits . . . Natural Aran yarn in traditional designs . . . but very new in styling . . . We saw one of these outfits teemed with a long-sleeved blue polyester crinkle crepe blouse . . . (M & E have the latter in various colors and styles) . . . and thought the total effect was terrific! . . . See these conversation-makers now at . . . Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

For summer . . . pleats come in all sizes, shifting the emphasis to the waist, and flaring low on the hips.

Beautiful card tables from England . . .

Perhaps you . . . like us . . . have always considered a card table a utilitarian object rather than a thing of beauty . . . and ask only that it doesn't wobble . . . Well, our eyes were opened . . . but wide! . . . when we saw several beautiful English card tables in The Gallery at Home Furniture . . . One in burl walnut and another, mahogany . . . beautifully grained wood with just a touch of carving on the walnut one . . . The bases are rectangular with fold-over tops which, when opened up, swivel around to form a square . . . covered with green baize . . . They're solid as the rock of Gibraltar . . . and we thought how perfect they'd be with four of those little hand-carved Victorian chairs The Gallery is famous for . . . Couldn't help but improve anyone's bridge game . . . and when not in use for playing . . . the table looks like a handsome console while the lovely little chairs, with their velvet or brocade covers, make as nice occasional chairs as you could ever hope to have in a room . . . Another new piece of English furniture that delighted us is a dear little Queen Anne desk which they call a "lady's bureau" . . . It's a genuine antique reproduction . . . burl walnut with dropleaf, leather-covered top, cabriole legs, and little drawers to stow things away in . . . Why not drop in to see these lovely pieces . . . Home Furniture Company, 825 Fort St., 382-5138.

Fashion-by-the-couple . . . the unisex trend . . . continues to grow in the U.S.

Watches for the active man . . . and woman . . .

Omega has just come out with a new line of watches called the "Grand Sport" series . . . and we saw a number of beauties for men at de Goutiere Jewellers when we breezed in for our monthly visit the other day . . . By the time you read this, the ladies' watches in the same series will doubtless be on hand too . . . These watches, in either hand winding or self winding versions, have luminous dials, are waterproof, shock proof, anti-magnetic, and unbreakable . . . Can be worn for scuba or skin diving . . . great for golfers . . . sports car drivers . . . anyone who leads an active life (though just as great for sedentary types since they're very, very handsome indeed!) . . . We saw a gold-filled self-winding watch with racing style flexible metal bracelet priced at $130 . . . Another similar watch with corfan strap at $120 . . . and a manual winding model for just $99.50 . . . These prices are extremely reasonable for such fine, precision watches, Mr. de Goutiere assured us . . . and we don't need to point out to you what an honored name Omega is when it comes to fine Swiss watches! . . . When you're looking at these, ask to see the beautiful custom-made turquoise and diamond pendant hanging from a double gold chain . . . it's an estate piece, priced at $500, and is most unusual! . . . de Goutiere, Jeweller, Ltd., 2524 Estevan Ave., 592-3224.

Favored summer fabrics: Irish or moygashel linen, the look of linen, rayon, gabardine, cotton, seersuckers, denim, chambray, voile.

The winter cruise of a lifetime . . .

This really has got to be the cruise to end all cruises . . . the Norweigian America Line's 1970 winter cruise to the South Pacific and the Orient! . . . Sitting here reading the brochure which Paulin's gave us the other day . . . we're entranced with the scope and itinerary of this 30,801-mile, 92-day cruise aboard the 24,000-ton luxury liner Sagafjord . . . which sails from New York next Jan. 7 and returns on April 9 . . . after calling at 24 ports which include a number of rarely visited places like Easter Island and Pitcairn Island . . . far off the beaten path of other South Sea cruises . . . You go to Port Everglades, Cristobal, Balboa, Callao, Easter and Pitcairn Islands. Papeete, Moorea, Bora Bora, Auckland, Wellington, Sydney, Brisbane, Port Moresby, Thursday Island, Dili, Bali, Singapore, Hong Kong, Yokohama, Honolulu, Los Angeles, Guadalupe, Acapulco and Nassau . . . Now isn't that a terrific itinerary? . . . You'll have ample time to explore . . . in fact the whole cruise should be a series of Adventures in Paradise! . . . As for the ship that will be your floating hotel . . . she's a beauty . . . with absolutely everything to provide the Good Life at sea . . . We're told a cruise of this sort needs to be booked a good 12 months ahead . . . but there is still some space available if you act fast and talk to Paulin's now . . . George Paulin Travel Service, 1006 Government St., 382-9168.

New colorings in Europe . . . the darker hues. Lots of bright to deeper reds; all tones of brown; deep greens. Lots of color combinations, often in tri-tones.

The perfect handbag for a summer traveller . . .

Some handsome new handbags arrived at Wilson's this past week . . . and there's one in particular we think you should see if you're planning on travelling abroad because it's got simply everything you could wish for . . . size, roominess, and safe fastening . . . as well as the right color to accessorize all your summer clothes . . . It's made of washable off-white Luxon hide . . . by Fassbenden of London . . . is completely leather lined, with plenty of compartments, and has strong double handles . . . There is just one of these bags . . . and while its price tag of $80 may sound like a lot, we think it's well worth the price because it will keep its good looks for years to come . . . A few new Bonnie Cashin-designed bags from the U.S. are very smart too . . . We saw a big green pouch with zipped top . . . another green bag in sturdy stamped leather with a wide buckle strap around it . . . and a third in Brish tan . . . Any of these would also be good travellers . . . If you're not above enjoying a bargain when you find one . . . cast an eye on the special sale rack at Wilson's . . . This week we noticed that it contains several slack suits . . . dresses . . . knit suits . . . a few plaid jumpers . . . and there'll doubtless be other plums by the time you read this and get downtown . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Shirts come in all lengths . . . from short, midriff-baring toppers to full-length dresses . . . for sleep wear as well as for day and evening wear.

City sandals are part of summer . . .

Have you ever noticed that when your feet are cool you feel cooler all over? . . . Guess that's why sandals are so much a part of summer living . . . but by the same token, when you're dressed up and walking in the city, you want dressier sandals than those designed for casual wear . . . Munday's have a very nice selection of these city sandals, with higher heels and a more sophisticated air . . . There's a Bandolino called Vela . . . in either bone or black patent . . . perfect for street wear . . . Another by the same Italian maker is named Signorina . . . Two pairs of criss-cross straps held together with little gold rings . . . These came in green, pink, lemon yellow as well as white, and are priced at $19.95 . . . By Amalfi, there's a very pretty bone calf sandal with triangular strap arrangement . . . same higher heel, but a little slimmer . . . $24.95 . . . and a very striking sandal whose wide front strap has a metal ornament with an Inca look . . . It's called Trimagi, and comes in cafe brown or avocado calf, priced at just $18.95 . . . If you don't like showing your toes, there's one closed toe sandal in the group . . . and Amalfi named Propo . . . a very handsome and very comfortable sandal with punchwork trim, rolled extension sole, and city-height heel . . . A go-with-everything shade called Sahara, and with a price tag of $21.95 at . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

Scarf-Shawl Flutter Hits New York

By MARGARET NESS

NEW YORK (CP) — What can be as long as nine feet and have the latest fashion status?

It's your scarf-stole-muffler, or you name it.

This is most evident at the fall showings this week by the New York Couture Business Council, attended by more than 200 fashion writers.

Last spring, scarves made accessory news but they were the normal, smallish squares, usually prints, and were used as a neckline fill-in, a kerchief anchored to your costume by a pin or even tied on a bare arm as a fun accent. A few were long enough to serve as a sash-belt.

This season, however, scarves have become the important accessory. Elongated, they circle the neck and drape down the back, practically to the ground. They are loosely knitted to be worn with a knit pants suit, gaily printed in silk and fluttering over the shoulder of a smart suit or even heavy satin with a ball gown. Some of these new scarves are flowing lengths in the Isadora Duncan tradition. Others are wide, long and deeply fringed.

The new scarves are for every age group, as well as being in every fabric. The firm of Originala uses scarves extensively to complement coats. One black wool coat practically ground-trailed a long, jersey scarf in horizontal bands of hot pink, green and black. An over-sized scarf was even added to a maxi-length black Melton coat. Junior Sophisticates wedded a grey flannel coatdress with a white crepe scarf, folded once to lie flat down the front. And Abe Schrader showed a three-piece costume of a jumper and matching scarf in a brown-and-white overcheck wool and a white silk shirt.

Scarves are the word for fall with the emphasis on wearing them any way except the conventional. The longer, the broader, the better is the slogan for the wrap-around makers. Here, the scarf is used as a turban with one long, fringed end draped over a shoulder. The autumn outfit with it is a cape and pants set in glen plaid of rayon and acetate.

These are for the fashionable sophisticates. For the back-to-school set, Sears likes long, lank, skinny knit scarves and tight, eyebrow-worn knit hats, to accompany everything from vested skirt and turtle sweater to tunic with pants.

The scarf-muffler also has invaded fur fashions. In the Emba mink collection, a natural white mink coat was contrasted by a long dark ranch mink scarf. A black mink coat added a matching scarf lined and fringed in red leather. Other mink stoles included one fringed with matching tails and another in an all-over diamond pattern of light and dark skins.

Probably the next most important accent is the belt. A shaped wool dress can take on a tailored look with the addition of a wide leather belt in matching or contrasting color. The same dress can go out elegantly after five with a handsome jewelled belt.

Belts range in size from narrow to extremely wide, with some crushed leathers, too. And belts this season are often closely allied to costume jewelry. Chains and pearl ropes can be entwined with a fabric belt to give a new look to a dress or even a late-day suit.

In costume jewelry itself, the fall news is in the return of pearls, if pearls can ever be said to have dropped out of fashion. Mostly the pearls are ropes, in single or double strands. Monet is also showing gold-colored chains in all lengths, even to a layered look of multi strands within longer strands, in keeping with the new layered look in clothes.

Interesting, for a different way to wear chains, is the body arrangement. Slip slim chains from neck under your arms and fasten them on your bosom with a pin. This has a harness look. Joseph Love even included this harness effect with some of his children's clothes. So age is not important.

Mathilda Misplaces Valuable Book Mark

By PENNY SAVER

There were books on the tables and books on the floor. Books almost everywhere but on the shelves where they belonged. And Mathilda was sitting in the middle, systematically ruffling the pages of each, taking each gently by the spine and shaking until bits of paper came fluttering out, adding to the pile of paper between her knees.

"What are you doing?"

"Looking for the $20 bill I used as a bookmark last month."

"Why did you use a $20 bill for a bookmark?"

"Because it was handy. Now I can't remember which book I was reading at the time. I start so many and finish so few."

I picked up the book nearest me, one she had already checked, and began leafing through it. "Can't you remember anything about the book? The heroine's name? Or what was happening to her?"

"Not a thing." Mathilda sighed as she moved on to another pile. "What you really need is a proper bookmark, or a dozen of them," I said. "Here, by the way, is your $20." Mathilda leaped up and kissed me on both cheeks.

With the change from her $20 bill Mathilda bought herself three attractive and almost indestructible bookmarks. Each is made from a piece of ribbon inset in plastic. The plastic extends for a quarter of an inch beyond the ribbon on all sides and a hole has been punched in the top for a silken cord matching the colors in the ribbon. This cord makes the book mark easy to find.

Woven into the ribbons that make up these bookmarks are pictures and sayings. There is a whole line of astrological book marks in blue and gold, each with a nauseating little verse on it appropriate to the sign it represents. There is a whole line of prayers: The Lord's prayer, the 23rd Psalm, Bless this house and so forth; a thank-you note bookmark that would be a great replacement for a card, flower power bookmarks and many more. These bookmarks are 49 cents each or three for $1.25.

Dressed for Tea

One of Gladys' friends has discovered a new use for fancy dish towels. While she and her family were up at camp, miles from any stores, her little girl tore the only dress she had brought. Grandmother (by all accounts a formidable woman), was due to arrive next day and since Grandmother likes to see her granddaughters neatly and properly dressed, mother was stuck. So she grabbed one of her new psychedelic tea towels and whipped up a tiny linen dress. I saw it and it looks absolutely smashing.

I told this tale to a woman who sells tea towels and she wasn't a bit surprised. "I've had girls come in and buy two matching towels to make shifts," she said in her most blase tone.

She just received a new order of fancy towels and many are lovely enough to put on the wall. In a $2 line there was one in yellow and blue of a joker riding a bicycle and another of a beautiful hot air balloon going up, up and away. For $1.89 there were towels with floral and abstract patterns in every color imaginable.

She also had matching sets of tea towels and hot plates in abstract and paisley-ish patterns. The towels are very large and are $2.25 each while there are two sizes of hot plates at $1.50 and $1.25. These are made of enamelled metal and have cork insulated backs. "I really like them," said the saleswoman. "After all, drying dishes is dull enough without a dull dish towel as well."

Please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. if you would like to know where I shopped for these items.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Threats Too Strong

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My 15-year-old daughter (I'll call her Linda) is my problem. She is so boy-crazy she worries me half to death. All she thinks about is boys, boys, boys.

When the doorbell rings she nearly breaks a leg running to talk to any delivery boy who happens to show up.

Linda also lies a lot. She is not allowed to go in cars with boys, so she walks to a girl friend's house and the boys pick her up there. (I learned this when I happened to glance at her diary.) When I ask Linda for the truth she tells lies to cover up for her lies. Why does she lie so much and how can I get the truth out of her? — Linda's Mother.

DEAR MOTHER: Children lie because they haven't the courage to tell the truth. Give Linda that courage by assuring her that no matter what she's done you will understand and forgive her. Perhaps your threats are too frightening and your punishments too severe. Give her plenty of love and expect the best, and she won't let you down. And quit glancing at her diary. The way to inspire confidence is to show it.

DEAR ABBY: How long does a person have to live in a place before it's home?

My husband has been married to me for 16 years, and whenever he goes to see his parents he says, "I'm going home."

Maybe I'm out of line to get so upset over this, Abby, but it just burns me up to hear him say that. Don't you think home is where a man's wife and children are? Or do you think maybe my husband actually still feels more at home with his mother and father than he does with me? — Alma.

DEAR ALMA: Where one has spent his earlier years is home — no matter how long he's been away from it. Many old-timers who have been on this side of the ocean most of their lives still refer to their native lands as home, so don't take it personally.

DEAR ABBY: I just finished reading the letter from A LADY LAWYER, who said that a divorce isn't a gift, it's pretty expensive. How right she is!

I hope my husband's ex-wife reads that. She's still telling the world how generous she was to give Frank a divorce. Actually, she must have sat up nights thinking of ways to bleed him of money because we're still paying for that so-called gift.

But the money doesn't bother us so much. We have each other to cuddle at night. And what does she have? A divorce decree.—Still Paying.

34,540 PERSONS HELD

SAIGON (CP)—A government minister told parliament Friday that 34,540 political prisoners are currently being held in South Vietnam and admitted that many of them had not been tried in court.

Vo Huu Thu, minister for liaison with parliament, was answering questions during a stormy session of the lower house when members discussed Saigon's latest drive to arrest or kill all Viet Cong cadres in villages and hamlets.

Deputy Ngo Cong Duc accused police and military authorities of making illegal arrests, intimidating people held for questioning and accepting bribes from prisoners.

Oak Bay Assessment Puzzle Argument for Regional Move

By JIME HUME

Now that the bastions of Oak Bay have crumbled enough to permit the press in the name of the general public to attend committee meetings, can the fall of Esquimalt be far behind?

Mayor Fed Hawes, who should have known better than to toss heavy-handed quips (threats?) at a working reporter, was finally and wisely overruled by his council members earlier this week.

Hume

He wanted committee meetings closed, the majority of his council wanted them open. Fortunately, for the press and public, two die-hard council members were absent when the vote was taken. Had Ald. Walter Dodsworth and Ald. Doug Watts been present the Oak Bay veil of secrecy may well have remained intact.

With that veil now in tatters, let's hope it remains that way.

Esquimalt could present a tougher chore.

Mayor Ray Bryant has spent years training his council to follow his lead. Most of them do with little regard for public opinion. They are satisfied that all the people of Esquimalt deserve to know can be told at the sometimes interminable council meetings.

Just what Oak Bay and Esquimalt fear is hard to understand. But nervous they are that the good people who pay the taxes in both municipalities might actually find out just what is going on.

In Victoria and Saanich there is a refreshing and different attitude — although once in a while even these prefer closed to open doors.

By and large, though, both Mayor Hugh Stephen and Mayor Hugh Curtis have learned that it is easier to deal with a well-informed public than a public bemused and confused by lack of information.

The most surprising situation in Oak Bay is that Mayor Hawes, even at this late date, would still want to keep discussions on assessments in the dark.

Surely he is not unaware of the bewildered head shaking from the provincial government down through the municipal government ranks to the lowest of taxpayers following the gymnastic antics of Oak Bay's 1969 assessments?

It may be a vain hope, but there are still a few people around who are patiently waiting for Mayor Hawes or one of his aldermen to explain, or justify, the lowering of assessments on such select places as Newport Drive and Beach Drive while other parts of the municipality suffered wild upward spirals.

Did land values really drop on Beach Drive? Aw, come on Mayor Hawes.

Did land values on Newport drop? Let's not be silly.

But in both areas certain land owners were pleasantly surprised when they opened their assessment notices to find that they were much lower than last year.

Other land owners, not too far from those mentioned, got a shock of another kind. Their assessments had jumped as much as 30 per cent (one piece of property was actually assessed 100 per cent higher than 1968) and they rightly wondered why.

In assessment circles they say the juggling act could only have been brought about by one set of circumstances: the people who got the reduction must have been over-assessed for at least a year. And the people who were on the receiving end of big increases must have been underassessed for years.

That may well be true. But if it is, why not say so? Or would the truth be embarrassing?

At this stage only one fact emerges: Oak Bay's 1969 assessments followed a crazy pattern which to date remains completely unexplained. When questions are asked municipal officials, elected and paid, turn the conversation around to Premier W. A. C. Bennett's assessment increase ceiling and stress how far behind assessments have fallen. (They should be around the 50 per cent of market value.

But, Mayor Hawes, that isn't the question we want answering. We know how far out of line Bennett's silly assessment ceiling has thrown all numicipalities throughout the province.

What we want to know from Oak Bay is why some properties—specifically on Beach Drive and Newport—dropped in value while other increased.

It couldn't be possible, could it, that neither Mayor Hawes or his council know the answer?

If they do the Times would be delighted to publish a clear-cut explanation of the assessment juggle of the decade.

One last thought on asssessments: there will never be true equalization until all municipalities are assessed on the same basis.

As it stands today Victoria city heads the list of municipalities being closest to the 50 per cent of market value line. Oak Bay and Esquimalt are just about tied for second spot and Saanich is the lowest.

And what difference does that make to the taxpayer?

Let's stay with a specific example and suggest that the district has just approved a $10 million school construction bylaw. Municipal shares of the total cost are based on the assessment roll. The higher the assessment, the more that municipality pays towards total cost.

To put it succinctly: the municipality with an efficient assessing staff striving its best to obey provincial rules, actually imposes a penalty on its taxpayers. The municipality with the sloppy assessment staff can win its citizens a bonus at the expense of its next-door neighbor.

The answer to that inequality was found in the Ottawa-Carleton area when, as a first act, a newly formed regional district brought all assessment departments under regional jurisdiction.

A similar move could end the disparities throughout the Capital Region—and clean up the mess in Oak Bay.

9 IN MEMORIAM

DIXON—In loving memory of my dear husband (Isaiah), who passed away June 24, 1968.

There is no parting from those we love,
No distance can divide.
For each day in memory's garden
We still walk side by side;
Wherever life may take us,
Whatever we may do,
The memory of the years we shared
Will keep us close to you.
—Ever remembered by his loving wife, Margaret, and family.

GILBERT—In loving memory of my darling father, Harry, and dear grandfather to my boys, Gilbert and Paul, who passed away June 21, 1967.

We do not need a special day
To bring you to our minds,
The days we do not think of you
Are very hard to find
They say time heals all sorrow,
And will help us to forget,
But time so far has only shown
How much we miss you yet.
God gave us strength to bear it,
And courage to face the blow,
But what it meant to lose you
No one will ever know.
It was God's will to take you,
He knew you needed rest,
His garden must be beautiful,
He only takes the best.
When I am sad and lonely
And everything goes wrong,
I seem to hear you whisper,
Cheer up and carry on.
Each time I see your photo
You seem to smile and say,
Don't cry, I'm only sleeping,
We'll meet again some day.
—Ever remembered by your daughter, Marie; son-in-law, Ted, and grandsons, Gilbert and Paul.

TURNER—In loving memory of my dear husband, Edmund Turner, who passed away on June 21, 1968.

Dear in my heart there's a picture
Of a loved one gone to rest;
In memory's frame I will keep it
Because he was one of the best.
May heaven's winds blow softly
o'er the sweet and hallowed spot
Where the one I love lies sleeping
Who will never be forgot.
—Always remembered by his ever-loving wife, Sally.

No Room For Failures, Premier Says

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bennett says British Columbia wants all kinds of primary and secondary industry but "prosperous companies only need apply."

The premier told a group of businessmen and civic officials attending opening ceremonies for an addition to the Dominion Glass plant in suburban Burnaby that B.C. is only going to be prosperous if everybody is prosperous.

"I hope you make a lot of money, because B.C. only wants prosperous companies," he told the businessmen.

At a reception the premier said his government will never subsidize an industry.

It wouldn't be fair to tax successful firms to get enough money to help out the failures, he said.

Altitude Sickness Kills Climber

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A climber died Thursday high on Mt. McKinley after he apparently contracted altitude sickness and was unable to descend to a safe level.

He was identified as Gary Cole, 32, of Cody, Wyo.

The superintendent of Mt. McKinley National Park, George Hall, said the man died at the 17,300-foot level, near Denali Pass, of pulmonary edema. Hall said the pneumonia-like affliction can be cured only be returning to a lower level.

Hall said McKinley, the continent's highest peak at 29,300 feet, had been buffeted by high winds for several days, and the climbers may have been pinned down and unable to descend.

At least two other climbers have been stricken with altitude sickness on McKinley this season, but both victims were able to descend to safe levels and recover.

Outdoor Service To Resume Here

For the 27th year in succession, open air gospel service will be held in Beacon Hill Park starting Sunday June 29 at 7 p.m.

The inter-denominational services are sponsored by the Victoria Committee, Christian Businessmen's Committee International.

Each service will be conducted by a different church or group as follows:

July 29, Glad Tidings Tabernacle; July 6, Salvation Army; July 13, First and Esquimalt Churches of the Nazarene; July 20, Victoria Brethren Assemblies; July 27, Alliance Church; Aug. 3, Shantymen's Christian Association; Aug. 10, Central Baptist Church; Aug. 17, Free Methodist Church and Evangelical Free Church; Aug. 24, Victoria Camp, The Gideons; Aug. 31, Emmanuel Baptist Church.

Murder Attempt Count Remanded

VANCOUVER (CP) — Denise Eckert, 22, of North Vancouver was remanded Friday for psychiatric examination on a charge of attempted murder of her four-month-old daughter. A second charge of attempted suicide was dropped. RCMP alleged the woman held her baby and jumped into Burrard Inlet from a pier on June 9. The baby was not hurt.

Old York Is No More

VANCOUVER (CP)—The last wall of the old York Hotel came tumbling down Friday—the last part to be flattened to make way for the first $45,000,000 phase of the $95,000,000 Pacific Centre business and shopping complex.

Ferrari May Join Fiat Family

ROME (The Manchester Guardian) — Fiat, the Italian industrial goliath, is expected to announce shortly that the David of motor cars, Ferrari, has become part of the Fiat family.

Fiat's president, Gianni Agnelli, met Wednesday in Turin with Enzo Ferrari, owner of the small family firm which has turned out some of the world's greatest racing cars.

Ferrari, who employs about 500 people at his plant near Modena, where his cars are hand-tailored to suit the rich and the racey, has long been interested in selling out to someone who would continue the line. Since the death of his only son some years ago, this desire has become stronger. He turned down an offer from Henry Ford.

With Fiat, Ferrari would probably have the title of president of the sports car department, and would continue to direct all Ferrari racing operations. Fiat would take over the production of the standard Ferrari models and would derive technical benefits from the performances of the Ferrari stable of racers.

Boundary Bay Made Public Area

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 30 miles of foreshore along Boundary Bay from the United States border to Beach Grove was allocated Friday for recreation use as public beaches, parks and wildlife reserve. The decision ends a long battle between conservationists and British Columbia Hydro in the Roberts Bank deepsea port development.

Poison Gas Transfer Queried by Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — A public outcry in the United States over the movement of poisonous gases prompted Prime Minister Trudeau to demand how such war materials are transported in Canada.

The precise answer given the prime minister by the defence department has not been disclosed.

However, department sources say that when toxic gases are shipped from one point to another in Canada, service rather than civilian transport is used.

NO FLIGHTS

The defence research board operates two chemical-biological laboratories, one at Shirley Bay near Ottawa and the other at Suffield, Alta.

Meanwhile, it has been denied officially here that the U.S. flies materials across Canadian territory for use at biological warfare test centres in Alaska and Greenland.

David Lewis, deputy NDP leader, asked a series of questions on this subject Wednesday in the Commons. Lewis used the term "germs and other materials."

CONSULTATION

He was told by Treasury Board President C. M. Drury, acting as external affairs minister in the absence of Mitchell Sharp, that Canada-U.S. arrangements call for prior consultation before any such flights are made.

And, Drury added, "no permission for such flights has been sought."

Hope for Miners Lessens Steadily

By JOE WILL

NATAL (CP) — Rescuers toiled through their second night Friday in attempts to free three men trapped by a cave-in since Thursday in the Balmer South coal mine where three men were killed and four escaped injury.

The rescue operations were proceeding at three different places along the mass of rubble that imprisoned the men 1,700 feet from the mine entrance in this morning town in the Crowsnest Pass area, 85 miles west of Lethbridge, Alta.

Hope for finding them alive diminished as tons of mud and other debris were pushed aside by digging machines and crews of men.

"The longer it takes the less faith you have," a company spokesman said Friday night.

Missing are Donald Evans of Natal, married with 10 children; John Krall of Natal, a bachelor; and Frank Kutcher of Frank, Alta., married with two children.

Jerry Heath of Fernie, B.C., Robert Dancoisne of Coleman, Alta., and Steve Tkachuk of Bellevue, Alta., died in the accident.

M. F. Clemmer, manager of personnel and public relations for Kaiser Resources Ltd., said the trapped men were part of a crew working on the last pillar in the area of the mine.

One of the survivors said Thursday night 10 men were blasting the roof of a small dome when everything came down—rocks, mud and tons of water.

Kaiser plans to start feasibility studies in the near future of switching to hydraulic extraction of the coal in the Balmer South mine.

Meanwhile, two rescuers were injured late Friday when they were caught between a machine and a tunnel wall.

Roger Patiaud of Natal suffered contusions, bruises and chest injuries. The other man, whose identity was not disclosed, received a broken arm. Neither were believed to be in serious condition in Michel-Natal District Hospital.

Wall of Force Keeps Rocky, Students Apart

By JOHN M. GOSHKO

SAO PAULO, Brazil (WP) — The presidents, the cabinet ministers and the businessment get most of his attention. But it is the university students who in many ways have become the touchstone force on Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's fact-finding mission to Latin America.

It was the students in such countries as Colombia and Ecuador who staged the violent demonstration that made the Rockefeller mission the subject of heated controversy. And, it was the fear of similar student reaction that caused the humiliating "postponement" of the New York governor's scheduled visits to Venezuela and Chile.

Through it all, Rockefeller has insisted that he understands the students' anger, that he sympathizes with their desire to "have a say," and that he wants very much to talk with them wherever he goes.

Separated

But, here in Brazil—the largest country of Latin America—this wish has been observed far more in the breach than the observance. The simple fact is that the military-backed regime of President Arthur da Costa E Silva does not want Rockefeller talking to students and has gone to extraordinary lengths to keep them separated.

In part, this is because the government fears a repetition of the riots that greeted Rockefeller elsewhere. Even more, it is because the regime regards the majority sentiment in student ranks as dangerously leftist, subversive and contradictory of its own ideas about Brazil's future political, economic and social course.

As a result, the crackdown on campus political activity that began earlier this year has been accelerated in recent days. Some campuses have been temporarily closed, hundreds of student leaders have been placed under temporary detention, and a general climate of fear has been created that makes most students understandably reluctant to take up Rockefeller's offer to come forward and talk.

Brief Meeting

In Rio de Janeiro Tuesday, the governor did have a brief, almost clandestine meeting with a group of seven students. But, in general, Rockefeller and his advisors have had almost no opportunity to hear why Brazil's students are so unhappy about the United States and its policy toward Latin America.

What they are missing was made evident Wednesday night by a meeting here between 11 students and three of the U.S. correspondents covering the Rockefeller trip.

The students had tried secretly to make contact with some of Rockefeller's advisors but were unsuccessful. However, they did manage to get their message to myself and two other American newsmen.

For four hours, we sat in the comfortable suburban home of one of the group, sipping coffee and listening to them talk. At first, they seemed decidedly inhibited, pointing out again and again the reprisals that could be taken against them if the police became aware of the meeting.

All Active

But, after being assured that we would not identify them in print, they gradually sketched a fascinating portrait of what the Latin American student is thinking.

There were eight young men and three girls, all in their early twenties. Their respective studies included everything from mechanical engineering to law and journalism, and they came from a variety of public and private universities in the Sao Paulo area.

Most are prominent in the student government activities of their schools or have held posts in some of the national student organizations now proscribed by the regime.

Nationalistic

All described themselves as "nationalistic" and "left of centre" in their political beliefs. But, they all denied vehemently that they are Communists or even anti-American in their attitudes.

And, in contrast to the government's contention that the students represent a monolithic and well-disciplined leftist force, they had a variety of different and frequently contradictory views on almost every subject discussed.

Where the essentials were concerned, however, they seemed in complete agreement. In their eyes, the Rockefeller mission is a "sham" and a "fraud" because it concentrates on talking to a power structure that they regard as dictatorial and unrepresentative of the mass of public opinion in Brazil.

Through Force

"Rockefeller says he has come to find out what Latin American is thinking," said one named Jose. "But he spends all his time talking to Costa E Silva and his ministers and generals who hold power through force.

"If he really wanted to know what we students think, he could have insisted that the government allow us to talk with him."

That they are bitter against their own government, which has held power since a 1964 military coup, was unmistakable. The regime, they said, assigns very little priority to education despite its protestations to the contrary and is interested mainly in imposing a sort of thought control that tramples academic freedom and makes life unbearable for students and professors who do not agree with its concept of what Brazil should be.

As to the United States, they charged that it holds too commanding a position in the economy of Latin America, both through its investments in the area and through its ability to dictate the prices paid for Latin raw materials.

Moreover, many charged, Washington seems to favor reactionary and dictatorial regimes as a means of maintaining this dominance.

Two of the students, who have spent time in the United States, contended that "Americans place too much emphasis on the danger of Communism in Latin America.

"They identify our legitimate nationalist aspirations with Communism, and they give their aid and support to those governments who suppress these aspirations in the name of fighting Communism."

Militarism

Others blamed this U.S. preoccupation with Communism for helping to propogate militarism and large military establishment in the region. When told that Costa E. Silva had contended to Rockefeller that Brazil has not spent a penny on armaments in five years, the students reacted with loud guffaws of disbelief.

Many made statements about the policies and practices of the U.S. government and private business that were clearly inaccurate. Others advanced arguments whose logic was overly emotional, fallacious and even self-contradictory.

Nevertheless, what came through clearly was a common note of sincerity and an idealistic desire to play a role in the future development of their country. As a student named Bernardo summed it up:

'. . . Someday'

"All of us here come from middle class or even upper class backgrounds. We recognize that our ideas are not necessarily in agreement with the aspirations of the Brazilian masses, who are poor.

"But we think we are at least more representative of opinions and attitudes here than the government which seems to have the ear of Gov. Rockefeller.

"Someday we will have our chance, and we will play an important role in the future of Brazil. If the United States wants to know how to deal with Brazil 10 or 20 years from now, it should be talking to us as well as to the others."

Listening to him, it was hard to disagree. Much of what Bernardo and his friends said seemed to an American listener to be wrong-headed, stubborn and out of touch with the realities of the world.

But there was no question that it represented the opinions of a group that will become increasingly important in Latin America in the years ahead.

And, they are opinions to which Gov. Rockefeller has had all too little exposure during his four days in Brazil.

Before the Magistrate

Jay D. Small, 19, of 1112 McKenzie, Friday was fined $500 and sentenced to one day for possession of marijuana.

The youth's character made the case special, Magistrate William Ostler said in central court.

"He seems in all other respects to be a good citizen and a young man of promise—it seems to me to be an exceptional case," he told the court.

Small, who was convicted at an earlier hearing, was obviously not an apologist for the drug cult as so many young people charged with possession of a narcotic are, Ostler said.

"This young man took the opposite view."

Small's good work record was taken into account, and he was ordered to pay the fine himself.

---

Harold M. Stevens, 27, 651 Constance, was fined $100 after being convicted of obstructing a police officer.

When two Esquimalt police constables entered the open doorway to his suite June 6 in answer to a complaint, they saw a woman lying face down on the floor and apparently unconscious, court was told.

They entered to assess the woman's condition and help her, and after ignoring Const. James Askew's questions, Stevens grabbed bim by the shirt and pushed him against the doorjamb.

Both Stevens and a friend with whom he was arguing when police arrived had apparently been drinking, Askew said.

---

Randy R. Profitt, 20, of 1814 Lillian Street, was sentenced to one day and ordered to post a $250 good behavior bond for possession of stolen property under $50.

He purchased a steroe tape recorder from another youth for $40 May 30, and discovering it was stolen, tried to resell it.

---

Lawrence J. Knight, 2524 Asquith, was fined $400 for impaired driving, and $25 for driving without a licence. He was also prohibited from driving for six months on any roads in Canada.

In traffic court, Roy Hills, 2303 Foul Bay, was fined $100 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Quebec Delegates Voting Amid Fear

Party Direction Decision Near

(Times News Services)

QUEBEC — The future direction of Quebec will be decided this evening when balloting to elect a leader for the ruling Union Nationale Party climaxes a convention which has been emotionally explosive and at times accompanied by violence and terrorist bombings.

Friday evening the campaigning reached fever pitch, with all three candidates delivering keynote speeches before chanting, cheering delegates in Quebec City's Coliseum.

An atmosphere of tension approaching fear permeated the sessions and everyone admitted to the convention floor was checked by security guards as a result of bombings and bomb threats which have dogged the meeting.

Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand said he is ready to propose a presidential system of government for Quebec in a referendum.

Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal called for strong, efficient and authoritative government for the province.

Andre Leveille, a member of the national assembly from Montreal-Maisonneuve, said confidence had to be restored in Quebec to end the impression in the rest of Canada that the province "is about to explode before them" at any time.

All three were delivering their

Thirty minutes after it was all over police received a telephone bomb threat and evacuated hundreds of straggling delegates, television and radio personnel and newspaper reporters from the 10,000-seat Quebec Coliseum.

There was no bomb and the arena was reopened by 11:33 p.m.

Premier Bertrand pledged to the delegates that if retained as party and government leader a presidential system of government in the province would be established "if the people want it."

KEY TO FUTURE

He has already said that referendum legislation will be brought before the national assembly this fall. In his convention address he did not detail how the presidential system would function in the Canadian context, but he made it a key point in his vision of "the new Quebec."

Mr. Bertrand's proposal was echoed immediately after by his education minister, last of the three candidates to speak and main challenger to Mr. Bertrand to become the successor to the late premier Daniel Johnson.

Mr. Bertrand, who celebrated his 53rd birthday Friday with the help of his placard-waving supporters, has been interim party leader since Mr. Johnson's death last September.

Mr. Cardinal, 44-year-old former law dean at the University of Montreal, drew a noisy burst of applause when he also told the delegates:

"We need to modernise Quebec's parliament."

He criticized the present sys-

FIGHTS FOLLOW TAUNTS

QUEBEC (CP — Pro-separatist Robert Charlebois, Quebec's temperamental No. 1 pop singer, stalked off the stage at Union Nationale party gathering early today crying, "Vive les Anglais!"

Fist fights broke out after he walked out on several hundred young supporters of Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal.

Charlebois, whose temper tantrums are legendary, began his electronic rock show by taunting the Cardinal campaigners gathered at Laval University:

"I haven't come here to sing for Jean-Guy Cardinal," he said. "Not at all; I may sing a bit for Rene Levesque."

Rene Levesque's Parti Qubecois advocates Quebec independence.

Charlebois provoked the French-speaking audience by speaking English before and between the two popular songs he sang.

RA SHOWS EGYPTIANS WENT FAR FROM NILE

HEYERDAHL
. . . in good condition

CAIRO (AP) — Thor Heyerdahl, commander of the papyrus boat Ra, messaged the Egyptian minister of tourism, Mohamed Hafez Ghanem, today, telling him "Our voyage proved that ancient Egyptians travelled far from the Nile."

He told Ghanem: "Our boat crossed 2,000 kilometres (1,250 miles) in wild seas and this proves the ancient Egyptian boats could have sailed quite far from the Nile."

Heyerdahl told the minister his six-man crew is "in good condition." They left Safi, Morocco, May 26.

The Times carries reports direct from the Ra from time to time during the voyage.

BENNETT USES PGE AS LURE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Premier Bennett said Friday the provincially-owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway will not be extended into the Yukon unless the Yukon answers his call to join British Columbia.

His comment came after a federal transport department spokesman said in Ottawa that studies have been made of the feasibility of building a railway link into the Yukon from B.C.

The spokesman, who said results of the study are expected to be released in mid-July, said routes connecting with PGE tracks or Canadian National Railways lines are being studied.

•

The PGE has mapped out three possible routes to the Yukon but Bennett said no extension will be built while the Yukon remains a separate jurisdiction.

"We won't go beyond our provincial boundaries ever," said the premier, who has on several occasions offered to extend PGE service north if B.C.'s boundaries are extended into northern Canada.

A CNR route could go from Terrace on the CNR's Prince George - Prince Rupert line, the Ottawa spokesman said.

"That would be wonderful," said Bennett.

Rhodesia to Declare Republic by Nov. 11

By ANTHONY WHITE

SALISBURY (Reuters) — Premier Ian Smith indicated today Rhodesia might declare itself a republic Nov. 11, the fourth anniversary of its unilateral declaration of independence from Britain.

During a news conference today after a landslide government victory in a referendum on a new apartheid-style republican constitution, Smith was asked whether he actually would take the next step of declaring a republic.

"We've not decided yet," he replied.

But, when pressed on whether the date for such a declaration could be Nov. 11, he said: "I find it difficult to find anything wrong with that date."

Smith spoke as voting results by the white-dominated electorate were still coming from remote rural areas.

But the steamroller victory for Smith was long since certain. By early today he had won a 73 per cent "Yes" vote for his proposals for a new apartheid-style constitution for Rhodesia and a massive 81.6-per-cent vote in favor of the declaration of a republic.

Final results from 10 constituencies were likely to increase the margin, observers said.

Smith told the packed news conference he saw no prospect of renewed discussions with Britain before Rhodesia introduces its new republican constitution.

"I don't see this at all," he said. "The British minister responsible for Rhodesian affairs has said that if Rhodesia voted 'Yes' in the referendum, he would not speak to me again in his life.

"I'm not optimistic," he said. "They (the British) have put themselves in a corner that's very difficult to get out of."

Smith, smiling broadly and obviously delighted with what amounted to a tremendous personal triumph, told the news conference: "I was hoping for a strong majority as a message from Rhodesia for the outside world. I hope the message will have some effect on outside opinion."

But the prime minister was making no estimate about how soon a Rhodesian republic would win recognition from the rest of the world.

"It is difficult to say how long it will take before the message gets through," Smith said. "But it will be sooner than if we had sat in the middle and done nothing. Whether it is one year or five years—this is looking into the future."

The constitution provides that the country's 4,000,000 black Africans would forever remain politically subordinate to the 230,000 whites. It also provides to divide all the land in Rhodesia, with half going to the whites and half to the blacks.

It contains the structural framework for a legislature made up of a head of state, a senate and an assembly and provides for a gradual slow increase in the number of African members in the assembly—but never to the point where Africans would attain a majority.

Looking ahead to the government's next moves, Smith speculated on a possible general election by the end of the year.

DARLING

$694,000 Target For United Appeal

The Greater Victoria United Appeal campaign this year is looking at a target of $694,000.

The figure, which is a six per cent increase over the 1968 goal of $655,000, was announced at a meeting of the Community Chest board of directors Friday.

Last year's appeal ended five per cent short of its objective, so reaching the objective this year will require Victorians to contribute an extra $74,000 to the campaign.

Campaign chairman Peter Darling said the 1969 goal was established after $150,000 had been trimmed off the original budget estimates of the agency.

It is now at a "level we think the public will meet," he said.

Darling pointed out the agencies "spend three dollars for every one picked up by the United Appeal."

Most agencies are getting close to the same amount this year as last, he said, with the exception of the Pearkes clinic for the handicapped which is getting a bigger allowance because it has just opened and needs money for initial operations.

Darling said the campaign objective, which volunteers will try to collect during September and October, could be reached three times over if everyone in the city contributed his fair share.

The fair share for a salaried person is an hour's pay per month. For a professional man, it is one per cent of earnings.

Darling said he is "optimistic" about reaching this year's goal.

Chlorine Gas Mishap Sends 12 to Hospital

VANCOUVER (CP)—A dozen persons were taken to hospital—and six remained for observation—after chlorine gas leaked Friday night from a one-ton cylinder that fell from a forklift.

The six-foot cylinder, being removed from a truck, fell into a safety net but carried the net into the water of Vancouver harbor. The top of the cylinder broke and fumes spread.

Four firemen, four dock workers and two ambulance drivers were overcome by fumes. So were a woman and her young son, who were driving through the waterfront area in a car.

Loopholes Found In Human Rights Act

The new Human Rights Act which Attorney-General Leslie Peterson says will remove the "last vestiges of discrimination in British Columbia" appears to have a few loopholes.

The Act, which went into effect Monday, does not apply to civil servants.

Peterson admitted it also does not apply in the hiring of domestic help. In other words, color can be specified when advertising for a cleaning lady.

It does not apply to social clubs who can bar members on a religious or racial basis.

"Some provisions do not apply," said Peterson.

He said Friday that civil servants are not covered by the act and that there was no need for them to be covered.

NO DISCRIMINATION

"There will be no discrimination of that sort as long as I'm here," he said.

"There are people of all races and creeds working in the civil service. The government will not tolerate discrimination."

Peterson said B.C. ferries require employees to be Canadian citizens or British subjects but argued that this was not discrimination against Italian, Irish and other nationalities.

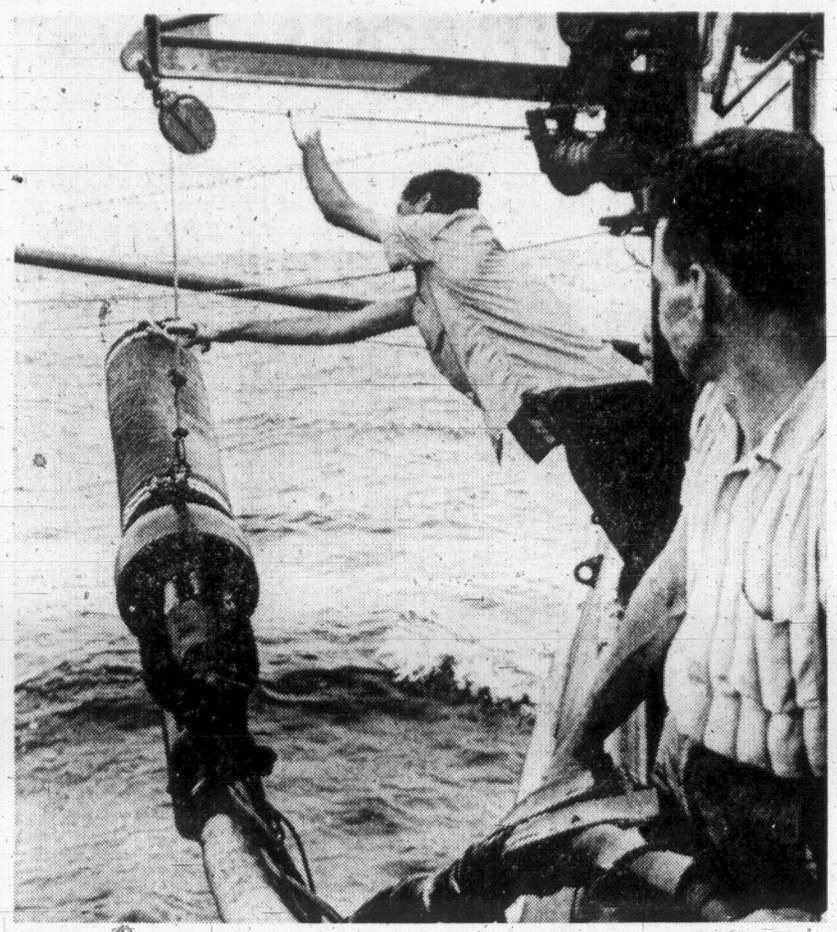

He said citizenship was a common requirement for government personnel. "You have to be a Canadian citizen to be a member of Parliament," he pointed out.

The new act consolidates and enlarges on three other acts and sets up a Human Rights Commission under director Jack Sherlock.

Selective Lending Only

TORONTO (CP) — Want a loan to buy 100 shares on margin of a high-flying stock? Or a second-hand car you don't need desperately?

Perhaps you're looking for a low-interest loan to lump your debts and pay back some higher-interest finance company borrowing.

Chances are you won't get one for any of these purposes, or a similar one, from any Canadian chartered bank these days, although your chances would have been good even a few weeks ago.

"We're not turning down any special class of borrtwer," said a Toronto-Dominion Bank spokesman Friday. "But we're being more selective in who we lend to. A fellow who wants a loan to play the market these days is out of luck."

As the biggest lenders in the land, banks are primarily responsible if credit gets out of hand.

To stem the credit flow the Bank of Canada this month raised the chartered banks' secondary reserve ratio—the amount of easily-converted short-term paper they hold—to a minimum eight per cent of dollar deposits from seven per cent. This takes about $169,000,000 out of circulation for loans.

If the small-loan customer is not being turned down point-blank, he is not being pulled in the door to borrow as he once was.

A few weeks ago the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce withdrew its "red convertible loan" posters from most branches.

Forced Savings Loom

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — William McChesney Martin, chairman of the United States Federal Reserve Board, Friday warned that if the U.S. does not adopt stiffer fiscal discipline against inflation, it may have to exact forced savings to pay the government's bills.

The most outspoken U.S. apostle of a sound currency and fiscal responsibility issued his warning to the closing session of the American Bankers Association monetary conference.

He said he was not predicting collapse of the U.S. economy, but he insisted on the need for an even slower pace than foreseen by President Nixon's policies.

"If we get inflation as a way of life, we may get government moves toward forced savings," he said. "These are fighting words."

WEEK ON MARKETS

Worst Is Yet to Come

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The big June slump continued on Canadian stock markets this week and with no sign of a break in sight, many experts are painting a gloomy picture — for at least the immediate future.

Markets have fallen every trading session in June — 14 days — except one.

And the worst is yet to come, according to many experts.

They noted that an increase in trading volume Friday could be the beginning of a major sell-off.

Unless some positive news comes — and quickly — Canadian and American markets could be in for a serious setback.

Tight money, high interest rates and increasing inflation originating in the United States touched off the slump.

Since Canadian markets traditionally follow those in the United States, the U.S. economy looms large in the future of both markets.

And the outlook for U.S. economy looks very gloomy.

FUTURE LOOKS DARK

William Martin, U.S. Federal Reserve Board chairman, Friday predicted "much pain and suffering" before the currrent wave of inflation ends.

One of the larger American banks said it has taken "drastic steps" to discourage borrowing.

A private economist in the U.S. forecast a spread of monetary and fiscal restraints from financial markets to the basic consumer level of economy.

In Canada, many companies are cutting back or postponing planned expansion programs, unable or unwilling to pay the high interest rates for the needed capital.

Lack of expansion undoubtedly will depress corporate earnings, the main guide of public investment.

Some banks are refusing loans — individual and corporate — to new customers.

Interest rates are expected to be increased again.

And if this happens the noose, already tight on money, will be tightened even more.

RECOVERY POSSIBLE

But there is still hope by many that both economy and stock markets will pull out of their slumps.

Canadian and American governments are both battling inflation with large-scale attacks.

Any encouraging news such as a U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam could send markets on a long-term rally.

On index at Toronto, industrials fell 5.40 to 178.35, golds 11.40 to 230.39, base metals 4.82 to 106.93 and Western oils 21.26 to 255.27. Volume was 15,883,000 shares compared with 23,465,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 699 to 163.

On the Canadian Montreal exchanges, the composite index fell 1.96 to 177.45. Combined volume was 4,702,000 shares compared with 6,219,000 last week. Losses outnumbered advances 287 to 69.

No Good News On Wall Street

By PHILIP GREER

NEW YORK (WP) — There wasn't any good news for Wall Street this week. Stock prices fell sharply to new lows for the year, a presidential news conference went by without any help on the vital interest rate front and periodic trading rallies quickly ran out of steam.

By the end of the week, the Dow Jones industrial average was down 18.68 points to 876.16. Only three of the 30 stocks in the average were able to buck the trend and post gains. The other 27 all lost ground with deficits ranging up to 4½ points in Alcoa.

Volume for the week slipped to 56.43 million shares from the 59.85 million turned over a week earlier. Turnover tended to pick up on the rallies, but the interest did not last long.

In the overall box score, declining stocks swamped advances by 1,344 to 279, a better reading than the 1,501 issues down and 160 up a week earlier. There were 11 new 1969 highs, down from 18, and 790 new lows, up from 721.

Tight money was the centre of attention, with troop withdrawals from Vietnam taking a decided second place. Worries over the supply—and the price—of credit were aggravated by speculation that another increase in the prime rate may be in the offing, although the current record 8½ per cent tag is less than two weeks old.

Some analysts expressed disappointment that President Nixon did not hammer in on the interest rate spiral in his Thursday news conference.

In the market, the selling swept through the list, taking in virtually all industry groups. In the latter part of the week, the recently-hot oils and gambling stocks came in for heavy liquidation.

Among the bigger losers in those groups, Natomas Co. dropped 22¾ points to 95⅜. Standard Oil of Ohio was down 4½ points to 100, Reading and Bates fell 9⅜ to 31⅞, Pacific Petroleums lost 4¼ to 32⅜ and Alantic-Richfield peeled off 13⅛ points to 109¾.

Atlantic announced a 1.5 million share secondary offering and the company was hit by a suit from Jersey Standard claiming it should be allowed to buy half the Arctic acreage Atlantic acquired in its recent merger with Sinclair Oil.

The large oils were also caught in the selling. Jersey gave up 1½ points to 78⅝, Standard of California lost 2¼ to 65¾, Texaco fell 2½ to 77⅞ and Mobil slid 2¼ to 62⅝.

Parvin Dohrmann led the gambling stocks down. Some members of Parvin's board, who are also owners of major league baseball teams, have agreed to sell their gambling interests and the stock tumbled 19 points to 86. Continental Connector shaved off 4¾ points to 61. Resorts International fell 4⅜ to 25⅛.

On the NYSE, Benguet Consolidated touched a new high early in the week, but fell back to a 3⅞-point loss at 24⅝ and dell webb lost 2⅜ to 17¼.

Arthur Mayse

One day this fall, if all continues well, a lively second-grader by the name of Florenda Joy Dick will present Royal Jubilee Hospital with a cheque for $3,810.33 on your behalf.

The sum will go toward the purchase of badly-needed heart-monitoring equipment. I expect the unit it helps provide will carry Florenda's name.

I can't think of a finer use for the surplus of the crash rescue fund you piled up to finance the heart surgery that has redeemed a child's life.

The surplus itself stands at $2,717.33 after final settlement that included the hefty United States discount on Canadian dollars. A couple of weeks ago, Mr. and Mrs. David Dick enriched the kitty by a cheque for $1092.60.

This, they explained, was the British Columbia government contribution to hospital care and surgery at Mayo Clinic that brought in bills for upwards of $4,000.

Meanwhile, Florenda is looking forward to her summer holidays with healthy enthusiasm.

She comes to her seventh birthday in July, a happy, pretty little girl to whom those grim days when her life hung in the balance are scarce more than fading dream.

For years past, the birds have shared the yield from our two cherry trees.

Our share last year totalled eight reasonably ripe Queen Annes, and four Byngs. The year before, the wild pigeons, robins, crows and lesser fowl left us precisely one pecked cherry.

We have tried to even this unequal balance in various ways.

We've put out water on the theory that the feathered friends were merely thirsty. They used the dish as a finger-bowl after each greedy feast.

Strips of silver foil? Scarecrow? The birds treated all such measures as attempts to amuse them. The trees down by the wildland edge, are too big to net. A friend who tried a bolder experiment told me the stuffed owl he mounted in his own boughs was promptly unstuffed by wrathful crows.

But this year, thanks to a secret weapon, we are getting our rightful portion of the fruit.

This is a compact little walkie-talkie set—a Fathers Day gift from my favorite fishing partner that should make pool-to-pool comunication a cinch.

For the last few days, we've been mounting one unit in a crotch of the close-together cherry trees.

Results of the first test was nothing less than spectacular.

A menacing "meow-w-w!" into the battery powered unit up at the house sent a pack of robins kiting from both trees in panic flight. A pair of crows took off at the next threat to their tail-feathers.

The cherries are ripening nicely now, and except for early-morning raiders, the birds are staying away in droves.

Pretty soon, I expect the smart crows will realize there's no cat attached to that voice from the trees. By that time, though, we hope to have harvested cherries galore!

From Sun River Press at Croton-on-Hudson in New York State, comes a zestful little paperback titled "Best Restaurants of Europe and Israel."

This could be useful to travellers, but perhaps we should put it to the test.

Let's see now . . . Here's Simpson's in the Strand, which is listed as "The chophouse for the kind of food that means 'England' to so many. Roast beef with Yorkshire pudding, delectable roast mutton. It is carved right at your table (you should tip the carver—a shilling is fine) and you cannot believe the quality of this meat! The prices are moderate, even for London; do not omit this place."

Will some travelled Victorian who has eaten at this restaurant be kind enough to report whether it deserves the above high rating?

And also if it doesn't?

"THE THINGS a fellow has to put up with," Sean Getson, 1½, of 2501 Wark, seems to be thinking. "I know, I know—be a gentleman, put up with feminine whims—but honestly, It's enough to put you off girls for life." Two-year-old Teresa Sager, 1109 Kings, is unperturbed—he wouldn't dare hit a lady. This skirmish in the battle of the sexes took place in a Central Park sandbox.

Officer Dragged By Fleeing Car

Youth 'Sort of Panicked'

Two taxi drivers and police combined forces early today to catch the young driver of a car that dragged an Esquimalt police constable for 70 feet along a central Esquimalt street.

Christopher Morgan, 21, of 979 Abbey, told Magistrate William Ostler in court today he "sort of panicked" when approached by Esquimalt Constable Gordon Jenkins outside a dance at the Esquimalt Sports Centre.

"I had an open case of beer in the car," he said.

When Jenkins opened the door to the car which contained five youths it sped away and the constable, his hand caught in the door, was dragged along.

Jenkins hooked his foot under the rear wheel and fell off the swerving car which then sped away on Lyall Street.

CALLED DISPATCHER

Taxi driver Frank Waelti, 279 Westdowne, witnessed the event and radioed his dispatcher.

A second taxi driver, Robert Davies, of 105 Island Highway, took up the 50-mile-an-hour chase and caught the fleeing car on Old Esquimalt Road.

"The taxi drivers did an admirable job," said Esquimalt police Sgt. Arthur Burton today.

In court, Morgan was fined $500 after pleading guilty to dangerous driving. He was also prohibited from driving on any highway in Canada for three years.

"You'd take a chance on killing a policeman rather than getting caught with a case of beer," Ostler told Morgan.

"I didn't know he was hooked in the door," Morgan replied. "I heard him yelling 'Stop,' but I didn't know I was dragging him."

Ostler said in a similar case in England recently the policeman was killed and the man convicted of murder.

"Does that interest you?" he asked.

Jenkins received cuts and bruises to his left hip. He was treated at hospital and released.

Anti-Cool And a Fool!

By BOB MITCHELL

Geza Benko doesn't like Cool-Aid, hippies or long hair.

He intends to apply to City Hall for a part-time job as town fool.

"Right now it's uncertain whether I will get the job, but I intend to go ahead with it.

"I would call it a spare-time job, just until the next mayor has been elected."

Mayor Hugh Stephen said today Benko took the proposal to him last week.

"I told him if he wanted to do this he should send a letter to committee."

The mayor asked that his other comments on Benko's idea be kept off the record.

★

Benko, a Hungarian immigrant in his late thirties, said during the next few months he intends to campaign on behalf of a certain candidate for mayor of Victoria—he isn't saying which one.

He doesn't expect any financial remuneration for his efforts, and intends to steer clear of any Canada Council grants, such as the one awarded last year to Vancouver's town fool, Joachim Foikis.

Benko recently sparked the short-loved "Freeze Cool-Aid" group which opposed municipal grants to help the youth-run organization help transient youths.

Benko confirmed he recently visited the Cool-Aid house at 953 Balmoral, disguised in sunglasses, wig and hippie-style clothes. He found the door locked and tried to get in with a ring of keys he found on the porch.

Cool-aid staff member Charles Ball finally unlocked the door. As Benko entered, the house he demanded to see Charles Barber, Victoria Youth Council organizer and main supporter of grants for Cool-Aid

★

When Benko was told Barber was not there, he left, saying he would return.

Ball later said:

"Not many of our kids have Hungarian accents and sound like they're 35. Besides, his own hair showed through his wig at the back."

Benko said his costume would be useful if he became town fool.

"I plan to use this type of disguise on different occasions to embarrass these people."

He said the "Freeze Cool-Aid" movement had failed because "it was turning into a debating society," and because the membership was opposed to running it secretly.

Today Benko was recovering from a motorcycle accident in which he injured his knee Friday. He said he would need a crutch "to get mobile again."

Skiers and Opponents On Collision Course

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Another confrontation between water skiers and their opponents over use of Elk Lake is shaping up for Monday night in the Saanich council chamber.

But while the two sides are expected to be out in force for a public hearing, the rezoning bylaw which they are concerned about will not be specifically dealt with.

Saanich has proposed a number of controls on water skiing, amounting to a tougher attitude towards motorized sports on Elk Lake, one of the most popular recreation areas in the region.

POLICE PERMITS

They include police permits for boats over 10 horsepower, protection of areas designated for swimming and the intake area for water supply to the Saanich Peninsula, specific course for water skiers to follow and penalties including impounding of speedboats on the first offence.

"We are expecting delegations from the ratepayers association, from water skiing associations and from water skiing enthusiasts as well at Monday night's public hearing," said Ald. William Noel, chairman of the parks and outdoor recreation committee.

Feeling has run high against power boats on Elk Lake since unidentified persons in a power boat gunned down a swan earlier this year, although Saanich was considering tighter rules before this incident.

IRRESPONSIBLE FEW

Residents near the lake have called for a ban on power boats, but water ski enthusiasts have been quick to reply that the actions of an irresponsible few should not result in a penalty against all.

Acting Mayor Ald. Leslie Passmore said Friday there will be a public discussion on the proposed changes but the bylaw itself won't be submitted.

"We will invite comments so we can get some idea of what the final bylaw should be," he said.

"We are looking further into the bylaw, reconsidering the wording, and would like to get opinions."

Houses Escape Blaze

A grass fire blazed over four acres of bush on Mount Tolmie Friday, threatening several Mayfair Drive homes.

The blaze, which started low on the Richmond Avenue side of the hill and was fanned by 30-mph winds, was extinguished by the Saanich fire department before it damaged any property. Fourteen firemen from four trucks spent more than three hours putting out the flames in the tinder-dry bush area, and mopping up.

Don Robbins, 3490 Mayfair Drive, said the fire was only about 15 feet from his house when firemen extinguished it.

"If my house had caught fire, probably three or four others nearby would have gone up too—mine is cedar siding, and tinder dry like everthing else up here," he said.

Robbins said a group of "willing volunteers" helped him move 80 per cent of his furniture out onto his front lawn when it seemed sure his house would burn.

ENTER SUMMER COOLLY

Summer arrived quietly at 6:55 this morning bringing cool, 65-degree temperatures and brisk westerly wind.

Today, the longest of the year with sunset at 9:19 p.m. was overcast and dismal. Clouds may disappear for a short time this evening.

The weather office prodicts rain for Sunday and a continuation of chilly weather for a few days at least.

Hours of daylight will decrease by about two minutes a day from now until Dec. 21, shortest day of the year.

Bet Shop Still Open Despite Police Moves

Victoria's off-track betting shop hasn't lost a day of business since its manager, Vern Geisler, was remanded without plea Thursday on a charge of keeping a common betting house.

The Victoria office of R. T. Enterprises and nine in Vancouver will remain open "unless the courts declare it illegal or until the federal government passes an amendment to the Criminal Code declaring this type of operation illegal," said the company's owner, Bill Wosk of Vancouver.

$100 BAIL

Wosk is free on $100 bail and seven shop managers are out on bail of $50, after seven Vancouver betting shops wer raided Wednesday.

Charges include keeping a common betting house, bookmaking, and conspiracy to keep a common betting house.

Business — placing bets at Exhibition Park in Vancouver for a fee — is "below normal" since the raids, said Wosk.

Exam Theft Decision Next Week

It will be at least Monday, and possibly later, before a decision is reached on the fate of students involved in the theft of departmental exams from Esquimalt Senior Secondary.

District superintendent of schools A. J. Longmore said today the decision rests with the B.C. board of examiners, the provincial body responsible for exam makeup and security.

"What I have found out and what the school has found out has all been turned over to the board of examiners."

The exams went missing earlier this week. Officials close to the investigation carried out by the school and department of education said Friday they knew who was involved.

Copter Flips; Three Unhurt

A Victoria pilot and his two passengers were rescued uninjured Friday after their helicopter flipped over on landing near Chutanli Lake, 120 miles northwest of Quesnel.

RCMP flew in to rescue Rodger Mann of 10195 Resthaven and passengers Tom Garrish, 19, of Oliver, and Duncan McCulloch, 19, of North Vancouver, after a B.C. Forest Service aircraft spotted the Vancouver Island Helicopters Ltd. craft.

Welfare March Heads to Ottawa

Even "if it takes two months to get there," the Victoria Low Income Group plans to leave Monday for Ottawa to present a brief to Welfare Minister John Munro.

The delegation, representing old-age pensioners, welfare mothers and employable welfare recipients, will travel slowly, stopping in towns to appeal for funds to continue the next leg of the journey, said Walter Olszewski, group president.

Originally only three representatives planned to hitch-hike their way to Ottawa but when other interested welfare clients came forward and someone offered a car, the idea of a caravan was born.

"We were going to get hotel rooms for the old-age pensioners while the rest of us slept in tents along the way but when I asked one pensioner he said, 'No sir, I'd enjoy sleeping in a tent,'" said Olszewski.

HOPES TO GET MORE

He explained that the caravan hopes to pick up more welfare people as they go along to present a good-sized pressure group the time it reaches Ottawa.

Demands in the brief include: Pressure on the provincial government to pay medical costs for pensioners and low income patients; uniform welfare rates across the country; legal action against allegedly negative and abusive attitudes of welfare workers; end to discrimination of welfare clients in area of housing; and free university education for welfare children with ability.

Everybody's An Esquimalt Buccaneer

Every kid in Esquimalt must have turned out for the Buccaneer Day parade through the municipality this morning.

Ever second kid was in it.

Pirates, bunnies, bees, majorettes and a host of other little animals pranced up and down Esquimalt Road hanging off floats or running along beside them.

A salmon barbecue, baseball game, lacrosse tournament, garden club flower show, and golden age tea were planned for this afternoon.

An adult dance begins in the Esquimalt Sports Centre curling rink at 9 p.m. following a variety show.

OLD WEST excitement with the added flavor of a Roman coliseum is the order of the day Saturday, June 28, at 2 p.m. at the Saanichton Fair Grounds. In the first show of its kind ever to come to Victoria, chuck-wagons and chariots will race around the fair grounds course between other more traditional horse events. Volunteers are now lengthening the horse area at the fair grounds to accommodate wagons and chariots.

ISLAND ROUNDUP

New Attack in Air On Mosquito Plague

Aerial and ground spraying may begin next week in an attempt to rid the Crofton-Westholme area of a mosquito plague.

North Cowichan municipality stopped free issue of the pesticide Malathion to residents Thursday, when health inspector Douglas Roe said use of the spray may be harmful to humans and domestic animals.

Municipal clerk A. Vande Casteyen said the mosquito problem has not increased since the spraying stopped. But an entomologist said, while poison was still being used, it was the worst infestation he had ever seen.

The new attack will be on breeding areas, he said.

The infestation had affected lumber work this week. Longshoremen complained that the insects made it difficult for them to unload lumber at Crofton Wharf.

The pulp mill at Crofton has been issuing insect repellant to workers, and in the wharf area, diesel oil was spread over water to cut down the number of mosquitos.

NORTH COWICHAN — Cowichan school district ratepayers living in North Cowichan will elect a school trustee today to fill a vacancy left by the recent retirement of Jack Efford.

David Roy Haywood, an employment supervisor at Crofton pulp mill, and Fred Zantvoort, a stockbroker, are candidates.

Polling stations are located at North Cowichan municipal hall, Southend fire hall and Maple Bay elementary school.

★ ★ ★

DUNCAN — Assorted municipal officials and 115 school patrols gave a noisy good-bye Friday to RCMP Cpl. Colin Smith of the RCMP.

Smith, head of the highway patrol at Duncan, has been in charge of junior safety patrols for seven years. He will leave for his new post in Terrace next week.

At the going-away assembly in Duncan elementary school, Smith praised the patrols for a 20-year, accident-free record.

West Coast Summer Ship Starts Early

Extra service to the west coast of Vancouver Island via motor ship begins a week early this year to accommodate Dominion Day vacationers.

Alberni Marine Transportation Ltd. said its vessel Lady Rose will inaugurate summer excursion service Sunday, June 29, augmenting the regular Port Alberni-Bamfield schedule to provide a total of three trips per week during July and August.

The vessel will leave Port Alberni an hour later than usual, at 9 a.m., arriving at Bamfield at noon and returning at 7 p.m. each Sunday.

The company said that since many holidayers would have a long weekend prior to the Dominion Day holiday Tuesday, the ship would start its Sunday service early to accommodate them.

Masons Name Grand Master

Elected Grand Master of the B.C. Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Wallace McRae of Vancouver Friday succeeded retiring Grand Master James Simpson Hogg of 4365 Shelbourne.

More than 850 Masons from all over B.C., delegates to the 98th Annual Communication, attended the installation on the last day of the three-day conference of the Empress Hotel.

Administrator Appointed

A Victoria-based civil servant has been appointed an administrator of an instant town 400 miles north of Vancouver.

Ian Laidlaw Dodds, administrative assistant to Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, was appointed a member of the two-man council of the district of Houston, in an order-in-council handed down today.

He replaces Charles Sullivan, a resident of the Bulkley Valley area. His appointment will be effective until 1973, when elections will be held.

Houston is planned as the centre of a $100,000,000 forest products complex to be built by Bulkley Valley Pulp and Timber Ltd.

Delegates Vote Amid Tensions

(Times News Services)

QUEBEC — More than 5,000 activists from labor and extremist separatist groups marched today on the sessions in which Quebec's ruling Union Nationale Party is voting to choose a leader.

The march, culminating a series of firebombings, arsons and threats, has heightened the tension surrounding the race for leadership between pro-federalist interim premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand and his nationalistic education minister, Jean-Guy Cardinal.

Friday campaigning hit fever pitch with keynote speeches from all three candidates delivered to chanting, cheering delegates.

FIGHTS FOLLOW TAUNTS

QUEBEC (CP — Pro-separatist Robert Charlebois, Quebec's temperamental No. 1 pop singer, stalked off the stage at Union Nationale party gathering early today crying, "Vive les Anglais!"

Fist fights broke out after he walked out on several hundred young supporters of Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal.

Charlebois, whose temper tantrums are legendary, began his electronic rock show by taunting the Cardinal campaigners gathered at Laval University:

"I haven't come here to sing for Jean-Guy Cardinal," he said. "Not at all; I may sing a bit for Rene Levesque."

Charlebois provoked the French-speaking audience by speaking English before and between the two popular songs he sang.

Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand said he is ready to propose a presidential system of government for Quebec in a referendum.

Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal called for strong, efficient and authoritative government for the province.

Andre Leveille, a member of the national assembly from Montreal-Maisonneuve, said confidence had to be restored in Quebec to end the impression in the rest of Canada that the province "is about to explode before them" at any time.

Thirty minutes after it was all over police received a telephone bomb threat and evacuated hundreds of straggling delegates, television and radio personnel and newspaper reporters from the 10,000-seat Quebec Coliseum.

There was no bomb and the arena was reopened by 11:33 p.m.

Premier Bertrand pledged to the delegates that if retained as party and government leader a presidential system of government in the province would be established "if the people want it."

KEY TO FUTURE

He has already said that referendum legislation will be brought before the national assembly this fall. In his convention address he did not detail how the presidential system would function in the Canadian context, but he made it a key point in his vision of "the new Quebec."

Mr. Bertrand's proposal was echoed immediately after by his education minister, last of the three candidates to speak and main challenger to Mr. Bertrand to become the successor to the late premier Daniel Johnson.

Mr. Bertrand, who celebrated his 53rd birthday Friday with the help of his placard-waving supporters, has been interim party leader since Mr. Johnson's death last September.

Mr. Cardinal, 44-year-old former law dean at the University of Montreal, drew a noisy burst of applause when he also told the delegates:

"We need to modernize Quebec's parliament."

He criticized the present sys-

JUMPIN JOSEPH WINS 110th QUEEN'S PLATE

TORONTO (CP) — The favored Jumpin Joseph won the 110th running of the Queen's Plate today with a 2½-length victory over Fanfaron.

Jumpin Joseph, owned by Warren Beasley of Toronto ridden by Avelino Gomez, covered the 1-¼ mile distance in 2:04.2 in beating 13 other Canadian-bred three-year-olds.

Fire'n Desire was third. Gomez, Canada's leading rider for many years, became the first jockey in history to win four Queen's Plates.

The winner paid $4.10, $3.20 and $2.50; Fanfaron paid $6.50 and $3.90, and Fire 'n' Desire, $3.

BENNETT USES PGE AS LURE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Premier Bennett said Friday the provincially-owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway will not be extended into the Yukon unless the Yukon answers his call to join British Columbia.

His comment came after a federal transport department spokesman said in Ottawa that studies have been made of the feasibility of building a railway link into the Yukon from B.C.

The spokesman, who said results of the study are expected to be released in mid-July, said routes connecting with PGE tracks or Canadian National Railways lines are being studied.

●

The PGE has mapped out three possible routes to the Yukon but Bennett said no extension will be built while the Yukon remains a separate jurisdiction.

"We won't go beyond our provincial boundaries ever," said the premier, who has on several occasions offered to extend PGE service north if B.C.'s boundaries are extended into northern Canada.

A CNR route could go from Terrace on the CNR's Prince George - Prince Rupert line, the Ottawa spokesman said.

"That would be wonderful," said Bennett.

Rhodesia to Declare Republic by Nov. 11

By ANTHONY WHITE

SALISBURY (Reuters) — Premier Ian Smith indicated today Rhodesia might declare itself a republic Nov. 11, the fourth anniversary of its unilateral declaration of independence from Britain.

During a news conference today after a landslide government victory in a referendum on a new apartheid-style republican constitution, Smith was asked whether he actually would take the next step of declaring a republic.

"We've not decided yet," he replied.

But, when pressed on whether the date for such a declaration could be Nov. 11, he said: "I find it difficult to find anything wrong with that date."

Smith spoke as voting results by the white-dominated electorate were still coming from remote rural areas.

But the steamroller victory for Smith was long since certain. By early today he had won a 73 per cent "Yes" vote for his proposals for a new apartheid-style constitution for Rhodesia and a massive 81.6-per-cent vote in favor of the declaration of a republic.

Final results from 10 constituencies were likely to increase the margin, observers said.

Smith told the packed news conference he saw no prospect of renewed discussions with Britain before Rhodesia introduces its new republican constitution.

"I don't see this at all," he said. "The British minister responsible for Rhodesian affairs has said that if Rhodesia voted 'Yes' in the referendum, he would not speak to me again in his life.

"I'm not optimistic," he said. "They (the British) have put themselves in a corner that's very difficult to get out of."

Smith, smiling broadly and obviously delighted with what amounted to a tremendous personal triumph, told the news conference: "I was hoping for a strong majority as a message from Rhodesia for the outside world. I hope the message will have some effect on outside opinion."

But the prime minister was making no estimate about how soon a Rhodesian republic would win recognition from the rest of the world.

"It is difficult to say how long it will take before the message gets through," Smith said. "But it will be sooner than if we had sat in the middle and done nothing. Whether it is one year or five years—this is looking into the future."

The constitution provides that the country's 4,000,000 black Africans would forever remain politically subordinate to the 230,000 whites. It also provides to divide all the land in Rhodesia, with half going to the whites and half to the blacks.

It contains the structural framework for a legislature made up of a head of state, a senate and an assembly and provides for a gradual slow increase in the number of African members in the assembly—but never to the point where Africans would attain a majority.

Looking ahead to the government's next moves, Smith speculated on a possible general election by the end of the year.

DARLING

$694,000 Target For United Appeal

The Greater Victoria United Appeal campaign this year is looking at a target of $694,000.

The figure, which is a six per cent increase over the 1968 goal of $655,000, was announced at a meeting of the Community Chest board of directors Friday.

Last year's appeal ended five per cent short of its objective, so reaching the objective this year will require Victorians to contribute an extra $74,000 to the campaign.

Campaign chairman Peter Darling said the 1969 goal was established after $150,000 had been trimmed off the original budget estimates of the agency.

It is now at a "level we think the public will meet," he said.

Darling pointed out the agencies "spend three dollars for every one picked up by the United Appeal."

Most agencies are getting close to the same amount this year as last, he said, with the exception of the Pearkes clinic for the handicapped which is getting a bigger allowance because it has just opened and needs money for initial operations.

Darling said the campaign objective, which volunteers will try to collect during September and October, could be reached three times over if everyone in the city contributed his fair share.

The fair share for a salaried person is an hour's pay per month. For a professional man, it is one per cent of earnings.

Darling said he is "optimistic" about reaching this year's goal.

Loopholes Found In Human Rights Act

The new Human Rights Act which Attorney-General Leslie Peterson says will remove the "last vestiges of discrimination in British Columbia" appears to have a few loopholes.

The Act, which went into effect Monday, does not apply to civil servants.

Peterson admitted it also does not apply in the hiring of domestic help. In other words, color can be specified when advertising for a cleaning lady.

It does not apply to social clubs who can bar members on a religious or racial basis.

"Some provisions do not apply," said Peterson.

He said Friday that civil servants are not covered by the act and that there was no need for them to be covered.

"There will be no discrimination of that sort as long as I'm here," he said.

"There are people of all races and creeds working in the civil service. The government will not tolerate discrimination."

Peterson said B.C. ferries require employees to be Canadian citizens or British subjects but argued that this was not discrimination against Italian, Irish and other nationalities.

He said citizenship was a common requirement for government personnel. "You have to be a Canadian citizen to be a member of Parliament," he pointed out.

The new Act consolidates and enlarges on three other acts and sets up a Human Rights Commission under director Jack Sherlock.

Chlorine Gas Mishap Sends 12 to Hospital

VANCOUVER (CP)—A dozen persons were taken to hospital—and six remained for observation—after chlorine gas leaked Friday night from a one-ton cylinder that fell from a forklift.

The six-foot cylinder, being removed from a truck, fell into a safety net but carried the net into the water of Vancouver harbor. The top of the cylinder broke and fumes spread.

Four firemen, four dock workers and two ambulance drivers were overcome by fumes. So were a woman and her young son, who were driving through the waterfront area in a car.

RA PROVES EGYPTIANS WENT FAR

CAIRO (AP) — Thor Heyerdahl, commander of the papyrus boat Ra, messaged the Egyptian minister of tourism, Mohamed Hafez Ghanem, today, telling him "Our voyage proved that ancient Egyptians travelled far from the Nile."

He told Ghanem: "Our boat crossed 2,000 kilometres (1,250 miles) in wild seas and this proves the ancient Egyptian boats could have sailed quite far from the Nile."

Heyerdahl told the minister his six-man crew is "in good condition." They left Safi, Morocco, May 26.

The Times carries reports direct from the Ra from time to time during the voyage.

Border 'Gestapo Tactics' Against Deserters Lashed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver lawyer Friday accused Canadian immigration officers of using "Gestapo tactics" to stop U.S. army deserters from entering Canada.

John Taylor, former Conservative MP, said he has handled about a dozen cases in the last month in which, he said, actions by immigration officers' have conflicted with stated government policy on deserters.

Deserters are not being treated like any other persons seeking entry, as stated last month by Immigration Minister Allan MacEachen, complained Mr. Taylor.

'LESSENS RESPECT'

Mr. Taylor said he is convinced that Canadian immigration officials are assisting Washington in apprehending deserters.

"This Gestapo arrangement lessens respect for Canadian officials." Mr. Taylor cited the case of Paul Cunningham, 20, of Berkley, Calif., who was taken into custody June 8 at a U.S. immigration office at Eastport, Idaho, after being turned back by a Canadian immigration officer at Kingsgate, in southeastern British Columbia.

Cunningham said in an interview that the Canadian officer on duty June 8 told him his application for entry would have to be approved by a senior officer and therefore he would have to return to the American side of the border until the next morning.

TURNED BACK

Back on the U.S. side, he was asked why he had been turned back from Canada, Cunningham said, and when he denied that he had been turned back, a U.S. official told him: "We just got a call and they (the Canadian office) said you were turned back."

At this point, Cunningham said, he produced false identification papers identifying him as a youth named Eddington, and American who, at the age of seven, was granted landed immigrant status.

TOURIST

He said he apparently convinced U.S. officials he was Eddington because they did not charge him with any offence. He was told to report to the sheriff's office in Bonner's Ferry, Idaho, but did not do so.

He said that three days later he entered Canada—as a tourist—at Blaine, Wash., 30 miles south of Vancouver.

Lyall Hawkins, regional director of immigration in Vancouver, defended the actions of the unidentified Canadian Kingsgate immigration officer. He said it was entirely up to the officer as to whether he informed the American side that Cunningham was a deserter.

The action would be justified, he said, if the officer felt the Americans would be wondering why the youth had not been allowed into Canada.

Hawkins said as far as he knows the Canadian officer "did not identify Cunningham as a deserter."

VICAR PRESIDES AT CHURCH PUB

SALISBURY, England (UPI)—It's beer drinking time these days down at St. Michael's Church. The vicar himself is doing the pouring.

St. Michael's has opened the first church drinking club in Britain and probably one of the few in the world—a $60,000 building that the Rev. William Rodda and his fold are "determined to make profitable."

To get it started, Rodda himself poured the first pint of beer Friday.

tem which, he said, permitted th Liberal Opopsition to make an electoral platform of the legislature at the expense of taxpayers.

And he accused the provincial civil service of having "bad habits which have to be changed."

"The time for speeches is over. We have to administer Quebec.

"We have to bring order into the civil service. They are not there to lead the government.

"We have to re-establish the authority of the government of Quebec."

Supoprters for both candidates had worked themselves up to a frenzied pitch in 2½ hours of shouting, chanting, marching and sign-waving demonstrations inside the coliseum before the candidates arrived to make their speeches.

Ten brass and drum bands blared steadily and the convention site was splashed with the red, white and blue colors of the Bertrand organization and the orange and blue of the Cardinal clan.

Mr. Bertrand was carried into the arena on the shoulders of cheering partisans.

After his address Bertrand hostesses raced through the crowd giving out birthday kits —with more noise-makers. Hundreds of delegates lit sparklers around the coliseum as symbolic birthday candles.

Mr. Cardinal added impetus to his campaign when he appeared with Mrs. Johnson, widow of the late premier, whose 22-year-old son has appeared frequently with the education minister.

WIDOW'S SUPPORT

In his speech, Mr. Cardinal said he wanted to continue the work begun by Mr. Johnson. In response, a weeping Mrs. Johnson rose among the cheering delegates and waved at the miister.

Mr. Leveille, 35, drew a scatterig of applause as he walked to the podium to start the speaking.

Jail Experience Frightful; Feared Sexual Attack: Boy

A 15-year-old boy revealed in central court Friday he was afraid of homosexual attacks during the week he spent in Wilkinson Road jail awaiting sentence.

The boy, a ward of the Children's Aid Society, had been charged on four counts of breaking and entering, and theft.

He told the court he was afraid to leave his cell because he was warned he would be assaulted if the opportunity presented itself.

He read the court a poem sent to him by another prisoner, and said his cell-mate for the week he spent there had acted as his protector from other prisoners.

Asked whether he had reported the threats to the guard, the youth said a request to speak to the probation officer had gone unanswered, and his cellmate had told the guards weren't interested in his problems.

OTHER MATTER

"I spoke to the guards on other matters, and they don't seem interested at all. They see it happen, too. I don't see how they can miss what the men there do to each other," the boy said of homosexual activity in the prison.

Magistrate William Ostler gave the youth a suspended sentence, and told him to post a $500 good behaviur bond for two years.

He called the youth a "sophisticated and experienced criminal," and said he had a long record in juvenile court.

He said sending the boy to Oakalla where he would be among older men would serve no useful purpose and would be harmful.

There is no provision for sending youths under 16 to young offenders' units.

"I am prepared to give you one chance in this adult court for probation," Ostler told him.

"You have had no respect for other people or their property, but are now very concerned about us respecting your person. If you ever come back here, you can expect prison."

VERNON (CP) — R. R. Meil, 44, a real estate salesman, Friday was selected Liberal candidate in North Okanagan for the next provincial election, defeating George Morris of Lumby, B.C. The seat now is held by Pat Jordan, minister without portfolio.

Bounced for Sex Book

MONTROSE, Iowa (AP) — A United Methodist Church minister who wrote a book about sex has been removed from the ministry, it was learned here.

Rev. Stephen Cree of Montrose asked permission to leave the ministry voluntarily but the church's annual conference voted instead to force him out.

In the book The New Act of Sex, Cree contends sexual relations in an era of dependable contraception are a "morally new and different act" to which biblical prohibitions against adultery do not necessarily apply.

"What is the new act of sex without procreation?" Cree wrote. "It can be a means of communication between two people of the opposite sex at the highest level'"

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

The Interior experienced some relief from the very dry weather as showers occurred in most areas Friday. Castlegar had the heaviest rainfall with a fall of 1½ inches last evening. At Vancouver the drought is now into its 23 day which is two days longer than the prolonged dry spell in May. However, the ridge of high pressure offshore has weakened and is no longer effectively blocking out the Pacific disturbances. A weak system will break through to the Charlottes early Sunday. This system will be accompanied by rain and the rain will spread southeastward down the coast threatening to end the dry spell in southwestern B.C.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Those of us who dwell in North America may become a bit smug when we think of the greater energy and efficiency we generate in our invigorating weather. Some of us may think we are more intelligent than those who dwell in hot climates, just because we tend to accomplish more the year around.

Ellsworth Huntington, the great climatologist of the early years of this century, warned his contemporaries at Yale University that the theory of efficiency due to better climate must not be stretched to cover brain power.

Huntington said that the ability to work with great efficiency in Connecticut had nothing much to do with the possession of inventive brains. Climate—or weather—stimulates brains, it does not provide more intelligence. Climates that promote efficiency in people merely help in developing their possibilities.

Extremists Near Convention Site

Delegates Vote Amid Tensions

(Times News Services)

QUEBEC — More than 5,000 activists from labor and extremist separatist groups marched today on the sessions in which Quebec's ruling Union Nationale Party is voting to choose a leader.

The march, culminating a series of firebombings, arsons and threats, has heightened the tension surrounding the race for leadership between pro-federalist interim premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand and his nationalistic education minister, Jean-Guy Cardinal.

Friday campaigning hit fever pitch with keynote speeches from all three candidates delivered to chanting, cheering delegates.

Those admitted to the convention floor were checked by security guards as a result of continued fears of violence.

•

Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand said he is ready to propose a presidential system of government for Quebec in a referendum.

Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal called for strong, efficient and authoritative government for the province.

Andre Leveille, a member of the national assembly from Montreal-Maisonneuve, said confidence had to be restored in Quebec to end the impression in the rest of Canada that the province "is about to explode before them" at any time.

Thirty minutes after it was all over police received a telephone bomb threat and evacuated hundreds of straggling delegates, television and radio personnel and newspaper reporters from the 10,000-seat Quebec Coliseum.

There was no bomb and the arena was reopened by 11:33 p.m.

Premier Bertrand pledged to the delegates that if retained as party and government leader a presidential system of government in the province would be established "if the people want it."

KEY TO FUTURE

He has already said that referendum legislation will be brought before the national assembly this fall. In his convention address he did not detail how the presidential system would function in the Canadian context, but he made it a key point in his vision of "the new Quebec."

Mr. Bertrand's proposal was echoed immediately after by his education minister, last of the three candidates to speak and main challenger to Mr. Bertrand to become the successor to the late premier Daniel Johnson.

Mr. Bertrand, who celebrated his 53rd birthday Friday with the help of his placard-waving supporters, has been interim party leader since Mr. Johnson's death last September.

Mr. Cardinal, 44-year-old former law dean at the University of Montreal, drew a noisy burst of applause when he also told the delegates:

"We need to modernize Quebec's parliament."

He criticized the present sys-

FIGHTS FOLLOW TAUNTS

QUEBEC (CP — Pro-separatist Robert Charlebois, Quebec's temperamental No. 1 pop singer, stalked off the stage at Union Nationale party gathering early today crying, "Vive les Anglais!"

Fist fights broke out after he walked out on several hundred young supporters of Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal.

Charlebois, whose temper tantrums are legendary, began his electronic rock show by taunting the Cardinal campaigners gathered at Laval University:

"I haven't come here to sing for Jean-Guy Cardinal," he said. "Not at all; I may sing a bit for Rene Levesque."

Charlebois provoked the French-speaking audience by speaking English before and between the two popular songs he sang.

JUMPIN JOSEPH WINS 110th QUEEN'S PLATE

TORONTO (CP) — The favored Jumpin Joseph won the 110th running of the Queen's Plate today with a 2½-length victory over Fanfaron.

Jumpin Joseph, owned by Warren Beasley of Toronto ridden by Avelino Gomez, covered the 1-¼ mile distance in 2:04.2 in beating 13 other Canadian-bred three-year-olds.

Fire'n Desire was third. Gomez, Canada's leading rider for many years, became the first jockey in history to win four Queen's Plates.

The winner paid $4.10, $3.20 and $2.50; Fanfaron paid $6.50 and $3.90, and Fire 'n' Desire, $3.

BENNETT USES PGE AS LURE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Premier Bennett said Friday the provincially-owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway will not be extended into the Yukon unless the Yukon answers his call to join British Columbia.

His comment came after a federal transport department spokesman said in Ottawa that studies have been made of the feasibility of building a railway link into the Yukon from B.C.

The spokesman, who said results of the study are expected to be released in mid-July, said routes connecting with PGE tracks or Canadian National Railways lines are being studied.

•

The PGE has mapped out three possible routes to the Yukon but Bennett said no extension will be built while the Yukon remains a separate jurisdiction.

"We won't go beyond our provincial boundaries ever," said the premier, who has on several occasions offered to extend PGE service north if B.C.'s boundaries are extended into northern Canada.

A CNR route could go from Terrace on the CNR's Prince George - Prince Rupert line, the Ottawa spokesman said.

"That would be wonderful," said Bennett.

Rhodesia to Declare Republic by Nov. 11

By ANTHONY WHITE

SALISBURY (Reuters) — Premier Ian Smith indicated today Rhodesia might declare itself a republic Nov. 11, the fourth anniversary of its unilateral declaration of independence from Britain.

During a news conference today after a landslide government victory in a referendum on a new apartheid-style republican constitution, Smith was asked whether he actually would take the next step of declaring a republic.

"We've not decided yet," he replied.

But, when pressed on whether the date for such a declaration could be Nov. 11, he said: "I find it difficult to find anything wrong with that date."

Smith spoke as voting results by the white-dominated electorate were still coming from remote rural areas.

But the steamroller victory for Smith was long since certain. By early today he had won a 73 per cent "Yes" vote for his proposals for a new apartheid-style constitution for Rhodesia and a massive 81.6-per-cent vote in favor of the declaration of a republic.

Final results from 10 constituencies were likely to increase the margin, observers said.

Smith told the packed news conference he saw no prospect of renewed discussions with Britain before Rhodesia introduces its new republican constitution.

"I don't see this at all," he said. "The British minister responsible for Rhodesian affairs has said that if Rhodesia voted 'Yes' in the referendum, he would not speak to me again in his life.

"I'm not optimistic," he said. "They (the British) have put themselves in a corner that's very difficult to get out of."

Smith, smiling broadly and obviously delighted with what amounted to a tremendous personal triumph, told the news conference: "I was hoping for a strong majority as a message from Rhodesia for the outside world. I hope the message will have some effect on outside opinion."

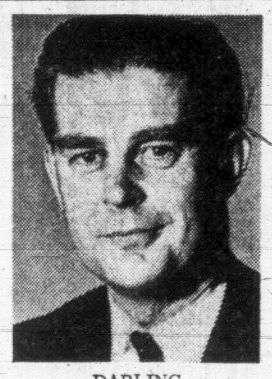

But the prime minister was making no estimate about how soon a Rhodesian republic would win recognition from the rest of the world.

"It is difficult to say how long it will take before the message gets through," Smith said. "But it will be sooner than if we had sat in the middle and done nothing. Whether it is one year or five years—this is looking into the future."

The constitution provides that the country's 4,000,000 black Africans would forever remain politically subordinate to the 230,000 whites. It also provides to divide all the land in Rhodesia, with half going to the whites and half to the blacks.

It contains the structural framework for a legislature made up of a head of state, a senate and an assembly and provides for a gradual slow increase in the number of African members in the assembly—but never to the point where Africans would attain a majority.

Looking ahead to the government's next moves, Smith speculated on a possible general election by the end of the year.

DARLING

$694,000 Target For United Appeal

The Greater Victoria United Appeal campaign this year is looking at a target of $694,000.

The figure, which is a six per cent increase over the 1968 goal of $655,000, was announced at a meeting of the Community Chest board of directors Friday.

Last year's appeal ended five per cent short of its objective, so reaching the objective this year will require Victorians to contribute an extra $74,000 to the campaign.

Campaign chairman Peter Darling said the 1969 goal was established after $150,000 had been trimmed off the original budget estimates of the agency.

It is now at a "level we think the public will meet," he said.

Darling pointed out the agencies "spend three dollars for every one picked up by the United Appeal."

Most agencies are getting close to the same amount this year as last, he said, with the exception of the Pearkes clinic for the handicapped which is getting a bigger allowance because it has just opened and needs money for initial operations.

Darling said the campaign objective, which volunteers will try to collect during September and October, could be reached three times over if everyone in the city contributed his fair share.

The fair share for a salaried person is an hour's pay per month. For a professional man, it is one per cent of earnings.

Darling said he is "optimistic" about reaching this year's goal.

Loopholes Found In Human Rights Act

The new Human Rights Act which Attorney-General Leslie Peterson says will remove the "last vestiges of discrimination in British Columbia" appears to have a few loopholes.

The Act, which went into effect Monday, does not apply to civil servants.

Peterson admitted it also does not apply in the hiring of domestic help. In other words, color can be specified when advertising for a cleaning lady.

It does not apply to social clubs who can bar members on a religious or racial basis.

"Some provisions do not apply," said Peterson.

He said Friday that civil servants are not covered by the act and that there was no need for them to be covered.

"There will be no discrimination of that sort as long as I'm here," he said.

"There are people of all races and creeds working in the civil service. The government will not tolerate discrimination."

Peterson said B.C. ferries require employees to be Canadian citizens or British subjects but argued that this was not discrimination against Italian, Irish and other nationalities.

He said citizenship was a common requirement for government personnel. "You have to be a Canadian citizen to be a member of Parliament," he pointed out.

The new Act consolidates and enlarges on three other acts and sets up a Human Rights Commission under director Jack Sherlock.

Chlorine Gas Mishap Sends 12 to Hospital

VANCOUVER (CP)—A dozen persons were taken to hospital—and six remained for observation—after chlorine gas leaked Friday night from a one-ton cylinder that fell from a forklift.

The six-foot cylinder, being removed from a truck, fell into a safety net but carried the net into the water of Vancouver harbor. The top of the cylinder broke and fumes spread.

Four firemen, four dock workers and two ambulance drivers were overcome by fumes. So were a woman and her young son, who were driving through the waterfront area in a car.

RA PROVES EGYPTIANS WENT FAR

CAIRO (AP) — Thor Heyerdahl, commander of the papyrus boat Ra, messaged the Egyptian minister of tourism, Mohamed Hafez Ghanem, today, telling him "Our voyage proved that ancient Egyptians travelled far from the Nile."

He told Ghanem: "Our boat crossed 2,000 kilometres (1,250 miles) in wild seas and this proves the ancient Egyptian boats could have sailed quite far from the Nile."

Heyerdahl told the minister his six-man crew is "in good condition." They left Safi, Morocco, May 26.

The Times carries reports direct from the Ra from time to time during the voyage.

Border 'Gestapo Tactics' Against Deserters Lashed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver lawyer Friday accused Canadian immigration officers of using "Gestapo tactics" to stop U.S. army deserters from entering Canada.

John Taylor, former Conservative MP, said he has handled about a dozen cases in the last month in which, he said, actions by immigration officers have conflicted with stated government policy on deserters.

Deserters are not being treated like any other persons seeking entry, as stated last month by Immigration Minister Allan MacEachen, complained Mr. Taylor.

'LESSENS RESPECT'

Mr. Taylor said he is convinced that Canadian immigration officials are assisting Washington in apprehending deserters.

"This Gestapo arrangement lessens respect for Canadian officials." Mr. Taylor cited the case of Paul Cunningham, 20, of Berkley, Calif., who was taken into custody June 8 at a U.S. immigration office at Eastport, Idaho, after being turned back by a Canadian immigration officer at Kingsgate, in southeastern British Columbia.

Cunningham said in an interview that the Canadian officer on duty June 8 told him his application for entry would have to be approved by a senior officer and therefore he would have to return to the American side of the border until the next morning.

TURNED BACK

Back on the U.S. side, he was asked why he had been turned back from Canada, Cunningham said, and when he denied that he had been turned back, a U.S. official told him: "We just got a call and they (the Canadian office) said you were turned back."

At this point, Cunningham said, he produced false identification papers identifying him as a youth named Eddington, and American who, at the age of seven, was granted landed immigrant status.

TOURIST

He said he apparently convinced U.S. officials he was Eddington because they did not charge him with any offence. He was told to report to the sheriff's office in Bonner's Ferry, Idaho, but did not do so.

He said that three days later he entered Canada—as a tourist—at Blaine, Wash., 30 miles south of Vancouver.

Lyall Hawkins, regional director of immigration in Vancouver, defended the actions of the unidentified Canadian Kingsgate immigration officer. He said it was entirely up to the officer as to whether he informed the American side that Cunningham was a deserter.

The action would be justified, he said, if the officer felt the Americans would be wondering why the youth had not been allowed into Canada.

Hawkins said as far as he knows the Canadian officer "did not identify Cunningham as a deserter."

VICAR PRESIDES AT CHURCH PUB

SALISBURY, England (UPI)—It's beer drinking time these days down at St. Michael's Church. The vicar himself is doing the pouring.

St. Michael's has opened the first church drinking club in Britain and probably one of the few in the world—a $60,000 building that the Rev. William Rodda and his fold are "determined to make profitable."

To get it started, Rodda himself poured the first pint of beer Friday.

. . . QUEBEC VOTE

tem which, he said, permitted th Liberal Opposition to make an electoral platform of the legislature at the expense of taxpayers.

And he accused the provincial civil service of having "bad habits which have to be changed."

"The time for speeches is over. We have to administer Quebec.

"We have to bring order into the civil service. They are not there to lead the government.

"We have to re-establish the authority of the government of Quebec."

Supoprters for both candidates had worked themselves up to a frenzied pitch in 2½ hours of shouting, chanting, marching and sign-waving demonstrations inside the coliseum before the candidates arrived to make their speeches.

Ten brass and drum bands blared steadily and the convention site was splashed with the red, white and blue colors of the Bertrand organization and the orange and blue of the Cardinal clan.

Mr. Bertrand was carried into the arena on the shoulders of cheering partisans.

After his address Bertrand hostesses raced through the crowd giving out birthday kits —with more noise-makers. Hundreds of delegates lit sparklers around the coliseum as symbolic birthday candles.

Mr. Cardinal added impetus to his campaign when he appeared with Mrs. Johnson, widow of the late premier, whose 22-year-old son has appeared frequently with the education minister.

WIDOW'S SUPPORT

In his speech, Mr. Cardinal said he wanted to continue the work begun by Mr. Johnson. In response, a weeping Mrs. Johnson rose among the cheering delegates and waved at the minister.

Mr. Leveille, 35, drew a scatterig of applause as he walked to the podium to start the speaking.

Jail Experience Frightful; Feared Sexual Attack: Boy

A 15-year-old boy revealed in central court Friday he was afraid of homosexual attacks during the week he spent in Wilkinson Road jail awaiting sentence.

The boy, a ward of the Children's Aid Society, had been charged on four counts of breaking and entering, and theft.

He told the court he was afraid to leave his cell because he was warned he would be assaulted if the opportunity presented itself.

He read the court a poem sent to him by another prisoner, and said his cell-mate for the week he spent there had acted as his protector from other prisoners.

Asked whether he had reported the threats to the guard, the youth said a request to speak to the probation officer had gone unanswered, and his cellmate had told the guards weren't interested in his problems.

OTHER MATTER

"I spoke to the guards on other matters, and they don't seem interested at all. They see it happen, too. I don't see how they can miss what the men there do to each other," the boy said of homosexual activity in the prison.

Magistrate William Ostler gave the youth a suspended sentence, and told him to post a $500 good behaviur bond for two years.

He called the youth a "sophisticated and experienced criminal," and said he had a long record in juvenile court.

He said sending the boy to Oakalla where he would be among older men would serve no useful purpose and would be harmful.

There is no provision for sending youths under 16 to young offenders' units.

"I am prepared to give you one chance in this adult court for probation," Ostler told him.

"You have had no respect for other people or their property, but are now very concerned about us respecting your person. If you ever come back here, you can expect prison."

Bounced for Sex Book

MONTROSE, Iowa (AP) — A United Methodist Church minister who wrote a book about sex has been removed from the ministry, it was learned here.

Rev. Stephen Cree of Montrose asked permission to leave the ministry voluntarily but the church's annual conference voted instead to force him out.

In the book The New Act of Sex, Cree contends sexual relations in an era of dependable contraception are a "morally new and different act" to which biblical prohibitions against adultery do not necessarily apply.

"What is the new act of sex without procreation?" Cree wrote. "It can be a means of communication between two people of the opposite sex at the highest level'"

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

The Interior experienced some relief from the very dry weather as showers occurred in most areas Friday. Castlegar had the heaviest rainfall with a fall of 1½ inches last evening. At Vancouver the drought is now into its 23 day which is two days longer than the prolonged dry spell in May. However, the ridge of high pressure offshore has weakened and is no longer effectively blocking out the Pacific disturbances. A weak system will break through to the Charlottes early Sunday. This system will be accompanied by rain and the rain will spread southeastward down the coast threatening to end the dry spell in southwestern B.C.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Those of us who dwell in North America may become a bit smug when we think of the greater energy and efficiency we generate in our invigorating weather. Some of us may think we are more intelligent than those who dwell in hot climates, just because we tend to accomplish more the year around.

Ellsworth Huntington, the great climatologist of the early years of this century, warned his contemporaries at Yale University that the theory of efficiency due to better climate must not be stretched to cover brain power.

Huntington said that the ability to work with great efficiency in Connecticut had nothing much to do with the possession of inventive brains. Climate—or weather—stimulates brains, it does not provide more intelligence. Climates that promote efficiency in people merely help in developing their possibilities.
